2. Aden, lies about 75 miles East from Moca, near the Coast, upon the Straits of Babelmandel. The Atlas Historique says, 'tis almost encompass'd by high Mountains, upon which there are five or six Forts, with Curtains, and other Works in great number in the Passes. The Water is very good, and brought by an Aqueduct to a great Canal, about a quarter of a League from the Town, from whence all the Inhabitants are very well furnish'd. The Walls of the Town are very sorry, but towards the Sea there are some Platforms at distances, with large Brass Guns, suppos'd to be the Remains of Solyman II's Artillery, when he conquer'd this Town, and most of the Country, which the Arabians have now recover'd. There is no way to the Town by Land but by a narrow Peninsula, at the head of which there are Corps de Guard from Space to Space; and about a Cannon-shot lower there's a Fort with forty Guns and several Batteries, and a Garison, so that there's no landing on that side; and betwixt the Town and this Fort, upon the way of Communication, there's another of twelve Guns, and a Garison. The Sea here, by which the Town is accessible, is a Bay of eight or nine Leagues round, divided into two Roads, the larger at a great distance from the Town, but the lesser nearer, and is call'd the Port. 'Tis about a League round from the Citadel, which commands it, with fifty Guns, to the Isthmus, with the Forts above-mention'd. Ships ride here from 18 to 20 Fathom deep. The Town is very large, and there are still many fine Houses of two Stories high with Terrasses, but many others in Ruins. The advantageous Situation, and the Remains of the Town, shew it to have been one of the most famous Cities, and the chief Bulwark of Arabia Felix. The Nubian Geographer says, in his time 'twas the Center of Trade betwixt the East and West. The Turks took it by Treachery in 1538. hang'd the King of the Place, as they did him of Zibit, which they took at the same time. They made this Town the Seat of a Beglerbey, but the Arabians revolted, and are now under the Protection of the King of Yemen. The adjacent Territory is very pleasant and verdant, at the foot of the Hills, but narrow.

3. Senaa is reckon'd the principal Town of this Kingdom, lies in Lat. 15. and Long. 47. about 115 miles North East from Aden, near the Head of a River, which falls into the Straits of Babelmandel. The Atlas Historique thinks, that no European Geographer has ever seen it; but according to Abulfeda, a famous Arabian Geographer, it resembled Damascus for plenty of good Water and pleasant Gardens. He adds, that it must have noble Remains of Antiquity, because long before Mahomet it was the Capital of Arabia Felix, and the Residence of powerful Princes, who had a stately Palace built on a Hill in the middle of the Town. The Christians of this Country being oppress'd by the Arabs, invited the King of Æthiopia to their Assistance, who built a magnificent Temple, on the same Hill where the Palace stood, to divert the Arabians from their Superstition and Idolatry; but the Ethiopians did not long retain their Conquest. The Eastern Writers, who give this Account, say, the Town is very antient, rich, and populous; that their Trade is more in Silver than in Goods, and the Walls so broad, that eight Horses may march upon them in Front. The Air here is very temperate, and the Days and Nights are almost of an equal Length.

4. Bethelfaguy. 'Tis not in our Maps, but the Atlas Historique says, it is 35 Leagues, or 105 miles from Moca towards the North, and 30 miles East from the Red Sea. 'Tis larger than Moca, and under the same Governour, who has a Deputy here. It has fine Mosques, with lofty white Towers. The Houses are of Brick, two Stories high, and have Terrasses. The Town is not wall'd, but within Musquet-shot there's a good old Castle, with a deep Well, from whence the Water is drawn up by a Camel, and smoaking hot; but after it has been drawn a night, it grows very cool and fresh. Here's a great Market for Coffee, which consists of two large Courts with cover'd Galleries. There grow great Quantities of Coffee on a Mountain at three Leagues distance. The Arabian Peasants bring it to Town upon Camels, in large Sacks made of Mat, and each Camel carries two. The Merchants of Egypt and Turkey come hither to buy it, and carry it from hence on Camels to a little Port on the Red Sea, at thirty miles distance,

distance, where 'tis embark'd for Jodda, the Port of Mecca, and sent from thence in smaller Vessels to Suez, at the end of the Red Sea; and from thence it is carry'd on Camels to Egypt, and other Places of the Turkish Empire by different Caravans, or by the way of the Mediterranean. The Banians are the Factors here, and throughout all Arabia, to which place they come young from the Indies. Some of them are very rich Merchants, others apply themselves to weigh Gold and Silver, and to most other Employments. They are reckon'd the best Arithmeticians in the World, for in a trice they'll draw an exact Account, by four or five Characters on the Nail of their Thumbs, but are much given to cheating. In the middle of the Market there's a Divan or Sofa four foot high, cover'd with Tapestry, where the Officers of the Customs, and sometimes the Governour himself, sees the Coffee weigh'd, and an Account kept of the Weight and Price in order to settle the Duty. The Seller pays a Penny for every Piaster of the Price he sells it at, which is always for ready Money, because the Arabian Peasants give no Credit. They take only Pieces of Eight of Mexico, but won't receive those of Peru or Seville, because the Portuguese mix'd Counterfeits with those Species. The Market is kept here every day in the Week but Fridays.

The Arabians have a particular way of making Coffee, quite different from ours, and much better. They don't make it of the Berry, but only of the Husk and fine Rind, which cover them. With this they mix no Sugar, because it is not bitter, but on the contrary of a pleasant mild sweet Taste. This can't be well made except on the Place where the Berries grow, because the Rind has not Substance enough for Transportation, being so thin, that it would speedily dry up to nothing. Here our Author corrects a Mistake of Mr. Ray, our famous Herbalist, and other noted Authors, who were inform'd, that the Arabians suffer no Berries to be transported till boil'd, so as the Germ may die, and not be capable of growing, if planted any where else. The contrary is now very well known, for Merchants transport it many times with its Husks, and double Bark or Rind, without any such Alteration. Besides, the Dutch have sow'd and replanted it at Batavia, but without Success, because the Climate is too hot; and the English have done the like at Fort St. George, with as little Success: some of them also have been planted, and grow at Amsterdam and at Paris, as Rarities; so that 'tis highly improbable that they will answer the End any where else but in Arabia.

Here 'tis proper to give a Description of the Coffee-Tree and its Fruit, from the same Author. It rises from six to twelve foot high, the Trunk is from ten to fifteen Inches round. When it comes to Maturity, it looks like our Apple-Trees of eight or ten years Growth. The lower Branches, when it grows old, bend downward, and form a sort of Umbrella. The Wood is so pliable, that the longest Branches may be bow'd almost to the Ground. The Bark is whitish, and something rugged; the Leaves are much like those of the Citron-Tree, but of a deeper green, and not so pointed or thick. The Tree is always green, and never loses all its Leaves at a time. They grow two by two, opposite to one another, and at a middling distance. At all Seasons of the Year it has Flowers and Fruit, some green, and others ripe; the Flowers are white, and very much like those of Jessamine, have five little short Leaves, an agreeable Smell, and are something balsamick, tho bitter to the Taste. They grow at the bottom of the Leaves, where they join to the Branches. When the Flowers fall, they leave a little Fruit green at first, which reddens as it ripens, pretty much like a large Cherry. 'Tis good to eat, very nourishing and cooling. Within this Fruit is the Grain we call the Berry, cover'd with a very fine Skin. The Berry is then very tender, and disagreeable to the Taste; but as the Cherry ripens, the Berry within grows hard, and the Sun drying up the red Fruit, it becomes a Husk of a brown Colour, which is the outward Bark. Then the Berry becomes solid, and of a clear green. It swims in a sort of a brown thick Liquor, extremely bitter. The Husk, which is fasten'd to the Tree with a short Tail, is a little bigger than the Grain of Lawrel; and each Husk has only one Bean, which divides it self usually into two Parts. The fine Rind is the inner Bark. The Trees come from the Fruit, and its Husk sow'd or planted when perfectly ripe, and are dispos'd of in Nurseries, to be transplanted as Occasion requires. The Foots of Mountains, or little Hills, in shady moist Places, are best for planting them. Their chief Cultivation consists in deriving little Streams of Water round the Root of the Tree. When the Arabians transplant them, they make a Ditch of three foot wide and five deep, and fill it with Flint-Stones, that the Water may enter the deeper, and keep the fresher. The Season when the Arabs gather most is in May, and there are two other Seasons, but not fix'd. When they gather them, they spread Cloths under the Trees, which they shake, put the Fruit into Sacks, lay them upon Mats to dry in the Sun for some time, and draw Rollers of Iron or heavy Wood over the Husks to open them. Then they lay the Berries to dry in the Sun, after which they sift them, to separate the Dry from the Green.

There are several other Provinces, and some call'd Kingdoms in this Country, as may be seen in the Maps, of which we have no Description. The most remarkable of what remains is the Province of Oman, in the South-East Corner of the Country, and upon the Bay of Ormus. Some reckon it the largest Province of Arabia Felix, but it does not appear so by our Maps. The South Coast is very barren, as far as Cape Rozalgate, at the Mouth of the Gulph of Ormus; but from thence to Cape Mocandon, where the Gulph is straitest, is reckon'd one of the most fruitful Parts of Arabia. The Isles of Sohar, North of Cape Rozalgate, were, in the time of the Nubian Geographer, the chief Places of Trade in the East, till the Commerce was transfer'd to Ormus, on the Persian side of the Gulph.

Mascala, or Mascahat, near the Coast, Lat. 23. Long. 59. is said to be a Place of considerable Trade, lies at the foot of a Mountain, and has three Rocks at the Mouth of the Harbour, which makes its Access difficult. 'Twas formerly in the hands of the Portuguese, and yielded them a great Revenue. This is suppos'd to be the Place from whence Ships set out antiently from Arabia to China.

El Catif, which lies on the West-side of the Persian Gulph, belongs to the Persian Empire; to the Description of which we refer it.

We have nothing more to add to Arabia, but that Mahomet, who was born here, laid the Foundation of his false Religion and tyrannical Government at Mecca and Medina. Dr. Prideaux, Dean of Norwich, has given the best Account of his Life of any yet publish'd; and for his Religion, we refer to the Alcoran.

PERSIA,

HAS Turkey in Asia, and Arabia, on the West; part of Tartary, and of the Mogul's Empire, on the East; part of Circassia, the Caspian Sea, and of Tartary on the North; and the Arabian Gulph, and part of the Persian on the South. It lies betwixt Lat. 25, and 45. so that the greatest Extent South and North is 1200 miles, and the greatest Length from East to West is about 960. It lies betwixt the third and the seventh Climates, so that the longest Day in the North Parts, is fifteen hours and an half.

Sir John Chardin, who liv'd several Years in this Country, travell'd thro much of it, was the King of Persia's Merchant, and at a considerable Charge, in conjunction with the Dutch Minister, to get a good Account of it, says 'tis about 1400 miles long, and 900 broad: That the Persian Geographers represent their Empire by its antient Boundaries, viz. the Black, Red, Persian, and Caspian Seas, and the Rivers Euphrates, Araxes, Tygris, Phasis, Oxus, and Indus, and still claim a Title to all the Countries within those Boundaries. They reckon in their Empire 544 wall'd Cities, considerable Towns and Castles, 60000 Villages, and 40 Millions of Souls. He says the twelfth part of it is not inhabited nor cultivated, that 'tis commonly well-peopled about two Leagues round their great Towns, and then desart for twenty Leagues more. 'Tis worse inhabited in the South Parts, because Water is scarce there, tho they might have enough would they dig for it. He assigns the following Causes for the Decrease of their People: (1.) The destroying them in the conquer'd Provinces, or transplanting them. (2.) The too early Venery and unnatural Lust of both Sexes. (3.) Their excessive Number of Concubines, which provokes their Wives to take things to make them barren or miscarry, because their Husbands abstain from them when three Months gone with Child. (4.) Many of them remove to the Indies, where they live more at ease. (5.) They leave vast Quantities of Ground desart on their Frontiers, to prevent Quarrels with their Neighbours, and to make their Invasions difficult for want of Subsistence. (6.) The excessive Heats, Colds, and Rains in many Places, by the Diversity of Climates.

The Holstein Ambassadors say, this Country is divided by the Mountains of Taurus under several Denominations. The Parts on the South-side are excessive hot, those on the North more temperate; and several of the Provinces on both sides are more subject to Epidemical Diseases than others. Sir John says, that in the middle of the Kingdom the Winter begins in November, and continues sharp and violent till March. Three days Journey North from Ispahan, the Snow lies eight Months on the Mountains, and breeds white Worms as big as one's little Finger, which crawl very quick, and when crush'd, issue a Moisture colder than the Snow. From March to May they have strong Winds; from May to September the Air is serene, and refresh'd by Breezes in the Mornings, Evenings, and Nights. In Summer the Nights are about ten hours long, and the Serenity of the Air makes the Sky seem higher, and of another Colour than ours, has a mighty Influence upon the Constitutions of the Peoples Bodies and Minds, and makes all the Works of Art and Nature beautiful and durable, and their Wine exceeding spirituous. The Heat is more moderate at Ispahan in Summer than at Paris, nor are they much troubled with Thunder, Lightning, and Earthquakes; but they have Storms of Hail in the Spring, which very much hurt their Corn and Fruit. In the Places about the Caspian Sea they have great Earthquakes, and in the Summer Nights there are fiery Meteors, which sometimes resemble falling Stars, and at other times Rockets, attended with Smoke or black Vapours; and the Stars give so much Light, that Men travel and know one another with great ease.

The Holstein Ambassadors say, there are many sandy Plains, and others full of Red Stones, Thistles, and Reeds. Some again are very fruitful, and produce Rice, Wheat, Barley, Millet, Lentils, Pease, and Beans; but some say they have no Rye or Oates. Dr. Fryer says, they have frequently a treble Harvest. Tavernier informs us, that the Corn, which grows naturally, is sound, and keeps well; but what is rais'd by the help of Water and artificial Channels, will scarce keep a Year either in Bread or Flower, but breeds a sort of Worms, which either eat it up, or make it so bitter, that 'tis not fit for Use. In general, they have six Months hot, and six cold Weather; and when the Snow is deep, they take it for an Omen of Plenty.

Sir

Sir John Chardin ſays, they have twenty ſorts of Melons: Some of them inſipid, and preſcrib'd for purging; others as ſweet as Sugar, but apt to breed Fevers. The laſt Crop is the beſt, white, and ſcarce to be diſtinguiſh'd in Taſte from Sugar. Theſe do keep in Cellars all Winter. The Melons laſt four Months here, and with Cucumbers are moſt of the poor People's Food. The beſt are on the Frontiers of Little Tartary, and brought above thirty Days Journey for the King's Table without ſpoiling. They have Peaches of ſixteen and eighteen Ounces weight; and an excellent ſort of Apricocks, which dry'd, and boil'd in Water, make a Syrup as good as Sugar. The Holſtein Ambaſſadors ſay, they have excellent Pot-Herbs and Roots, Cabbages and Onions, which weigh three Pounds a-piece. Moſt of the Southern Provinces have fine Grapes of ſeveral Sorts, and all manner of Fruit-Trees, particularly great Quantities of Black and White Mulberry-Trees, from whence they have a vaſt Product of Silk. They plant them cloſe together, don't let them grow above ſix Foot high, and are mighty nice and careful in breeding and managing their Silk-Worms.

In the North Parts there are Mines of Gold and Silver; but they ſcarce quit Coſt, becauſe of their want of Wood to purify them. They have alſo Copper, Iron, and Steel: The latter fine, but brittle.

Sir John Chardin ſays, they reckon their Plane-Trees have a peculiar Virtue againſt the Plague, and all infectious Airs; and obſerve, that ſince they planted them in their Gardens and Streets at Iſpahan, they have not ſuffer'd that way. Their Incenſe-Trees grow chiefly in Kerman, and reſemble our large Pear-Trees. In that Country, towards the Perſian Gulph, there are two ſorts of dangerous Shrubs: One, whoſe Fruit is full of a white Juice, thick as Cream; and when the Winds paſs thro thoſe Shrubs, they kill thoſe who are near them. The other kills all Cattel that eat of it, and the Water which falls from it is poiſonous. He takes this to be the Rhododendron of the Greeks, and the Nerium of the Herbaliſts. Here are alſo ſeveral ſorts of Manna; the beſt of which is yellowiſh, and has large Grains. There's a Manna of Tamarisk, which drops from the Trees of that Name, and is us'd in Phyſick. There's another ſort which drops from other Trees about Iſpahan in great plenty, is ſweeter than that of Tamarisk, and us'd alſo in Phyſick. Here's alſo Caſſia, Sena, and Gum-Armoniack, which proceeds from a Plant that reſembles the Stalk of an Artichoke. Here's another Plant, like the Spaniſh Thiſtle, which the Natives call Horſe-Rhubarb, becauſe they uſe it to purge their Horſes. It has a ſharp agreeable Taſte, and is eat raw by the Natives in the Spring. He takes it to be the Rubus Arabicus of the Herbaliſts. The Perſian Poppies yield more Juice than thoſe of other Countries. The People who gather them look like dead Corps, lean, and trembling. There's plenty of Tobacco in Kerman, which grows natural, without much Cultivation. The Inhabitants only dry the Leaves, and put them up in Boxes, without ſweating or twiſting it, which they think would make it too ſtrong: On which account, and the Dearneſs of the Price, they have left off Braſil Tobacco, of which the Engliſh formerly vended a great deal in Perſia.

Here's the beſt Saffron in the World, eſpecially near the Caſpian Sea, and abundance of Aſſa Fœtida. They eat the white, but value the black moſt, becauſe 'tis of a ſtrong Scent, of which the Rooms and Veſſels they put it in can never be clear'd, and it tarniſhes every thing elſe that is put into 'em. Here are Mummies of two Sorts: The firſt is a Petrification of embalm'd Corps, buried in burning Sands; ſome of which are found ſeven or eight Foot long. The other is a precious Gum, which diſtils from Rocks. The beſt is in Kerman, where the Fountains it diſtils from are ſealed up by the chief Officers of the Province, and open'd once a Year in their Preſence. The Gum is ſent to the King's Treaſury, and is ſaid to cure all Wounds and Bruiſes, be they ever ſo great, in twenty four Hours time. The Perſians alledge that the Uſe of it was taught their Anceſtors by the Prophet Daniel. Here's a Grain with which they dye their Hands, Feet, and ſometimes their Faces, to preſerve their Complexion againſt exceſſive Heat and Cold; and for the ſame end they rub their Horſes Legs with it. The Bezoar Stones here are better, and four times dearer, than thoſe of the Indies, and found in the Bodies of Bucks, wild and tame Goats, along the Perſian Gulph. It is us'd as a Counterpoiſon, to procure Sweat in malignant Fevers, is preſcrib'd by Phyſicians in all dangerous Caſes, but begins to loſe its Eſteem, tho their Mountebanks extol it above all other Medicines, and frequently make a counterfeit ſort. The Musk here is better than that of China, and ſo ſtrong, that it many times kills thoſe who hunt the Beaſt, and firſt open the Bag. The Perſians uſe it much to diſperſe Vapours, and raiſe their amorous Inclinations. Here's alſo abundance of Ambergreaſe, which, one of their moſt Learned Naturaliſts told Sir John, was compos'd of Honey and Wax, waſh'd down from Bee-Hives on Trees and Rocks, and carried to the Sea by Rivers.

Here's a ſort of Wood which ſerves them as well as our Flints for their Fire-Arms, &c. Among other Birds not uſual with us, here is the Pelican. Sir John ſays, 'tis as large as a Sheep, the Feathers white and ſoft, like thoſe of a Swan, the Head ſmall in compariſon of its Body, the Bill ſixteen or eighteen Inches long, and as big as a Man's Arm: Under its Bill there's a Bag, which it contracts or extends at pleaſure. It will hold a Pail-full of Water: And in this they carry Water and Fiſh to their Young; which gave occaſion to the Fable that they open'd their Breaſts, and fed their Young with their Blood. Here's another Bird call'd the Water of Locuſts, becauſe they make uſe of them to deſtroy theſe Inſects in the following manner: There's a Fountain in Choraſan, the Water of which is ſo much coveted by theſe Birds, that they ſmell and follow it in great numbers where-ever it is carried; ſo that when the Provinces are infeſted with Locuſts, the People put this Water in open Viols, hold them on high, and the Birds fly after them to the Places where the Locuſts are, which they ſpeedily devour. Here's another Bird, valued at 1500 Crowns a-piece, which none is allow'd to have but the King. They are as large as Eagles, build their Neſts in the Snow, and are us'd to hunt wild Beaſts: They flap their Wings on their Heads, and pick out their Eyes with their Bills. There are ſeveral ſorts of Camels in this Country; ſome that have two Bunches on their Backs, and others but one. There's another ſort call'd Wind-Camels of a leſſer Size, and more nimble. They are us'd for riding Poſt. The King has many of 'em with rich Capariſons, ſent with thoſe who meet Ambaſſadors. They live eight Days without Water, and kneel to take on their Loads. The Perſian Horſes are very handſome; and their Mules ſo much eſteem'd here, that the King and Perſons of Quality frequently ride on them. Here's a Beaſt call'd an Ounce, ſpotted like a Tyger, but very tame, and it is us'd to hunt wild Goats. Here are Oxen with great ſharp-pointed Bunches on their Backs, near the Neck, made uſe of for Burdens and Riding. Moſt of the Pigeons here are wild, except a few, which are kept for Decoys, and none but Mahometans are allow'd to keep any. Dr. Fryer ſays, the King has three thouſand Pigeon-Houſes at Iſpahan, and has more Profit from the Dung than from the Birds. The Country abounds with wild and tame Fowl of all ſorts except Quails. The River Aras abounds with Carps, Trouts, and Pikes; but their other Rivers have only Barbels, and Crabs, which feed on the white Mulberries by Night, and return to the Rivers by Day-break. Here's ſcarce any navigable River but the Araxes; and that only for flat-bottom'd Boats.

Their MANNERS and CUSTOMS.

SIR John Chardin and other Travellers, ſay the Perſians have two very contrary Habits, viz. to be continually praiſing God, and pretending to do every thing in his Name, and at the ſame time give very foul Language, and ſpeak reproachfully of one another. The Youth are not ſuffer'd to appear in the World till paſt twenty; and when they firſt come abroad, are very modeſt and civil, but ſoon corrupted by bad Example. The Perſians hate travelling, and reckon it criminal to entertain any Strangers but Ambaſſadors or Merchants; for they look upon all others as Spies. Here are no Gazettes, Maps, or Books of Geography, and even their Miniſters of State know not what paſſes in Europe. Thoſe who let Houſes, have the Rent every Night; for they give one another no Credit but in Places of Trade, where they truſt for a Month. They regard not Genealogy, and have no Sirnames, but call themſelves Son and Father of ſuch and ſuch. The greateſt of 'em think it no Diſgrace to name themſelves from the Trade of their Anceſtors, as Abraham the Jeweller, and Ali the Taylor. As to Titles, their Footmen will call themſelves David the Duke, and Abraham the Prince: But thoſe who are really great Men put thoſe Titles before their Name, as Duke David, and Prince Abraham. When News is brought a Perſian of the Birth of a Son, the Perſon who brings it muſt have all his Clothes, unleſs he redeem them by a Preſent. Perſons of Quality ruin themſelves by Numbers of Servants; for they have of all ſorts with the ſame Title as the King's, and are attended by them and Led-Horſes when they make Viſits. Marriage here is ſo expenſive, that few, except thoſe of Quality, venture on it. The meaner ſort make uſe of a female Slave, or have hir'd Wives, whom they diſmiſs when they will; but they muſt not hire themſelves to others till forty Days after. A Man may have four of thoſe called married Wives; but they ſeldom take above one. They marry by Proxy, and never ſee one another before-hand. When the Proxies have agreed, and the Bridegroom ratifies the Bargain before the Prieſt, it is ſeal'd, and given to the Woman's Proxy for ſecuring her Dowry. The Bridegroom and Bride ſend Preſents to one another. The Wedding-Feaſt is kept in his Houſe, laſts generally ten Days; and on the laſt, the Bride's Portion, which is Furniture, Jewels, Slaves, and Eunuchs, &c. according to her Quality, is brought home with Muſick. If a Perſon of Note, ſhe is brought home at Night on a Camel, attended by her Servants with Muſick and Tapers. If mean, ſhe comes on foot with a ſmall Retinue, led by two Women, but ſo veil'd up that ſhe cannot be ſeen. She is carried to the Bed-Chamber, and the Lights being put out, the Bridegroom is brought thither by Eunuchs or old Women. Thoſe of Quality, and eſpecially of the Blood Royal, affect to be very coy, and give their Husbands ſome Months Trouble before they admit them. The meaner ſort frequently promiſe greater Dowries than they are able to pay, and force the Women to abate by ſhutting the Door, and threatening not to receive them. Divorces are common among the Vulgar for ſlight Cauſes. Thoſe of Quality frequently uſe their Wives ſo ill, that they force them to quit their Dowry for the ſake of their Liberty, or if they won't, poiſon them. If the Man don't find the Tokens of Virginity, he has power to cut off her Noſe and Ears, and ſend her away; but Perſons of Note ſend them off without Noiſe. The Bride's Friends make extraordinary Rejoicings when ſhe is found to be chaſte. Travellers are allow'd to hire Wives where they pleaſe for a time. Adultereſſes and Adulterers may be put to death by the Husband, if taken in the Fact. When Women have hard Labour, their Friends run to the next School, purchaſe the Scholars a Play-Day, and Pardon for thoſe who deſerve Correction, or buy Birds that are in Cages, and ſet them at liberty; which they fancy procures the Women an eaſy Delivery. When a Perſian is dangerouſly ſick, Fires are lighted on his Terraſs, to give People notice to pray for him. When they die, great Numbers of Prieſts dance about the Corps, and bawl as loud as they can; and he that is loudeſt has moſt Money. The Corps of Perſons of Quality are follow'd by their Horſes with their uſual Furniture, and their Arms are buried with them. The Servants follow the Corps naked to the Middle, and ſcratch or burn their Arms and Breaſts. Some Youths come next with Texts of the Alcoran on their Shoulders, and repeat Eulogies on the Deceaſed. Thoſe of the beſt Rank put their Hands to the Cords that draw the Herſe. The Mob crowd about with Branches of Cypreſs, Garlands, &c. and among them ſome Horſemen half naked, who ſometimes wound themſelves to expreſs their Sorrow; and Women are hired to howl, and tear their falſe Hair. The Corps is buried with the Face towards Mecca. The Rich ſet up an Arch with four Pillars over the Grave, and eat and drink under it when they viſit the Tombs. They fancy that a good and bad Angel come to examine the Deceas'd as ſoon as buried; that at the Day of Judgment they muſt paſs a Bridge as ſharp as a Razor, which Muſſulmen do without hurt, but others fall into a Torrent of Fire among Devils, who tear them with Tenterhooks, &c. Some believe a ſenſual Paradiſe, as the Turks; but others think their Happineſs will conſiſt consist in a perfect Knowledge of the Sciences. They never lay two Bodies in one Grave, for fear of disturbing the Dead.

People of Quality are extravagant in their Apparel, Houshold Furniture, and Diet. They are generally facetious; and their chief Inquiry as to foreign Countries is, whether they have handsome Women, good Wine, serviceable Horses, and well-temper'd Swords. They admire Poetry, especially amorous Ballads; and their Musick is soft and lofty. Many of them understand Mathematicks, and other Parts of Philosophy, and have good Authors on those Subjects, and on Morality. They are very curious in considering every thing they see about a Stranger. Some of them are well vers'd in Painting, Carving, and Sculpture; and all love obscene Pictures, being much addicted to Leudness. They look upon Astrologers as Oracles, love Diviners, and Almanacks fill'd with Predictions; and even those who let Camels and Horses, will scarce part with 'em till they try by casting Dice, or counting even and odd, whether the Journey will be lucky. The Habit of the Men is a Cassock of painted Callico without Sleeves: It reaches to the Mid-Leg, and is quilted in Winter. They wrap Silk Scarves several times about their Middle; but the better sort wear Indian Scarves. Those of Quality have a Rochet over it, border'd with Sables; and when they go abroad, cast a loose Silk Garment embroider'd with Gold Flowers over all. Their Shirts are of red strip'd Callico, and under them they have Callico Drawers. Their Stockings are of Woollen Cloth, very ill shap'd, but generally green, out of scorn to the Turks, who wear green on their Heads. Instead of Shoes they have a sort of Slippers, which they are oblig'd to put off when within Doors. Their Turbants are streak'd, and much larger than the Turks. The Womens Habit is much like the Mens, but the Stuff finer. Their Hair hangs carelessly about their Shoulders, or is tied up in Tresses with two or three Rows of Pearl, that hang down by their Cheeks, and are fasten'd under their Chin. Their Stockings are commonly red or green Velvet, and better shap'd than the Mens. They wear white Veils as low as their Knees when they go abroad. Maids wear Rings with precious Stones on their Fingers, and in their right Nostril, and Bracelets of little Silver Plates on their Arms. The Men wear Silver Rings, because Gold ones were forbid them by Mahomet.

The Apparel of the ordinary sort is generally Callico, and very cheap, as is their Furniture and Diet. They live chiefly on Rice soak'd in Water, Butter, Cheese, Fruit, and Pot-Herbs. At Entertainments they make their Rice of several Colours with the Juice of Pomgranates, Cherries, or Saffron. In many Provinces they have Wine at 3 d. per Quart; but the Bigots drink Water mix'd with Vinegar, because Mahomet's Law forbids Wine. They are excessive in the Use of Opium: Some take an Ounce at a time, which makes them giddy. They think it inspires them with Courage. The Women seldom use it, but to rid themselves from the Cruelty of their Husbands, and then take a great Quantity, drink cold Water or Vinegar after it, which makes them die without much Pain, and is not curable by any Antidote. Those of Quality delight so much in Tobacco, that they smoke it in the Mosques; and the poorer sort spend most of what they have upon it. In publick Houses they sell a Liquor made of boil'd Poppy-Seed and Broth, which is very intoxicating, sets them a quarrelling and scolding, and using ridiculous Postures. Some of them smoke Hemp, which puts them by their Senses for two or three Hours, and makes them either pleasant or stark mad. The People in general are good-natur'd, and sensible of Obligations; and on the other hand, very revengeful in case of Injuries, which they never forget. The Men squat down when they make Water, and chuse to do it, if possible, near some Brook or Vessel of Water, that they may wash themselves afterward. 'Tis rare to hear them blaspheme the Name of God, or curse themselves; and when any one does so, they cry out with Astonishment, Is not the Fellow a Fool to give himself to the Devil, and renounce Paradise? They think it a mighty Curse to wish one's Soul no more Rest in Paradise than a Frenchman's Hat. They are as fulsome in their Compliments, as rude in their Anger; and are so careless in keeping their Promises, and speaking Truth, that they reckon it only a Jest to be call'd Lyars. They sometimes enter into a Bond of Friendship, which they prefer to all other Obligations. One of the Company is chosen Godfather, goes with them to the Caliph, who strikes 'em thrice with a Wand on the Back, says Alla Mahomet and Haly: After which they kiss the Rod, and the Caliph's Hand; and this Friendship is accounted inviolable.

Their LANGUAGE and LEARNING.

THE Persian, Turkish, and Arabian, are spoke by those of the better sort; but that of the Vulgar is a mix'd Gibberish. The Arabian is reckon'd the most eloquent, therefore all their Books are writ in it. The Persian is sweet and pleasing; but the Gentry mix it with Arabick, because they reckon the Persian barren. The Turkish is spoke at Court, and called the Rhodomontade Language. They have no Printing, but write with small Indian Reeds, lean very slightly on the Paper, and turn it according to the Motion of the Pen, that their Dashes may be large and free, as the Character requires. They write backwards; and by a Circumflex, or some other Mark, make almost every Letter to signify a Word. The common People and Soldiers study Astrology, and continually talk of it, that they may not be thought illiterate. They begin their Months from the first sight of the Crescent, and the Year on the 11th of March, when all the Grandees appear at Court, make Presents to the King; and the Vulgar, rather than want a new Suit on this Day, pawn themselves for Slaves. At Midnight, Morning, and Sun-set, the appointed Men play for a quarter of an Hour upon Kettle-Drums, Hautboys, &c. from some Place where they may be heard all over the Town.

Their Physicians have Degrees or Titles according to their Seniority and Skill: Their Libraries are small, but select and useful. They prefer Vegetables before Minerals, affect Silence and a particular Mien, and sit cross-legg'd. They know nothing of Anatomy, are averse to Phlebotomy, and their Pharmacy consists chiefly of Decoctions and Fomentations. The People call them Prescribers of Life, and Mountebanks the Devil's Surgeons. Their Epidemical Physick is Sweating; so that all their Towns abound with Baths.

Their Poets quaver like the French when they repeat their Lines, which makes them seem harmonious; but they are lame in Quantity. The best Persian Pieces are in Verse. The King entertains several Poets as his Domesticks, and they are distinguish'd by their Habit. The Grandees do the like; and the Vulgar have their Poetasters to divert them at Tippling-Houses.

Their LAWS and PUNISHMENTS.

THEIR Laws are chiefly taken out of the Alcoran, are many, and some of 'em wicked; for if a Man offends the Prince, not only himself, but all his Kindred are punish'd. Murder is not to be bought off: The Kindred of the Person slain are allow'd to torture the Murderer to death after he is brought before the Judge. Debauchery is punish'd by throwing the Offenders to Dogs kept on purpose. Felons are sometimes tied by the Feet to a Camel's Tail, and their Bowels ripp'd up; sometimes interr'd alive, with their Heads out; and at other times they set them on horseback, fasten their Legs to a Stick, and lard them with lighted Candles till they burn their Bowels. When they extort a Confession, they pull off the Criminal's Flesh with hot Pinchers, and cudgel their Feet; and if they be Women, put a live Rat into their Drawers. Their lesser Punishments are plucking out the Malefactor's Eyes, piercing the Nerves of their Ancles, and hanging them up by the Feet, which they bastinado; and sometimes cut off the Nerves.

Their Judges are easily corrupted; but when discovered are severely punish'd. They are speedy in determining Suits. In the Distribution of Inheritances the Sons have two Parts, and Daughters one. If a Christian turns Mahometan, he succeeds to the Estates of any of his Christian Relations, exclusive of their own Children: But they have found a way to elude this unjust Law by a Sale of their Estates to Trustees, which the Judges confirm for a little Money.

Their RELIGION.

THEY are Mahometans; circumcise the Males before they be twelve Years old, and the Females betwixt nine and fifteen. Several Names are writ on Pieces of Paper, put into a Box, and the first that is drawn is chosen. Their chief Differences from the Turks are about Mahomet's Successor: The Persians say it was Mortus Ali, his Cousin-German and Son-in-Law, and that he is little less than God; for which the Turks call them Blasphemers and Idolaters. The Persians say, the Alcoran was design'd by God for Ali, but by Mistake fell into Mahomet's hands. They curse in their publick Worship the Turkish Prophets, Mahomet's Fathers-in-Law, as Usurpers. The Persians go in Pilgrimage to the Tombs of twelve Saints at Kirfa, and derive them from Ali; but the Turks detest 'em. Those who have Certificates of this Pilgrimage are protected against the King himself, be their Crimes what they please. The Persians are allow'd to dissemble, and to say they are Followers of Omar, when they go in Pilgrimage to Mecca. They allow the Posterity of Mahomet and Ali great Immunities, and exempt them from Taxes. They wear their Hair long, tie it up, are clad in white, abstain from Wine, marry always in their own Family, boast of their Descent, swear by their own Birth, and pretend never to tell a Lye. There are many idle Fellows who assume this Title, and by forg'd Certificates impose upon the Country People, and sell them counterfeit Reliques. There's a sort of Monks called Abdalia's, who pretend also to be Ali's Descendants, strole about the Country, preach to the Mob, and rail at the Turkish Saints, of whom they tell many loud Stories, to keep up the Animosities betwixt the Persians and Turks; but they are generally so much addicted to Drunkenness, Whoredom, Sodomy, and Theft, that few People care to receive them in their Houses, so that they are lodg'd in Chappels near the Mosques.

The Persians expect the Return of Ali and their twelve Saints to Earth; so that those of Estates leave Legacies for their Entertainment. And Hackluyt says, that the King of Persia in his Time kept a Daughter unmarried to be Ali's Wife.

The chief Festival of the Persians is that of Hocein and Hussein, Ali's two Sons, who were murder'd by the Turkish Caliph of Bagdat. The Bigots on this occasion black their Faces and Bodies, go about the Streets naked, all but their secret Parts, knock two Flints together, make wry Faces and other antick Gestures, and cry Hussein, Hocein, Hocein, Hussein, till they foam at Mouth. The Preachers have Pulpits at the Corners of the Streets, where they inflame the Mob; and the Women being allow'd to go abroad on this occasion, improve it to loud Purposes. The Representations of Ali's Sons are carried about on Biers, and the People make great Lamentations; at which the Strumpets are sure to attend, and believe it merits their Pardon. The several Companies who carry the Biers quarrel for Precedency, and knock one another down with Clubs. Troops are posted to prevent Mischief, but to no purpose; for the Mob believe that they who die on this occasion go to Heaven. When the Scene is like to be bloody, the King orders his Elephants with their Gold Trappings to be brought out, which diverts the Mob from their Fury, and they all run to see those Creatures do their Obeisance to his Majesty, which they are taught by their Keepers. The Chief Priest makes a Discourse before the King on the Murder of Ali's Sons, has a rich Habit given him, and the Priests who attend him have others of less Value. He concludes with a Prayer for the Welfare of the King and Kingdom; and the Zealots are feasted plentifully by the Citizens.

Le Brun, who was here in 1704, says, the Muzifehid surpasses all the other Clergy: He explains the Alcoran, and other Writings of their Religion and Law; so that the Bigots say he alone has the Right of governing, and the King is only intrusted with the Sword to execute his Commands, and can do nothing by his own Authority. The Clergy by their Hypocrisy, feign'd Mortification, and flattering the People, keep the King in awe, ſo that he dare change nothing in their Worſhip or Religion.

The Gaurs, ſuppoſed to be the Remains of the antient Perſians, wou'd never embrace the Alcoran, and for that Reaſon were formerly perſecuted; but the late Perſian Kings have thought fit to give them Liberty. They have a Chief Prieſt, and a principal Temple, to which they muſt go in Pilgrimage once in their Lives. Tavernier ſays, they are very ſcrupulous in diſcovering their Myſteries; and that he was oblig'd to frequent their Company much, before he could learn the Account he gives of 'em: By which it wou'd ſeem that the firſt Inventors of their Religion have mix'd and perverted ſome hiſtorical Paſſages of the Old and New Teſtament with Pagan Stories, to make up their Scheme; but we can't inſiſt on Particulars. Their Language and Character differ from the Perſian. They deny that they worſhip the Sun, or the Fire; but only that they do Homage to the Sun as the moſt perfect Creature next to Man, and the Seat of God's Throne: And they reſpect Fire as the pureſt Element, and keep it always burning in their Temple; for they reckon it would be polluted if blown up by their Breath, or otherwiſe. Sanſon ſays, their Morals are better than thoſe of the other Perſians; and that they might be ſooner converted to Chriſtianity. They had formerly Kings of their own.

Of the Perſian KING and COURT.

THE Authors above mentioned agree that the King is abſolute, and diſpoſes of the Lives and Fortunes of his Subjects at pleaſure, without being tied to any Law: And ſome of them have made a very bruiſh Uſe of their Power, tho generally ſpeaking their Adminiſtration is milder than that of the Grand Signior, and other Mahometan Princes. The Subjects obey their Commands without any Reſerve, tho contrary to the Laws of God and Nature, ſo that Parents and Children become one another's Executioners, if the King order it; and the People think an Oath by the King's Head to be more ſacred than if they ſwear by God himſelf. Their Kings are ſo afraid of Rivals in Power, that upon their Acceſſion to the Throne they order the Eyes of their Brothers and all other Princes of the Blood to be put out, and the Male Iſſue of their Siſters and other Ladies of the Blood Royal to be deſtroyed. They take the Wives and Daughters of their Subjects at pleaſure, put them into the Seraglio as Concubines, and ſend Officers to take up all the beautiful Virgins thro the Kingdom; for which reaſon the Armenian Chriſtians marry their Daughters at nine or ten Years of Age. The Kings are ſo jealous of their own Wives and Concubines, that when they travel with them they are carried in a ſort of Cradles on the Backs of Camels, cover'd ſo as they may not be ſeen. A Guard of Eunuchs is appointed to clear the Roads, and all Men muſt remove at ſo many Miles diſtance on pain of Death. The Kings iſſue Prohibitions upon Proviſions or Goods of any ſort when they pleaſe, by which they engroſs thoſe Things to themſelves, which puts the People to incredible trouble. Notwithſtanding this abſolute Power, they are very familiar with their Subjects, and frequently eat and drink with them. But thoſe Favours are very dangerous; for on the leaſt Capricio, eſpecially when heated with Drink, they will order their Gueſts to be cut off.

Authors differ much as to the Revenues of the King: Some make them immenſe. Sir John Chardin computes them at two Millions and a half Sterling per Ann. which, conſidering that his Army and the Maintenance of his Houſe coſt him nothing, makes him the richeſt Prince in the World. He has vaſt Treaſures of Silver and Gold, Plate and Jewels of all ſorts; and nothing can be more rich and magnificent than his Throne and the Furniture of his Palace, ſo that the Carpets which cover his Floors are finer and richer than the beſt ſort uſed in Europe. His Flambeaus and Tapers are mix'd with the moſt precious Odours. His Lamps and Candleſticks are all of Maſſy Gold; his Throne the ſame, and richly ſet with the moſt valuable Jewels. His Crown is immenſely rich, has Tufts reſembling Heron's Feathers of Jeweller's Work, and is all over embroider'd with precious Stones and Pearl. The Royal Sword and Dagger is reckon'd at five Millions of French Money. The King wears a red Turbant of a different faſhion from others, and that part before which his Subjects wear behind; and they muſt not wear them otherwiſe, on pain of Death.

The Succeſſion goes generally to the eldeſt Son: But the Eunuchs have ſuch an Influence, that they commonly ſet up which they pleaſe. If the Queen have no Son, thoſe of Concubines ſucceed; and if there be none ſuch, the Crown goes to the other neareſt Relation. The Houſes where the King's Sons are born are Sanctuaries; and if diſtant from Court, immediately wall'd in, and Eunuchs appointed to govern them. The eldeſt never comes out of the Seraglio till call'd to the Throne. His Eunuchs teach him to read and write, fill his Head with the Miracles of Saints, and Hatred againſt the Turks, are Pimps to his Luſts, and ſo intoxicate him with Women and Opium, that he's ſeldom good for any thing. And Le Brun ſays, the King who reign'd in 1704 minded nothing but Women, ſo that the Nation was filled with Robbery and Injuſtice.

The Grandees reckon it as great an Honour to be called the King's Slaves, as the Europeans do to have the Title of a Duke or Marquiſs; and the higheſt Expreſſions of Slavery are their greateſt Flights of Eloquence. His Titles are ſo numerous, that we can't inſiſt upon 'em. Some of the moſt whimſical are as follow: Prince of the Imperious Mountains of Ararat, Taurus, Caucaſus, &c. Lord of the four Rivers of Paradiſe, True Deſcendant of Ali, Governor of all Sultans, Emperor of Muſſulmen, Bud of Honour, Mirror of Virtue, Roſe of Delight; The High and Mighty Star, whoſe Head is cover'd with the Sun, and whoſe Motion is comparable to the Firmament, &c. The Titles he gives to his Grandees in his Patents and Letters are no leſs ridiculous; as, Lords of Lords, who have the Preſence of Lions, Conquerors of Kingdoms, Untiers of all manner of Knots, and who are under the Aſcendant of Mercury, &c.

The Subjects call him True Lieutenant of Ali, to whom God gave the Dominion of the World after Mahomet; God's Lieutenant, to diſtribute Bleſſings to Men; and the Conduit through which he conveys his Bleſſings to the Earth. Sanſon ſays, they look upon him as infallible, and likewiſe impeccable, becauſe ſubject to no Law.

Thoſe who diſpenſe the Mahometan Religion, take place of all other Officers of the Crown: They are five in Number, and are principal Judges both in Religious and Civil Affairs. There are ſix great Miniſters of State call'd the Pillars of the Empire: The firſt is the Great Viſier or Chancellor, who is Preſident of the Council, Superintendant of the Cuſtoms, and of foreign Affairs and Commerce. He diſpoſes of all Poſts, Civil and Military, has a large Salary, and vaſt Perquiſites; for all the Grandees make him Preſents, becauſe he is able to further or croſs their Affairs with the King. He has ſix Deputies, who form his Council. Le Brun ſays, he's the greateſt Slave, tho the greateſt Man of the Empire. He flatters the King in all his Paſſions, keeps him ignorant of the State of Affairs, ſtrengthens himſelf by getting his own Creatures into the chief Poſts, connives at the Exactions of the other Miniſters, and ſhares the Booty with them. There's nothing, ſays that Author, but Diſſimulation and Envy at Court, every one ſtriving to out another; and Ingratitude is ſo prevalent here, that whenever a Miniſter falls, thoſe whom he has moſt oblig'd are apt to be loudeſt againſt him. There's one particularly called the Great Aſtrologer. He conſtantly attends the King, who conſults him about the Succeſs of every thing before he undertakes it. Here was a ſort of Knights, call'd the Order of Sophy, who were ſworn to recover the Empire that Tamerlane ruin'd. They were call'd Saints. The King was Chief of the Order, which occaſion'd Strangers to call the King Grand Sophy; but this Order is now in diſgrace, becauſe of the unnatural Leudneſs, and many other Crimes they were charg'd with. The Military Government is now ſo much neglected by the Luxurious Courtiers, that Sir John Chardin ſays it will ruin the Empire if not redreſs'd. Their Militia conſiſts of three Bodies: The firſt are the Deſcendants of the antient Turks, who were about 50000, and much eſteem'd for their Valour; but now reduc'd to 22000. The King reviews them every Year. There are many great Lords among them. Their General is one of their own Body; and they are employed by the King to put great Men to death. The ſecond Order is compos'd of Slaves, or Sons of Slaves, but chiefly Renegado Georgians, and are about 18000. There are many great Lords alſo amongſt them. This Body was moſt favour'd by the Great Cha-Abbas, becauſe having no Ties of Affection or Kindred among themſelves, being a Mixture of all Nations, and having no Intereſt but his, they were trueſt to him. The third Order is compos'd of Husbandmen and Shepherds. There are about 8000 of 'em in each Province. They are well train'd by the Governors, and taught to ſhoot at a Mark. The other two Bodies deſpiſe them, ſo that they are ſeldom made uſe of but on extraordinary Occaſions. He has alſo 2000 Muſqueteers to keep Guard in the Palace every Night. The Perſians have little Naval Force, but only ſome large Barks in the Gulph of Ormus, and others in the Caſpian Sea.

Every Province is govern'd by a Chan, or Viceroy, who is in a manner abſolute. They are oblig'd to have a certain Number of Soldiers ready at the King's Call, and to defray the Charges of Ambaſſadors in their Diſtrict. They are nam'd and turn'd out by the King at pleaſure; for he allows no Hereditary Dignities. There's another Officer call'd Sultan, who has much the ſame Power; and both of 'em are employ'd in Embaſſies. There's one nam'd a Kaleter, who collects the Revenues of Cities and Provinces, accounts to the Chan or King, and protects the People from the Oppreſſion of the Grandees. There are alſo Viſiers in every Province, who are Spies upon the Chans, pay the Soldiers, and have power to redreſs the Grievances of Peaſants, by which means they curb the Chans, and make it difficult for them to revolt.

Sanſon ſays, that there is nothing but Tyranny and Injuſtice almoſt throughout this Empire; for the Chans make Intereſt with the Great Aſtrologer, who diverts the King from hearing Petitions againſt him on pretence that the Hour is unlucky, &c. They likewiſe bribe the Great Marſhal, whoſe Men keep Petitioners off from approaching the King when he goes abroad on horſeback, which is the only time allow'd for preſenting Petitions. He adds, that this great Power of the Courtiers has made the Perſian Court very unjuſt in their Treaties with foreign States about Commerce, or otherwiſe; and that the Chriſtian Subjects are very much oppreſs'd by the Mahometan Judges, ſo that none of 'em cou'd live here, were it not either from the Temper of the reigning Prince, or the Intereſt of the Governors, who ſometimes oppoſe the Fury of the perſecuting Bigots, becauſe they loſe their Tribute from ſuch Chriſtians as turn Mahometans.

Their TRADE, MANUFACTURES, and COINS.

THE Inland Trade is manag'd by Natives and Jews, and the Foreign by Armenians, who ſell the Silks for the King and Nobility, and are the richeſt Merchants. The Holſtein Ambaſſadors ſay, they export annually 20000 Bales. The raw Silk is commonly about half a Crown a pound. They exchange it at Ormus for Tin, Copper, Engliſh and Dutch Cloth, which yields from five to ſix Pounds a Yard in ſome Places of Perſia. There's an Agreement betwixt the Turks and Perſians to allow Freedom of Trade in Time of War. They export great Numbers of Seal-Skins and Goat-Skins dreſs'd. Their Camels, Horſes, and Mules are exported to Armenia, Natolia, and India; and they furniſh moſt of Romania and Natolia with Sheep. Natives and Foreigners may trade where they pleaſe on paying the uſual Cuſtoms, and ſome ſmall Duties to the Crown. They ſell at Ormus Gold, Silver, Silk, Stuffs, Brocades, Carpets, Horſes, Allum, Tutty, Rhubarb, Roſe-Water, &c. or barter them for Cinnamon and other Eaſt-India Spices, Sugar, Sandal, Japan Wood, China Ware, Musk, Amber, Aloes, Precious Stones, Pearls, Indigo, Wax, Sugar-Candy, Camphire, China Roots, Anniſeed, Tea, Benjamin, Ebony, Copper. They are moſtly imported by the Dutch and Natives of Eaſt India, who carry back in exchange the Perſian Commodities, particularly Red Skins, Red Earth, Turquoiſes, Emeralds, and other precious Stones, with Perſian Silks and Carpets. The Engliſh and Dutch trade thro the whole whole Country. The latter are oblig'd to give annual Presents to the King and Courtiers to favour their Trade. The Portugueſe are reſtrain'd from coming to Ormus, Gamron, and other Places; but are allow'd Factories elſewhere. Sanſon ſays, the Perſian Trade is much decay'd thro the Injuſtice of the Chans and Viſiers, the Badneſs of the Perſian Coin, and their lowering that of Europe. Beſides, Europeans make Velvets, Tiſſues, and Taffeta's better and cheaper now than the Perſians. Sir John Chardin ſays, the King and Grandees have Manufactories of all ſorts in their Work-Houſes, where they maintain a great Number of excellent Maſters that have Penſions and Diet during Life, and when they finiſh any curious Piece, have Preſents or Advancement of Pay. Their Gold and Silver Manufactures never tarniſh. They make great Quantities of Linen of all Colours, with Flowers and Figures, are excellent at damasking with Vitriol upon Steel, or engraving damask-wiſe upon Swords, Knives, &c. and are very ingenious in making Arms and Furniture for Horſes. Many of the Poor get their Livelihood by mending Glaſs Tobacco-Pipes.

The Holſtein Ambaſſadors ſay, their Coin is Abaſſis, fine Silver of 1 s. 6 d. Value, and of theſe they have half and quarter Parts. Every City has its peculiar Braſs Money, which is recoin'd annually, to the great Advantage of the King, who has 6 s. Sterling out of a Pound of Metal that coſts but 1 s. 6 d. The Stamps are commonly a Stag, Deer, Goat, Satyr, or Fiſh, the Name of the King, and the Time and Place of Coinage. The Mamouds is eight Pence, the Baſti ſix Pence farthing, the Chayes four Pence, and the Casbeke three Half-pence.

The GEOGRAPHY of PERSIA:

WE begin at the North-Weſt as uſual, and take the Provinces and Towns as they lie in the Map.

I. Georgia, or Gurgiſtan, part of antient Colchis, lies betwixt the Black and the Caſpian Seas, has Imiretta, &c. belonging to the Turks on the Weſt, and Dagheſtan on the Eaſt. Sir John Chardin ſays, 'tis mountainous and woody, except in the middle. The Air is hot in Summer, and dry and cold in Winter; the fair Seaſon begins in May, and laſts till December. 'Tis well water'd, abounds with all ſorts of Corn, Fruit, and Herbs. The Cattel are numerous and good, and their Boars and Pigs excellent. They export much Silk and Wine; and the latter is ſo good, that the King of Perſia drinks it at his Table. The Men have a good Complexion, the Women are beautiful, and paint and dreſs ſumptuouſly. The Georgians are witty, and capable of Arts, but drown'd in Ignorance and Vice, are perfidious, ungrateful, proud, and implacable when provok'd. Drunkenneſs and Concubinage are common to the Clergy and Laity, and the former are ſo far from thinking it a Crime, that they ſay he who is not drunk at Eaſter and Chriſtmas ought to be excommunicated. The Women are more debauch'd than the Men, tho they affect in Converſation to be thought otherwiſe. Their great Men make abſolute Slaves of their Vaſſals, who work for them without Diet or Money. They have a Patriarch whom they name Catholicos, an Archbiſhop, and ſeveral Biſhops, and place all their Religion in Faſts and long Prayers. They have a Mahometan Prince, ſubject to the King of Perſia; he diſpoſes of the Sees, and his Brother was Patriarch when Sir John was here. The Churches are built generally on the Tops of Mountains, where they bow to them at a diſtance, but ſcarce enter them once in ten years. Places of Note here are,

(1.) Teflis, Lat. 43. Long. 49. one of the faireſt Towns in Perſia. It lies on the North of the River Kur, which defends it on that ſide. There are ſtrong handſome Stone-Walls on the other, and a Fortreſs on the South-ſide, with a Perſian Gariſon, which is a Sanctuary for Criminals. Here are ſix Georgian, and eight Armenian Churches. The Cathedral is a large antique Structure of hewn Stone, with a great Dome in the middle. They allow the Perſians no Moſque in the City, but they have one in the Fortreſs. Wine and Pork are ſold openly here, and the Perſians are forc'd to bear with it, leſt the Town ſhould revolt to the Turks. The Prince's Palace is noble and large, with fine Courts, Gardens, and Aviaries; and the Viceroy of Caket, which lies on the North of Georgia, has one here almoſt as good. The publick Buildings are of Stone. There are many Pleaſure-Houſes in the Suburbs, with beautiful Gardens, and ſhady Walks. The City is populous, much frequented by Strangers for Trade, the Magnificence of the Court, and the hot Baths. It was ſeveral times taken by the Turks, but recover'd by the Perſians.

(2.) Derbent, on the Bank of the Caſpian Sea, 90 miles South-Eaſt of Teflis. 'Tis the grand Thorow-fare from Turcomania and Perſia to the North-Parts of Europe and Aſia. It ſtands on a Mountain, and is ſo well fortify'd, that the Turks call it the Iron Gate. Sanſon thinks it to have been the Caſpiæ Portæ, ſo famous in Hiſtory. There's the Remains of an antient Wall betwixt this and Teflis, built by Alexander the Great, againſt the barbarous People of the North. 'Tis about 20 miles long. The Holſtein Ambaſſadors ſay, the Town's a League long, and half a mile broad. The Houſes are of Freeſtone. There are ſeveral Arabick and Syriack Inſcriptions on the Walls, but not legible now. The Coaſt is one entire Rock. On the neighbouring Hills are the Ruins of many Caſtles, and about the City Thouſands of Tombs cover'd with Grave-ſtones, exceeding the ordinary Stature of Man, with Arabick Inſcriptions. The Inhabitants ſay, they are the Tombs of the chief Men of the King of Media's Army, routed here by the Dagheſtan Tartars. The Inhabitants perform their Devotions at thoſe Sepulchres, on the Anniverſary of Abraham's Sacrifice.

Le Brun, who was here in 1703. ſays, 'tis defended by a Citadel, and the Walls well mounted with Cannon. There are Pirates in the Neighbourhood; who join with the Ruſſian Coſſacks, and frequently infeſt the Caſpian Sea.

II. The Province of Dagheſtan, lies betwixt Georgia and the Caſpian Sea, North from Derbent. Sir John Chardin ſays, 'tis inhabited by ſavage Tartars, the moſt barbarous People of the Eaſt, and thought to be Parthians by Origin. They own the King of Perſia for Sovereign, but don't always obey his Commands. They have Lords of their own, who join in electing one to be chief Governor, are Mahometans, live chiefly by plundering their Neighbours, and ſelling Priſoners for Slaves. They truſt to their inacceſſible Mountains, and chuſe the Muſcovites or Perſians to be their Protectors, as they ſee occaſion. The chief Town is Terki, on the Bank of the Caſpian Sea, Lat. 43 $\frac{1}{2}$. Long. 51. about 90 miles North from Derbent. 'Tis encompaſs'd by ſteep Rocks, which have good Paſtures on the Top; it has about 1000 Houſes, and is ſubject to the Czar.

III. Perſian Armenia lies Eaſt from Turkiſh Armenia, and South from Georgia. Places of Note are, (1.) Erivan the Capital, near the Conflux of the Aras and Chars, Lat. 41. Long. 47. about 178 miles South-Weſt from Teflis. The adjacent Country abounds with good Wine, and all other Neceſſaries for Life. It yields the King of Perſia a conſiderable Revenue by its Product, and the Paſſage of Caravans. The Governour has 170000 l. Sterling per annum, is one of the greateſt Men in Perſia, has always an Army to defend the Country againſt the Turks, and is oblig'd to defray the Charges of Ambaſſadors who come that way to the Perſian Court. The Town has a great Trade in Silk, and the Merchants pay a Duty to ſecure the Highway from Robbers. Moſt of the Houſes are of Mud-Wall, but one Story high, and each has a ſeparate Incloſure of ſix foot high. Few live in the City but the Governour and his Officers; Merchants and Tradeſmen live in the Suburbs. The Armenians have a Cathedral, four Churches, and a Monaſtery here. The Town is defended by a large Fortreſs, ſtrongly fortify'd, well mounted with Guns on its Terraſſes and Walls, and has a Precipice on the North-ſide, about an hundred Fathom high from the River. The Governour has a noble Palace, and a Gariſon of 2000 Perſians. The Armenians are allow'd to keep Shops in the Fortreſs by Day, but muſt retire in the Evening. About a mile North from the Fortreſs, on a Hill which commands it, there's a ſtrong Fort, well mounted with Cannon, and defended by 200 Men. The City is large, has many Vineyards and Gardens, and ſeveral Market-Places, Baths, and Inns within the Walls. The Perſians have ſeveral fair Moſques. The Summer is ſo hot, that many of the Inhabitants retire to the Mountains with their Cattel for Shade and Paſture. The Winter laſts long, and is cold, ſo that the Inhabitants bury their Vines till the Spring. Here are the beſt Trouts and Carps in the Eaſt, with other excellent Fiſh, and all other Proviſions in plenty. The Inhabitants ſay, this is the oldeſt Town in the World, and fancy it was built by Noah and his Sons, when they came down from Mount Ararat. About a League from hence they pretend to ſhew the Place where they planted a Vineyard. Tournefort ſays, the Wine here is extreme good, and the neighbouring Valley is one of the fineſt in Perſia, full of Villages, Orchards, Vineyards, Corn, Cotton, and Rice. This Town has been frequently taken and retaken by the Turks and Perſians, and by the latter in 1635. ſince which they have kept it. The King of Perſia led on the Storm in Perſon, and cut off the Gariſon of 20000 Turks, becauſe they would not ſurrender; which the Turks reveng'd barbarouſly, by putting all the Perſians in Babylon to the Sword, contrary to the Capitulation.

(2.) About 58 miles North-Eaſt from Erivan, there's a Lake of the ſame Name, 25 Leagues round, very deep, and full of excellent Carps, Trouts, and other Fiſh. It has a ſmall Iſland, with an antient Monaſtery in the middle. The Superiour is an Archbiſhop, and claims the Title of Patriarch. The Monks live very auſtere, and eat nothing but what their Garden produces, except it be four times a year, that they are allow'd to eat Fiſh, and converſe with one another, for at other times they are ſhut up in their Cells.

(3.) The Monaſtery of the Three Churches lies three Leagues Weſt from Erivan. 'Tis the chief Place of Armenian Devotion. Tournefort ſays, the Caravans ſtop here to confeſs, communicate, and receive the Patriarch's Bleſſing. The Convent is a long Square, with Cloiſters on the four ſides, and many Chambers for the Monks and Strangers, with a Dome to each. The Patriarch's Apartment is noble, and his Gardens fine. The Patriarchal Church is a ſtrong Building of fine hewn Stone, with many Pillars and Arches. 'Tis enrich'd with the fineſt Manufactures of Europe, preſented by the Armenian Merchants. Their Lamps, Candleſticks, and other Veſſels are all of Silver and Gold, and the Pavement of the Church covered with Carpets; the Place where the Altar ſtands is hung with Damask, Velvet, and Brocade. The Monks boaſt of the rich Preſents of Plate, &c. they have receiv'd from Rome, but laugh at a Reunion with that See, and threaten to depoſe any Patriarch that ſhould attempt it. They have many Legends about this Church, fancy the Plan of it was drawn by our Saviour, and pretend to have the Nails that faſten'd him to the Croſs, the Lance that pierc'd his Side, &c. They fancy Noah built the Ark where this Church ſtands, and ſacrific'd here after the Flood. Here are three other Churches. The Patriarch has a Juriſdiction over all the Armenians in Perſia and Turkey, has 22 Biſhops under him, and in the Territory of Erivan there are 23 Convents for Men, and 5 for Women. The adjacent Country, ſays Tournefort, is very fine, and he knows none that can give us a better Idea of Paradiſe. It abounds with all ſorts of Corn, Rice, Cotton, Flax, Vineyards, and the beſt Melons in the Levant. Here are very large Fields of Tobacco. After Rains the Fields betwixt this Place and the River Aras are cover'd with Salt, and in the Road from hence to Teflis, there are Pits of Foſſile Salt, enough to ſupply all Perſia. Near the Three Churches they ſhew the Ruins of the Palace of Tiridates King of Armenia, which conſiſt of four Rows of black Marble Columns, that were its Front.

(4.) Mount Ararat. Tournefort ſays, that it lies four days Journey South Eaſt from Three Churches, and is one of the moſt diſagreeable Sights upon Earth, has neither Trees, Shrubs, nor any Convents. The whole Soil of the Mountain is looſe, or cover'd with Snow. Here's a frightful Abyſs, into which Pieces of Rock continually fall with a terrible Noiſe. There are no living Creatures, but at the bottom, and towards the middle of the Mountain; at the foot there are ſome poor Shepherds and ſorry Flocks. Towards the middle there are Tygers; the Natives catch the young ones with Nets. Half of the Mountain is cover'd with Snow, and the Top of it is half the year cover'd with thick Clouds. He lay one night upon the Mountain, and with much difficulty got as high as the Snow; tho the fabulous Monks in the Plain ſay, the Ark is ſtill on the Top of it, to induce

Strangers

Strangers to come hither and give them Money. Cellarius quotes many Authors, to prove that the Gordian Mountains are those of Ararat, and that they are either a part of Taurus, or near it. The Curious may find more of this in Bochart's Phaleg. cap. 3. and in Dr. Wells's Geography of the Old Testament.

The CASPIAN SEA

HAS the Provinces last mention'd, and some others, on the West; part of the Muscovite and Tartarian Dominions on the North; part of Tartary and Persia on the East; and Persia on the South. Our Maps make it five hundred and ten Miles from South to North, and four hundred and eighty where broadest from East to West. Le Brun, who sail'd thro it from Muscovy to Persia in 1703, says, 'tis about three hundred Miles long, from Astracan to Ferchabad in Persia, and but two hundred and seventy broad; that the usual Passage from Muscovy to Persia by rowing takes up a Fortnight; that it has no Tide, and when it over-flows any where, 'tis owing to the Wind. Sailors say 'tis unfathomable in the middle; and before Derbent, and elsewhere, 'tis from thirty to forty Fathom deep. The Water is salt, except on the Coast, where its Freshness is ascrib'd to the great Number of Rivers, which some reckon an hundred, that fall into it. The chief are the Volga, the Kur, and Araxes. Few sail upon it but Russians and Turks. The Czar has Ships for that end at Astracan; but Merchants chuse rather to make use of the ordinary Russian Boats, because they are not so subject to take Water, tho the other would perform the Voyage in half the time, were due care taken. The Persian Shores on the South-side are for the most part too shallow for Vessels that draw much Water, and subject to many Tempests of Winds, which blow the Sands in such a manner as is dangerous to Travellers. It has no visible Communication with any other Sea: But some think it runs under ground into the Euxine, tho more probably into the Persian Gulph; because in the S. W. Corner of the Caspian, near the Province of Ghilan, there are two Whirlpools, which suck in the Water with such Rapidity and Noise, that Mariners carefully avoid them; and about Autumn great Quantities of Willow-Leaves are found in the Persian Gulph, tho there be no Tree of that sort in the South of Persia; but there are great Numbers of them on the Banks of the Caspian, near the Whirlpools above mentioned. The Holstein Ambassadors, who sail'd this Sea, confute the idle Stories of its being infested with numbers of Serpents and monstrous Fish; but say, it abounds with Porpoises and other Sea-Fish, and particularly with a deform'd sort call'd a Glutton, whose Head seems to be within its Belly. It has a round Tail seven or eight foot broad, and as many long, which they fasten to the Fisher-Boats, and are apt to over-turn them if the Men be not careful.

IV. The Province of Schirvan lies on the West-side of the Caspian, betwixt Dagheſtan on the North, Aderbeitzan on the South, and Persian Armenia on the West. 'Tis reckon'd an hundred Miles long. The chief Commodities are raw Silks, Cotton, Galls, and Allum. The Holstein Ambassadors say, it abounds with Rice, Corn, Vines, Wild Beasts, Fowls, and Foxes with woolly Skins, white Bellies, black Ears, and little Tails. The Inhabitants use Bufflers instead of Horses, and make excellent Butter and Cheese.

Places of Note are,

(1.) Schamachie, or Chamaquie, Lat. 41. Long. 52. Le Brun, who was here in 1703, says, 'tis a League round, lies on the side of a Mountain, the Houses meanly built of Stone and Mudwall, flat at top, and so low that one may touch the Roofs; yet the chief of 'em are handsome enough within, and hung with Tapestry, &c. and some two Stories high. The Mosques are numerous, but low. The Walls of the Town were demolish'd in 1635 by an Earthquake, to which the Country is subject. The Chan's Palace makes no great Appearance, tho he be almost absolute, keeps a noble Court, and has always 2500 Horse, 300 of which are his Guards when he goes abroad. 'Tis one of the best Governments in Persia for Revenue, so that the Chans soon grow rich by the Taxes they have from the Country, where there's abundance of Silk, Cotton, Saffron, and very good red and white Wine, the latter so strong that it must be mix'd with Water. The Bread here is admirable, the Fruit excellent; and they abound with Cattel, Fowl, and Game of all sorts, at easy Rates. The Town has several Market-Places, with all sorts of Goods and Trades, and twenty large Inns, where the chief Merchandize is sold. Those of the Indians are the finest, built of Stone, twenty four Foot high, and have forty Rooms joining to one another. The Holstein Ambassadors say, most of the Inhabitants are Armenians and Georgians, who have six Churches. There are three publick Baths in the Town, and great Fields of Liquorice in the Neighbourhood, larger and much sweeter than ours.

(2.) Pyrmavaes, four Leagues from Schamachie, a large Village, remarkable for Tombs of Persian and Turkish Saints, with spacious Apartments, the Floors of 'em cover'd with rich Tapestry or fine Mats, so that People must put off their Shoes when they enter them. Most of those Apartments are vaulted, and have large Portals with Columns. Some have Lamps, others are enlighten'd by Windows cut out of the Rocks; and near them are large Reservatories for Water, brought to them by Aqueducts, which seem to be antient, and have stone Troughs for Cattel to drink in. Those Places are visited by Mahometan Pilgrims, because of the Miracles which the Priests ascribe to the Reliques. We refer to our Author, who is very large on the Dimensions, Niches, Domes, Grottos, and other Ornaments of those Structures. There are Tombs of the like sort at Jediekombet, also in the Neighbourhood of Schamachie, of which Le Brun gives a curious Description.

(3.) Baku, or Bachu, on the Banks of the Caspian, about sixty Miles S. E. of Schamachie, has a very good Harbour, and is lately fortified by the Persians, who were jealous that the Czar would have seiz'd it, and made himself Master of the adjacent Countries, which he might easily have done. The Neighbourhood produces the best Nut-Oil in the World, of which great Quantities are exported. Within two or three Leagues of this Town the Country burns continually, the Soil is so full of Salt-Petre. About half a League N. W. from this Town lies the Mountain of Kala Kulustahan, noted for the noble Ruins of an antient Fortress, said to have been destroyed by Tamerlane. It has many subterraneous Vaults dug thro the Mountain, on the top of which there's a Well of extraordinary Depth. Near Baku there are Springs of Naptha, and one thought to be Petrolæum, much valued and exported.

(4.) Ganjie, an hundred and fifty Miles S. E. of Schamachie. 'Tis not in our Maps; but Le Brun says, 'tis one of the most considerable Towns in Persia, as he was inform'd by some Georgians and a French Missionary who liv'd there. It has fine Bazars, or Exchanges, for Merchandize, and noble Inns. The Governor's Palace is very stately, and has fine Gardens. The Country abounds with good Wine, all sorts of Fruit, Sena, Pines, and Cypress-Trees.

(5.) Schabran, the chief Town of the District of Muscru, now an open Town, but once fortified. The Ovens built by Alexander for his Army are still to be seen here. This District contains two hundred Villages, abounds with Barley, Rice, Wheat, and all sorts of excellent Fruits. The Holstein Ambassadors say, the Inhabitants are named Kurs. The Country is so full of Robbers, that there's no travelling without Guards, or in good Numbers.

V. The Province of Aderbeitzan is South from Schirvan and Persian Armenia, and has the Caspian Sea on the East. Sir John Chardin says, 'tis one of the largest in Persia, and contains great part of antient Media. The Temple where the old Persians kept and worshipp'd Fire lay here, two Days Journey from Schamachie. The Natives fancy the Fire to be still here; say, that it resembles a mineral and subterranean Fire; and that if one digs a Hole in the Ground, and sets a Pot over it, the Water will boil, tho no Fire be seen. 'Tis probable this may proceed from Sulphur.

Places of Note are,

(1.) The Peak of Damoan. Herbert says it abounds with Sulphur and Springs of Naptha, and has hot and cold Baths, much frequented. He rode up the Hill, from whence he saw the Caspian Sea, tho an hundred and sixty Miles distant. He found great Numbers of Jews here, who pretended to be the Offspring of those carried captive by Salmanassar, 2 Kings 17. 6. and they suppose the Ark to have rested on this Mountain. Near this Place he saw a Castle on the top of a large Rock, the Residence of a Prince, who commanded much of the Country, and defended himself against both Turks and Persians, till he and his Sons were murder'd at a Treaty by the latter, who have since kept possession.

(2.) Tauris, Lat. 58. near Long. 50. Sir John Chardin says, 'tis the second City in Persia for Grandeur, Riches, Trade, and Number of People. A small River runs thro it, and there's a large one on the North-side, with Salt Marshes. Here are 15000 Houses, and as many Shops apart from them in long Streets arch'd, fifty foot high, in the middle of the City. Most of the Houses have Gardens, and the Inhabitants reckon themselves 1150000. Here are many beautiful and rich Exchanges, three hundred Inns, some of them capable to lodge three hundred People, two hundred and fifty Mosques, and three neat Hospitals, where Victuals are given twice a day to those who come for it. The Piazza is large enough for 30000 Men to draw up in Order of Battel, and crowded every Evening by the Citizens to see the fighting of Bulls and Rams, and Dancing Wolves, which they buy sometimes at five hundred Crowns apiece. This Piazza is a Market in the Day-time for Provisions, and other Things of small Price; but the rich Goods are sold in their Exchanges, which are the largest in Asia. The Town is frequented by Merchants from all Parts, who have Magazines of all sorts of Goods, that are carried over Persia, Turky, Muscovy, Tartary, and the Indies. Here are great Manufactures of Cotton, Gold, and Silk, of which they work up six thousand Bales per Ann. Here's plenty of all sorts of excellent Provision. They have sixty sorts of Grapes, and many Quarries of white Marble, some of it transparent, which they say proceeds from a mineral Fountain, and hardens by degrees. Here are several mineral Fountains, both hot and cold, a Salt-Mine, and a Gold-Mine; but the latter does not answer the Expence of Workmanship. This City has suffer'd much by Earthquakes, Inundations, and Wars betwixt the Turks and Persians. The latter took it by Stratagem in 1603, and have kept it ever since. Some think it to be the Shushan, mentioned in Esther. Josephus says, it was founded by Daniel the Prophet. Sir John Chardin says, the Governor of the Province resides here, is one of the greatest in Persia, has three thousand Horse in constant Pay, and four Chans and twenty Sultans under him, who keep eleven thousand more. His annual Revenue is above a Million Sterling, besides considerable Perquisites. There are many Artificers in Iron; and the greatest part of the Shagreen Skins in Persia are dress'd here: They are made of the Hinder-parts of the Skins of Horses, Mules, and Asses; the latter are the best. Tavernier says, Money abounds more in this City than in any other in Asia. Most of the Houses are of Brick, two Stories high, and terrass'd at top. Some of their Mosques are very magnificent, and were formerly Churches. Ruins of several antient Monasteries and Tombs of Median Kings, that have been stately Structures, are seen in the Neighbourhood. Snow lies on the Mountains which surround it nine Months in the Year, which makes the Air cold, but healthful. They have frequent Rains in Winter, but little in Summer. The Wind blows almost every Morning and Evening.

(3.) Ardevil, twenty miles East of Tauris, famous for a Market of Silk, and the truly Royal Mausoleum of Sha-Sefi, the first of the Name, King of Persia. The Town is large and pleasant, because of its Gardens; the Avenues are handsomely planted with Trees. It has several fine Exchanges, Inns for Merchants, and many stately Mosques, with an Armenian Church; but the Houses are of Mudwall, and the Streets dirty and narrow. It was formerly the Residence of the Persian Kings. 'Tis suppos'd to be the Arbela of Quintus Curtius. The Market-Place is handsome and large, with noble Inns that have a Prospect into the King's Gardens. The Entrance of the Mausoleum of Sha-Sefi fronts the Market-Place. It is a very magnificent Structure of fine Architecture, vaulted, and the Stones painted of different Colours. It consists of several Courts, and many Apartments, as a Gallery, a large Hall with a Dome, a Library, and Rooms where the Coffins of that Prince and several others of the Royal Family are kept. Several of the the Gates are plated with Silver, and there are Niches in the Walls painted of several Colours. The Places where the Coffins are kept are rail'd in with Balluſters of Silver or Gold. There are vaſt Numbers of Lamps of both Metals; and the Steps which go up to them the like. We cannot inſiſt on the Particulars; but the Riches of this Place are ſo immenſe, by the Plate, Tapeſtry, the Preſents made by Pilgrims, and its ſettled Revenues, that the Officers belonging to it have more ready Money than the King, and are able to raiſe a good Army upon occaſion. The bigotted Perſians have ſuch a Veneration for this Place, that when their King Sha-Abbas deſign'd to have deſtroyed it, to prevent its falling into the hands of the Turks, they were ready to rebel, ſo that he was oblig'd to content himſelf with removing the Riches only for a time. In the Library there's abundance of curious Manuſcripts in Arabick, Perſian, and Turkiſh, finely writ and painted, richly bound up, and cover'd with Plates of Gold and Silver. They have alſo vaſt Numbers of China Veſſels, with which they entertain Princes and Grandees. The very Kitchen-Doors are plated with Silver; and the chief Cook ſits in a Silver Chair, and ſees Alms diſtributed to a thouſand People every day.

(4.) Sultania, Lat. 37. Long. 52. 'Twas once the Metropolis, and the biggeſt City of Perſia. Sir John Chardin ſays, it is ſtill remarkable for publick Structures, has 3000 Houſes, and many Remains about it of its antient Grandeur. It was the Reſidence of the Kings of Armenia, and, as ſome ſay, had eight or nine hundred Churches and Chappels: But here are no Chriſtians now. 'Tis chiefly remarkable for the Sepulchre of Mahomet Chodabendi, who conquer'd part of the Indies, and obtain'd many Victories over the Turks and Tartars. It has three Gates of fine poliſh'd Steel, much higher than thoſe of St. Mark at Venice. The Workmanſhip about the Tomb exceeds all in Perſia. The Tower is Octogon, encompaſs'd with a Gallery containing eight leſſer Towers, all mounted with Artillery. The whole Structure is magnificent; and there are fine Gardens, with a ſtately Moſque, and a noble Pyramid within the Court, ſurrounded by eight fine Marble Pillars.

(5.) Carbin, Lat. 37. Long. 53. It conſiſts of three Cities join'd in one, and was the Reſidence of their Kings in Winter; but is much decay'd ſince the Court remov'd to Iſpahan. Sir John Chardin ſays, 'tis ſtill ſix Miles round, has 12000 Houſes, and 100000 Inhabitants, among whom there are ſome Families of Chriſtians and Jews. The Royal Piazza is very large. The Perſian Grandees have Palaces here; and there are many ſtately Caravanſeras: The Royal one has 250 Canals of Water, and a large Fountain in the middle, encompaſs'd with Trees, and two Gates, which front two Streets, where the richeſt Merchandize is ſold. The King's Palace is very ſumptuous, built of Bricks, varniſh'd and painted on the out-ſide with Arabian Figures in Gold and Azure. Moſt of the Rooms are arch'd, the Roofs and Sides finely painted in Groteſque, and the Floors ſpread with rich Carpets of Silk and Gold. When the Turks took this City, they found a Carpet in the Palace ſixty Cubits ſquare, woven with Silk, Silver, and Gold, and embroider'd with precious Stones of an ineſtimable Value, repreſenting Herbs and Flowers of all Colours. Figueroa, the Spaniſh Ambaſſador, ſays, he was receiv'd here by two hundred Perſian Grandees, all habited in Cloth of Gold; the Hilts of their Swords and Daggers were of that Metal, and adorn'd with precious Stones. Here are about fifty Moſques, and the Royal one is ſaid to be the faireſt in Perſia. The Town is well frequented by Merchants from Europe, and moſt Parts of Aſia, who trade in Silks, Tapeſtries, Pearls, Precious Stones, Corn, Fruit, Spice, and Drugs. In the Neighbourhood are the faireſt Grapes in Perſia, of a Gold Colour, tranſparent, and as big as ſmall Olives. They make the ſtrongeſt Wine in the World, but luſcious and thick. They are dry'd, and tranſported all over the Kingdom.

(6.) Hamadan, Lat. 36. Long. 52. Tavernier ſays, it is one of the largeſt Cities in Perſia, and lies in a fruitful Country, which furniſhes moſt of the neighbouring Provinces with Corn and Rice. Thevenot ſays, it has many void Places, Gardens, and Corn-Fields within the Walls; but has never been refortified ſince diſmantled by the Turks. 'Tis govern'd by a Chan, had formerly the Title of a Kingdom, and fifteen other Cities under it. The Armenians have a Church, and there are more Jews here than any where in Perſia, becauſe many come from all Parts in Pilgrimage to the Tombs of Mordecai and Eſther, which they pretend to have in their Synagogue. The Air and Water are bad. Lucas ſays, that a League from the Town there's a Mountain, call'd that of the Sun. 'Tis above a League long, and high, and joins to other Mountains. The Natives ſays, it produces Herbs of ſuch Virtue, that ſeveral People have liv'd above two hundred Years upon it; and that it bears none of any malignant Quality. Many People come hither in the Spring from the neighbouring Provinces to recover their Health, which they frequently do by lying only upon the Herbs. Lucas ſays, the Odours of 'em are ſo ſweet, that he never found any Place ſo agreeable. He gather'd a Sallet of four hundred ſeveral ſorts at a venture, and found it excellent and delicious. 'Tis ſaid the famous Avicen ſtudied Simples here a great while. There are the Ruins of abundance of Houſes upon it, which ſome ſay were Hermites Cells, and others, that they were built for Entertainment of Botaniſts. The Wool of the Sheep which feed upon it is longer and finer than others. They have noble Wine in this Country; Bread, Meat, and all ſorts of Fruit very cheap. The Town has a conſiderable Trade in Cloths and Stuffs; and there's abundance of Fruit-Trees in the Places and Streets. Ogilby ſays, its Juriſdiction extends thirty Leagues, and contains fifteen Towns, inhabited moſtly by Merchants.

(7.) Kom, Lat. 35. Long. 54. one of the oldeſt Towns in Perſia, ſuppoſed to be the Grecian Hecatompolis. Some ſay it was as big as Babylon. Herbert ſays, it appears by the Ruins to have been much larger than when he ſaw it. Sir John Chardin ſays, that in his time it had 15000 Houſes, had been well fortify'd, but the Works were then in decay; that here were ſeveral large beautiful Bazars, and their chief Trade conſiſted in Fruit, Soap, Sword-Blades, and Earthen-Ware, noted for its peculiar Quality of ſuddenly cooling and clearing Water put into it in Summer, but not to be us'd above five or ſix Days, becauſe the Pores are ſo ſtopp'd with Mud, that the Water filtres no more thro into the Veſſels ſet underneath to receive it. This City has many fair Inns and Moſques, and particularly one famous for the Sepulchres of two late Kings of Perſia, &c. Sir John ſays, it has four Courts: The firſt planted with Trees and Flowers, with an Alley in the middle, ſeparated from the Plots by a Balluſtrade, and Terraſſes with a great Number of large vaulted Chambers on each ſide. The laſt King of Perſia erected a Tent here that coſt 150000 l. and called it the Houſe of Gold, becauſe it glitters with that Metal. The Antichamber was form'd of Velvet, with a Ground of Gold. The other Courts are magnificent, with Stairs and Portals of white tranſparent Marble; the Door-Caſes the like, and the Doors plated with Silver, embelliſh'd with Vermillion, gilt, carv'd, and poliſh'd. The Chappel is octogonal, with a high Dome, and the lower part cover'd with large Tiles of Porphyry, wav'd and painted with Flowers of Gold, and Colours ſo lovely, as they dazzle one's Eyes. We cannot inſiſt on Particulars; but the Architecture and Richneſs of the Furniture and Ornaments are ſo ſurprizing, that had not Sir John been a Man of Reputation, his Deſcription might paſs for a Romance. The Place is much frequented by Pilgrims, becauſe of the Tomb of Fatima, one of Ali's Daughters, in the middle of the Chappel, where there are Silver Lamps of great Value, and the Floor is ſpread with Carpets of Silk and Gold. He adds, that the Chappels which have the Tombs of the Kings, have Domes with a double Row of twenty four Windows, glaz'd with Panes of Chryſtal, painted with Gold and Azure, and faſten'd in Maſſy Silver. Over the Tombs there are Lamps of Maſſy Gold, hung upon Rods of Silver; and the Tombs are cover'd with rich Cloth of Gold, worth betwixt ſixty and ſeventy Pounds Sterling an Ell; and all the Veſſels belonging to the Chappels are of Gold and Silver, not excepting thoſe which are us'd in the Kitchens. The ſettled Revenue of the Place is 11000 l. Sterling per Ann. which with the Preſents made by the Pilgrims makes its Riches immenſe. Tavernier ſays, that in the Piazza of the City he ſaw a great Number of Tumblers and Puppet-Players, divided into two Bands, who brought each of them a Bull led by the Horns, the one called Mahomet, and the other Hali. They let thoſe Creatures looſe in the Ring, and after an obſtinate Fight with one another, till both foam'd with Rage, Mahomet quitted the Field, and left Hali the Victory. This is done in contempt of the Turks; for the Managers know which of the Bulls is the beſt Fighter. When Hali obtain'd the Victory, the People ſhouted for Joy, came running to adore the Bull Hali, and cried out in a blaſphemous manner, Behold the wonderful Works of God, that Hali has made. Then all the People made Preſents to the Bull, and the Chan, who was there with an hundred Horſes richly accouter'd to ſee the Fight, gave him ſeven hundred and fifty Crowns. All this Money is divided betwixt the Prieſts and the Tumblers.

(8.) Kaſchan, about forty five Miles S. E. from Kom. Sir John Chardin ſays, it lies in a Plain, is a League long, and a quarter of a League broad, is encompaſs'd with a double Wall, flank'd with round Towers, has ſix thouſand five hundred Houſes, forty Moſques, three Colleges, and two hundred Sepulchres of Ali's Deſcendants. The Houſes are of Earth and Bricks, meanly built; but the Bazars and Baths are noble Structures, and well kept. It has ſeveral large Inns; but the Royal one here, Sir John ſays, is the faireſt in Perſia. 'Tis a ſquare Structure, and each Front two hundred Paces long. It conſiſts of two Stories, with an Antichamber along the Fronts eight Foot high, and pav'd with white tranſparent Marble. The Apartments are numerous and large. There are Shops at the Entrance, with all ſorts of Proviſion for Men and Beaſts. Over the Gate there's a high and magnificent Portal, adorn'd with Moſaick, as is all the reſt of the Inn. In the middle of the Court there's a noble Fountain, and on the back of the Inn large Stables, with Houſes for Servants, Goods, and lodging the Poor, and large Gardens behind all. Near this Inn ſtands the Royal Palace, which is very ſumptuous, and another over-againſt it for Ambaſſadors, with a Square for publick Exerciſes on horſeback. In the Garden there's a Summer-Houſe with a thouſand Doors and Windows. All theſe were built by Abbas the Great. The Manufactures here are Silk, Sattin, Velvet, Tabby, and Tiſſues of Gold and Silver, made in ſuch Quantities, that ſingle Boroughs belonging to the Diſtrict of this City have one thouſand and two theuſand Houſes inhabited by Silk-Weavers. Here's alſo a conſiderable Trade in coining and making Veſſels of Copper, ſtaining Linen, and painting Leather. The Air is ſo violently hot in Summer, that it ſcalds. The People are much infeſted by Scorpions at all times, but eſpecially when the Sun is in Scorpio; ſo that every one is provided with a ſovereign Remedy againſt them, which is a piece of Copper-Money, that they put on the Wound, take it off after four and twenty Hours, and apply a Plaſter of Honey and Vinegar. The Holſtein Ambaſſadors ſay, they are very black, of the Length and Thickneſs of a Man's Finger, and run faſter than Crab-Fiſhes, with their Tails always ſticking up. One of them ſtung a Servant of theirs at Schamachie, which occaſion'd a painful Swelling in his Mouth: But Oil of Scorpions being immediately applied to the Wound, and a good Doſe of Venice-Treacle taken inwardly, the Pain was allay'd in three Hours, and quite remov'd in two Days; but for ſome Years he had Returns of Pain in the Autumn. Here's alſo an Inſect like a Spider, about two Inches round, which the Ambaſſadors ſuppoſe to be the Latin Stellio, and the Italian Tarantula. It lets its Poiſon fall like a Drop of Water, which cauſes an inſupportable Pain in the Part, communicates the Venom forthwith to the Stomach, and ſends up ſuch Vapours to the Head, as immediately cauſe a profound Sleep, from which the Patient is not to be recover'd but by cruſhing one of thoſe Creatures on the Wound; or if that can't be had, they pour as much Milk down the Patient's Throat as they can. After which they lay him on a Bier, faſten'd with Cords at the four Corners to a Beam. Then turning the Bier round till the Cords are twiſted, they let it go on a ſudden; ſo that by untwiſting the Ropes, and the violent Agitation thereby occaſion'd in the Patient's Head and Stomach, he vomits up the Milk, which looks greeniſh with the Poiſon, and a certain Matter iſſues from his Yard with exceſſive Pain, of which they have Returns once a Year at the ſame Seaſon. Tavernier ſays there are a thouſand Families of Jews here, who pretend to be of the Tribe of Judah. Le Brun ſays, every Houſe has a Well, beſides three hundred publick Ciſterns in the Town.

Within a Day's Journey of this Place there are two ſtrong Dams, built by Sha-Abbas, betwixt two Mountains, to contain the Water that comes down from them when it rains, or the Snow melts; which formerly us'd to over-flow the Country, and is now let out by Sluices to water the neighbouring Plains. Beyond these Mountains there's a deep narrow Valley about a League long; and so full of Houses, Vineyards, and Gardens, that it looks like one continued Village. Sir John Chardin thinks this to be the Plain where Darius was murder'd, because it lies directly in the Road to Hyrcania and Bactriana, whither the Murderers fled.

(9.) Nattens, two Days Journey from Kaschan, in the Road to Ispahan. Figueroa, the Spanish Ambassador, says, 'tis a large Town, and lies in a fruitful Valley; that at the Entrance of the Town there's a noble Mosque, with an Inn for Pilgrims and Travellers. He mentions a great Plane-Tree here, whose Trunk is seven Fathom round; its Branches so extraordinary big, that they exceed the Trunks of the largest Trees in Europe, and extend so wide, that a whole Caravan may lodge under them. 'Tis encompass'd by a Wall twelve Paces on each side from its Roots, where Travellers place their Beds and Baggage; and he himself lodg'd here, with a Train of two hundred Horses and Camels plac'd round the Wall with great Ease. The Branches and Leaves are so thick, that the Rays of the Sun don't pierce thro them. It is so old, that the Inhabitants say they have no Accounts which reach so high. There's a Stream runs thro under the Walls, which adds to the Conveniency of the Place. He compares it to the Tree which Licinius Mucianus met with in Asia Minor, when he travell'd from Antioch to Rome.

(10.) Ispahan, Lat. 33. Long. 54. is the Metropolis of Persia. 'Tis very antient, and mention'd by old Writers under several Names. Herbert thinks it Ptolemy's Aspadana, because it agrees with his Latitude; and supposes it to be that called Spada, where Eunuchs were first gelded. He says, that in his Time it was nine Miles round, contain'd 70000 Houses, and 2000000 People, and had Merchants of most Nations. The Holstein Ambassadors make it and the Suburbs eight Leagues round, reduce the Houses to 18000, and the Inhabitants to 500000. The Fortifications are of Earth, and inconsiderable. Sir John Chardin, who staid ten Years in this City, and was the King of Persia's Merchant, spends eighty four Pages in describing it. He says, 'tis one of the largest Cities in the World, and with the Suburbs is twelve French Leagues round. The Inhabitants are by many reckon'd 1100000, and they who reckon least make them 600000; but all the Memoirs given him agreed that the Number of Houses in City and Suburbs was 38249. Upon the whole, he supposes Ispahan to contain as many People as London, which he says is the most populous City in Europe: But Ispahan does not appear so populous, because all their Women are kept up, and none but the meaner sort allow'd to go abroad about Business. The chief Beauty of the City consists in its great Number of magnificent Palaces, Pleasure-Houses, spacious Caravanseras, fine Bazars, Canals, and those Streets which are planted with high Plane-Trees on both sides. The Walls of the City, excluding the Suburbs, are twenty Miles round, but so cover'd with Houses and Gardens, that in many Places they are not to be discern'd. The City is wash'd on the S. and S. W. by the River Zenderout, divided into two Branches, one of which falls into the Park, and the other is convey'd by Canals to the Royal Gardens, and by Pipes to supply the City with Water; besides which, they are well stor'd with Springs. This River, where the Stone Bridge lies over it, betwixt the City and the Royal Garden, is as broad as the Thames at London, but not deep, except in Winter, when it does Mischief by its Inundations. Sir John says there's another River call'd Mahmoudker, join'd to it by Art. It flows from a deep Lake betwixt rocky Mountains. The River in several Places runs thro Cavities in the Mountains; and among others there's a round Passage as big as four Tons, through which the River runs, like a Pipe, and falls into a large deep Basin made by Nature and Art, and from thence it glides thro the Plain, and falls into Zenderout. The Lake from whence Mahmoudker proceeds is so deep that it can't be sounded, is suppos'd to come from Snow that melts in the Mountains, because the Water is sharp on the Tongue, and does not quench Thirst. Sha-Abbas design'd to have join'd the River Abkuren likewise to Zenderout, and imployed many thousand Pioneers to dig thro the Mountains which divide them. Herbert says, he brought it within 200 Paces; but when he died, his Successors gave over the Work. Sanson says, it was stopp'd by some selfish Lords, because it would have made the Plains of Ispahan fruitful enough to supply the City with Provision, and so have lessen'd their Rents. Sir John says it miscarry'd by the sulphureous Steams that kill'd the Workmen as they dug thro the Mountains, and partly by the great Frosts and Snow that demolish'd their Works during the Winter. The Bridges over the River are very curious and magnificent Structures. Le Brun, who was here in 1704, says, that call'd Alla-Werdie-Chan is five hundred forty Paces long, seventeen broad, built of large Stones, and has thirty three Arches, with ninety three Niches, some shut, and others open, and the two Ends are flank'd with four Towers. Figueroa says, there are six Passages over the Bridge, viz. three above, that in the middle broad enough for two Coaches to go a-breast, and one on each side, being an arch'd Passage from the one End of the Walls to the other, for those who go on foot, and three of the same sort in the Story underneath, with Stairs so easy, that Horses may go down to them; and there are two other Passages for People on foot, one on each side, above the Arches, thro which the River runs, which are of white Stone. The Bridge of Hassan-Abaet, on the East-side of the City, is an hundred eighty eight Paces long, sixteen wide, and built of hewn Stone, with two and forty Niches on each side, some open, and others shut. It has twenty eight Arches, and the Structure in the middle of the Bridge has Windows on each side, and Stairs from the upper part. There's a third call'd Sadet-Abad, which is also a noble Structure, much of the same sort; and a fourth called Ziarestan, which is also very magnificent. Nothing can be more pleasant than the Alleys, planted with Trees, from those Bridges on each side the River.

The great Meidan, or Market-Place, is one of the stateliest, and, Sir John Chardin says, the most universal Market or Fair in the World. Le Brun says, it is 710 Paces long, and 210 broad. Sir John says, there are above 50000 Lamps here, divided into 120 upon an Arch; which being lighted on solemn Occasions, make the noblest Illumination in the World. The Royal Mosque on the South-side is one of the richest Structures in the Universe, of marvellous Architecture, adorn'd with Niches of 1000 sorts of Figures, beautified with Gold Azure, transparent Marble, and Jasper, &c. It has large Courts, with Piazzas round them, supported by Marble Pillars, and adorn'd with Fountains fac'd with Jasper. Over the Portico in the middle there's a Dome of the best Architecture in Persia, and so high, that 'tis seen at four Leagues distance. In this Mosque is kept the bloody Shirt, in which they say Hussein was murder'd. 'Tis guarded with the greatest Care; for the Priests make the Persians believe that when their Country is reduc'd to the greatest Danger, the exposing of this Shirt will put their Enemies to flight. The Revenue of this Mosque is 5000 l. Sterling per Annum; and there are Vaults under it, to which the People retire during the Heat of Summer. The noblest Entrance into the Meidan is thro that call'd the Imperial Gate, which has a stately Dome, adorn'd with Tiles of China curiously painted; the Floors pav'd, and the Walls fac'd with Jasper and Porphyry, and painted with Battels, &c. The Palace is on the same side, a League and a half round: The chief Pile is of Mosaick Work, supported by eighteen Pillars of Marble thirty foot high, turn'd and gilt. It has many Apartments; the Walls of which are fac'd with white Marble, painted, and gilt half way up, and the rest lin'd with Chrystal of several Colours. The King's Throne stands in an Alcove twelve Paces long, and eight broad. The Hall is finely painted with Battels in some Parts, and lascivious Pictures in others. 'Tis supported by forty Pillars, painted and gilt. There are Curtains all round of Cloth of Gold flower'd, which are drawn on the side where the Sun enters, and extended in form of a Tent, which makes the Hall very cool. The Walls of the Seraglio are very high. It has large pleasant Gardens, with Water-Works and Ponds, in which there are gilt Barges for the Ladies. Over-against the Palace there's a noble Structure for the King's Musick, consisting of two Galleries on each side the Imperial Gate. Two hundred and sixty six Paces from the Royal Mosque above mention'd, is the Gate of Ali's Palace, which is a Sanctuary for Criminals. The King has no power to seize those who enter it, even tho guilty of High Treason; but he may forbid giving them Victuals, and so starve them, or make them quit the Place. He kisses the Gate of this Palace with great Ceremony, and never passes by it on horseback. The Sophi's who guard this Sanctuary make great Profit by extorting Money from Creditors and Criminals. All round the Meidan there are fine Buildings in form of Porticoes, which serve for Shops; and over them a Range of Arches more backward, which serve for Galleries and Passages to the adjoining Caravanseras; and being all of an equal Height, form a lovely Prospect. Before the Houses, at some distance, there's a fair Canal, with Rows of Trees, which makes the Place exceeding delightful. At Sun-set and Midnight there are three Consorts of Musick, which play from the Royal Galleries with several sorts of Instruments, among which there's one like a Speaking-Trumpet, heard all over the City; but more fit to alarm than divert. The middle of this Piazza is fill'd with Tents, where all sorts of Goods are sold, but pack'd up at Night, when Guards are appointed to go the Rounds with fierce Dogs. In the Evenings this Place is filled with People of all sorts, to play at the Mall, &c. and in the middle there's a high Mast, with a round Ball at top, where the People exercise Archery on horseback by shooting backward, like the Parthians, at the Representations of Birds, &c. at which some of them are wonderful expert. When the King shoots, a Cup of Gold is fixt as the Prize on the top of the Mast. Here are also Bull-fightings, about which the different Quarters of the City lay Wagers, and many times quarrel. The King stands neuter; gives the Master of the Bull that wins a considerable Sum; and they that wager'd on his Side likewise give him Money. At the sides of the Palace-Gates stands an hundred and nineteen Cannon with their Carriages, which the Persians brought from Ormus when they took it by help of the English; but they are very ill kept.

Sir John Chardin gives a large Description of the Fortress, and of the Treasure contain'd in it. He says, there's no Place in the World has so much Riches. He obtain'd a sight of them by a particular Favour. The number of precious Stones, the quantity of Gold-Plate, and of Arms of all sorts set with the richest Jewels, is incredible. He says they amount to many Millions, but we refer to him for the Particulars. The Doors and Windows are fortify'd with Bars of Iron, and strong Guards are continually kept since 1666, when three Persons of Note stole so many Jewels from hence, that they liv'd at an excessive Rate. The Robbery was discover'd by one of them, who offer'd to sell the Hilt of a Dagger, worth 30000 Crowns, to an Indian Jeweller for 8000, upon which he and his Accomplices were apprehended and punish'd.

Sir John says, the great Mosque or Cathedral here is the largest and most magnificent in Persia; it takes up above four Acres of Ground, is square, has abundance of Domes, many high Towers, seven great Gates, is cover'd with enamel'd Tiles, painted a la Moresque, with lively shining Colours; and the Walls, for eight foot high, faced with curious waved Porphyry. Before it there's a spacious Court, with Cloisters all round, supported by Pillars of Porphyry, and has several large Fountains for their Purifications.

The Street, Walks, and Gardens of Chiaerbag are the most ornamental and remarkable things about Ispahan. Sir John says, King Abbas the Great saw every Tree in this Walk planted, and put under each a piece of Gold of fourteen Shillings Value, and a piece of Silver of eighteen Pence, and order'd each of his Grandees to build a House in the Walks at the Entrance of the Gardens, in which they outvy'd one another. The Street is two miles long, and a hundred Paces broad. Over the Entry to it from the City there's a square Pavilion, built by Abbas, from whence he could see all the Gardens, and the Length of the Street. 'Tis two Stories high, with many Balconies and painted Windows; and there's a Passage from hence to the Palace by a Gallery. The Street is bounded on both sides by Garden-Walls, and at certain Distances there are uniform Pavilions over the Gates into the Gardens of the King and Nobility; and about twelve Paces from the Wall on each side a Row of Plane-Trees, which yield a refreshing Shade. In the middle of the Street there's a Canal of running Water, five foot deep, and thirteen broad, fac'd with Stone, and adorn'd here and there with curious Water-works; and from the sides of the Canal to the Passage for Horses, the Street is pav'd with Stone for those who walk on foot. This Street is divided by the

Zen-

Zenderout, over which ſtands the noble Bridge above-mention'd; and there's a Croſs-Walk betwixt Garden-Walls, fill'd with Benches, Chairs, and Tables, where Multitudes of People ſmoke and drink Coffee in the Evening under ſhady Trees. Sir John Chardin ſays, this is the nobleſt and fineſt Walk that ever he ſaw or heard of.

The King's Gardens lie at the end of the Street, have many Croſs-Walks, with Canals and Terraſſes, fine Water-works, Caſcades, Baſins, &c. Theſe Gardens are not adorn'd with Plats of Graſs or Flowers, as ours in Europe, but planted with Fruit-Trees, Roſe-Buſhes, and Planes. There are many Pavilions in the King's Gardens, upon which Sir John ſays there are Inſcriptions, containing ſuch refin'd Morality, ſo much Contempt of the World, and ſuch an intire Submiſſion to the Will of God, as may put moſt Chriſtians to the bluſh, to ſee themſelves exceeded in their Contemplations by Mahometans, tho the Alcoran, the Rule of their Faith and Manners, is ſo fooliſh and impure, whereas our Bible is divinely inſpir'd. We cannot inſiſt on the noble and rich Apartments in thoſe Pavilions, and other Curioſities in the Gardens, where there are ſeveral Trees, which the Mahometans reckon ſacred for their Antiquity, lay ſick Perſons under them to recover their Health, and the Prieſts perform their Devotions under their Shade. Here are innumerable ſorts of Trees from all Parts of the World, among others Vines, with large Grapes without Stones, and of a delicious Taſte. The King has a hundred Gardiners, who let in any body for two Pence to eat what they pleaſe, but not to carry any away.

One of the moſt remarkable things here is the Tower, in the middle of the City, built of the Horns and Bones of Beaſts, which Sha-Abbas and his Courtiers kill'd at one hunting, as they give out; but Herbert, who ſaw it, ſays 'tis mix'd with Mens Skulls, occaſion'd thus: Their King Sha-Tamas cut off 30000 of the Citizens who rebell'd againſt him in 1500, and erected this Tower of their Heads; and the City having likewiſe rebell'd againſt Abbas the Great, he took it by Storm, and ſwore he would cut off the Heads of all the Citizens, and enlarge the Tower with them. Accordingly for two hours after the Storm he kill'd Multitudes; but the Mufti prevented the farther Slaughter by pretending a Viſion, wherein he was told, that if the King compleated the Pillar with Heads of Beaſts, 'twas enough to fulfil his Vow. Sir John Chardin ſays, it ſtands in the middle of a Square, ſurrounded with Shops. The Pedeſtal is three foot high from the Ground, and the Tower ſixty foot higher. It reſembles a Pyramid of Columns, raiſed above one another, divided by Capitals, that ſeem Pedeſtals to the other Columns. Theſe Capitals are formed of Thigh-Bones, ſo joined, that they look very well. The Bodies of the Columns are compoſed of the ſmalleſt Bones and Horns, and the Symmetry ſo exact, that the Skill and Induſtry of the Workmen is to be admired: The Balcony and Tops of the Pillars are formed of the talleſt Stags-Horns, and the whole is mixed with Mens Skulls. Sir John ſays, their Hiſtorians give out, that it was built during a Feaſt in ſeven or eight hours time; and that the Architect coming to tell the King, that the Tower was raiſed, and all the Heads uſed, but that there wanted one of ſome great Beaſt for the Top; the King being heated with his Liquor, anſwered, that he knew not at preſent where to meet with a greater Beaſt than himſelf, and ordered his Head to be cut off to finiſh the Work.

The City in general looks like contiguous Villages, joined by Gardens, excepting the Meidan and principal Streets. The Trades have each their ſeparate Places, and here are Manufactories of Tiſſues, Silks, Sattins, and Carpets, maintain'd at the King's Charge; and a great many Chriſtians, who come every day from the Suburb of Zulfa, on the other ſide the River, are employed upon them in the Palace. His Majeſty has 32 Workhouſes for Artificers of all ſorts, which coſt him five Millions French per annum. Here are many Bazars and Inns, where Merchants lodge their Goods with all Safety, becauſe the Maſters are anſwerable for them, and likewiſe for the Money of thoſe who purchaſe them, and for the two per cent. to the King.

The City has many Suburbs, but the chief is Zulpha, inhabited by Armenians, who have 12 Churches, and 4000 Houſes, as good as any in the City. Moſt of them are Merchants and rich Tradeſmen. They are allowed a Governour of their own Nation, Liberty of Conſcience, and to purchaſe Eſtates. Many other Chriſtians have join'd them becauſe of their Liberty, which Sha-Abbas granted, who furniſhed them Stocks to increaſe the Trade of his Country; and that they might be eaſy, forbad any Mahometans to come among them. Many of them got great Eſtates, and the King chiefly employed them in managing foreign Trade, both to his own and their Advantage; but theſe wiſe Maxims are now neglected. Tavernier ſays, here are not above 600 Papiſts, who are much hated by the Armenians. There are three other Suburbs, one inhabited by a Colony brought from Tauris; another by Georgians, who are rich as well as the Armenians; and a third by Gaurs, or Worſhippers of Fire. Sir John Chardin ſays, there's about 1000 People named Kaulys, ſcattered in the Suburbs, the moſt villanous Race that ever was heard of. The Perſian Prieſts give a fabulous Account of their Origin, but Sir John ſays they are ſuch a lazy naſty People, that the very ſight of them is enough to turn one's Stomach. They lie idle all day, go a robbing all night, live without any Senſe of Religion or Order, couple promiſcuouſly like Brutes, without regard to Kindred, and are ſo ignorant, that when called before a Magiſtrate for their Crimes, they can't give a ſenſible Anſwer. The Holſtein Ambaſſadors ſay, there are 12000 Indians here, who deal in the richeſt Commodities. Sir John gives two Inſtances to prove the vaſt Trade of this City, which ſeem almoſt incredible; the firſt, that an Inhabitant gain'd a Million French, by letting out Tents to thoſe who retail things in the Market at a Half-penny a day per Tent; the ſecond is of a Jeweller, who travelled into the Mogul's Country, bought above 700000 Livres worth of the richeſt Indian Stuffs, three Diamonds worth 500000 Livres, and left his Son above two Millions, and a large Palace built by himſelf, with ſuch noble Apartments and Furniture, as were fit to entertain the greateſt Prince. Sir John ſays, the Holſtein Ambaſſadors were ſent hither on the Project of one Brugman a Hamburg Merchant, the chief of the Embaſſy, to carry on a Trade of Perſian Silks by way of Muſcovy, and the Hamburghers engaged the Duke of Holſtein in it for the greater Authority; but when they came there, and found the Profit would not anſwer the Charge, they pretended their Errand was to engage the Perſians in a War with the Turks. The King perceived this to be only a Shift, and preſſed to know their true Deſign, becauſe he was willing to oblige them, which they were aſhamed to own; and upon their Return Brugman was beheaded, on pretence of his ill Behaviour in Perſia, which was brutiſh enough; but the true Cauſe was his engaging the Duke and the Hamburghers in ſo fooliſh an Enterprize. The Engliſh, Dutch, Portugueſe, and French have Factories here. The Holſtein Ambaſſadors ſay, the Houſes for moſt part are ſquare, and four Stories high; their Windows generally as big as Doors, and covered in Winter with oiled Paper. Fire-wood being ſcarce, they dig a large Hole in the middle of the Floor, which they fill with Charcoal, covered with a Plank, lay a Carpet over all; and as they always ſit on the Ground, draw the Carpet up to their Breaſts, thruſt their Feet under it, and have Conduits under Ground, which draw off the Vapours of the Charcoal. The Houſes being either of Mud-wall, Plaſter'd, or of Sun-dried Bricks, are ſoon damaged by Rain or Snow, which, with the Streets being unpaved, make them duſty in Summer, and dirty in Winter, except where the great Merchants live, who take more care of their Houſes and Streets. In other Places they are narrow and uneven, as well as dirty, ſo that Perſons of Note ride here in Summer with Lacqueys to clear the way, but in the Winter no body is to be ſeen in thoſe Streets; for the Perſians are ſo ſuperſtitious, that they wont admit one into their Houſes who has a Spot of Dirt on their Clothes, for fear of being defiled by it.

Sir John Chardin gives this ſummary Account of the publick Places in the City: That it contains 162 Moſques, 48 Colleges, 1802 Caravanſeras, 273 Baths, and 12 large Burying-Places, within the Walls. The Holſtein Ambaſſadors ſay, there are near this City 1460 Villages, the Inhabitants of which live moſtly by Manufactures of Silk and Woollen. The Canals and Streams, derived from the River Zenderout, to water the Gardens, &c. never return to it, but are loſt in the neighbouring Fields, which they make very fruitful; and the River it ſelf is alſo loſt in the Fields, betwixt this City and the Province of Kirman.

(11.) Jeſd, or Yeſde, 155 miles South East from Iſpahan, in the Road to the Province of Kirman, Lat. 33. Long. 59. is a large City, in the middle of a ſandy Deſart, two Leagues round; ſo that Travellers muſt have a Guide, otherwiſe they are in danger, becauſe upon the leaſt Wind the Sand covers the Roads: Yet in the Neighbourhood of the Town they have good Soil, which produces excellent Melons, Grapes, and other Fruit. 'Tis noted for Manufactures of Silk-Stuffs mixed with Gold and Silver, Stuffs of Cotton, ſome Half-Silk, Half-Cotton, and Serges of a particular Wool, handſomer and better than Silk. Their Carpets, made after the Turkiſh manner, are reckoned the fineſt and beſt in the World, and their Women the handſomeſt in Perſia.

Thus we have finiſhed the Deſcription of the Province of Aderbeitzan, which, according to our Map, is 570 miles from South-Eaſt to North-Weſt, but of a very unequal Breadth, being much contracted towards the North, and the greateſt Breadth Eaſt and Weſt towards the South is about 300.

V. The Province of Gilan, lies on the North-Eaſt Corner of Aderbeitzan, upon the Banks of the Caſpian Sea. Some join it with that of Mazanderan, which lies Eaſt from it, on the Frontiers of Tabriſtan. Our Maps not being diſtinct as to their Boundaries, we can only give a general Account of them. Sanſon ſays, Gilan has above thirty five rich Cities. The Holſtein Ambaſſadors ſay, 'tis encompaſſed in form of a Creſcent by Mountains, covered with Trees; and that this Province and Mazanderan made up the antient Hyrcania. The People are very ſubject to the Dropſy and Fever, are divided into Kileks and Talisks; the former having frequently rebelled againſt the King of Perſia, are allowed no Arms but a Hedge-Bill, to cut their Wood, and dreſs their Vines. The Talisks are allowed Arms as the other Perſians. They have different Habits and Language, but both are Dialects of the Perſian. The Women are as handſome as any in Perſia, and reputed the beſt Houſewives. They make Stuffs, Callicoes, and likewiſe aſſiſt the Men in Agriculture. The Country abounds with Silk, Oil, Wine, Rice, Tobacco, Lemons, Oranges, Pomgranates, &c. Here are many Rivers well ſtored with Salmon and other Fiſh, and in their Foreſts there is plenty of Veniſon and Wild Fowl. The Mountains, towards the Caſpian, abound with Wild Hogs, Deer, and Goats, with very long Horns, not ſo crooked as ours. Here are alſo Wolves, Bears, and great numbers of Tygers, which they tame when young, make uſe of them for Hunting, and keep them for the Security of their Houſes as we do Maſtiffs. This Country was unpaſſable in many Places, becauſe of Marſhes, till Abbas the Great, who reduced it, made Cauſeways. On the Coaſt of the Caſpian are the Plains of Mocan, which the Holſtein Ambaſſadors think to be thoſe mentioned near the Caſpiæ Portæ by Strabo, where the King kept 50000 breeding Mares. Ogilby ſays, they are 60 Leagues long, and 20 broad. Among the neighbouring Hills there was a Race of lewd People, given to Drunkenneſs and promiſcuous Luſt, without regard to Age, Sex or Kindred; ſo that Abbas the Great ordered them to be extirpated, and ſent a Colony in their ſtead. Thoſe who now inhabit the Plains, are the Offspring of People baniſhed hither for Rebellion, are called the King's Slaves, look after the Cattel, of which he has the Profit, and gives them a ſhort Allowance. The Children go ſtark naked in Summer. Thoſe of Age wear Cotton Coats, their Houſes are low Cottages of Straw and Buſhes. Here's a ſort of wild Beaſts not found elſewhere in Perſia. They keep together in great Herds, are very ſwift, and ſhaped like Roebucks. Theſe Plains alſo abound with excellent Liquorice. Here is no Town of Note deſcrib'd but Reſcht, on the Mouth of a River that falls into the Caſpian, Lat. 38. Lon. 53. 100 miles South-Eaſt from Tauris. 'Tis a large open Town, with a Market-Place full of Shops, is Capital of its Territory, and abounds with Citron and Orange-Trees.

VI. Mazanderan Province is a fine Country, well watered. The chief Town is Eskerf, or Kesker, on the Banks of the Caſpian, about thirty miles Eaſt of Ferrabath. It has a Royal Palace, with large Gardens, Gardens, Ponds, Fountains, Pleaſure-Houſes, and artificial Mounts covered with Flowers, and little Houſes on the top of them for People to refreſh themſelves; for 'tis ſo hot in Summer, that it makes them look tawny, but in Winter the Air is very cold. Herbert, who was here when the King of Perſia gave Audience to the Engliſh Ambaſſadors, ſays, it contained about 2000 Families; and gives a very particular Account of the rich Furniture of the Palace.

(2.) Ferrabath, on the Bank of the Caſpian Sea, 58 miles North Eaſt from Reſcht. 'Tis an antient Town in a rich Soil, has fruitful Gardens, and is well watered. Herbert thinks it to be Ptolemey's Socanda. The Air is not ſo good here as in other Parts of the Province. It contains about 3000 Families, tho formerly much larger. There's a River near it navigable by ſmall Veſſels, 'twas the uſual Landing-Place for Ships that traded betwixt Aſtracan and Perſia.

VII. Tabariſtan Province lies Eaſt from Gilan, and Weſt from Choraſan. 'Tis marſhy, and tho above 200 miles Eaſt and Weſt, and 150 South and North, has no remarkable Places.

VIII. Choraſan Province, lies Eaſt from Tabariſtan, and is one of the largeſt in Perſia. Our Maps make it 600 miles South and North, and 365 where broadeſt, Eaſt and Weſt. It contains part of the antient Bactriana, Aria, and Margiana, and includes the modern Diviſions of Georgian Khæmus and Aſtarabath. 'Tis one of the moſt fruitful Countries in Perſia, produces Corn, excellent Manna, Mulberry-Trees, and by conſequence Silk, Saffron, Aſſa fætida, and Sumach. Here are Sheep of different ſorts, particularly one, that has long, grey, ſhining Wool, with white Curls at the end reſembling Pearl. The Natives make great Quantities of Silk and Carpets. The Holſtein Ambaſſadors ſay, it has 18 populous Cities, that are Places of great Traffick, but only name a few. Thoſe we have any Deſcription of, are,

1. Meſched, or Thus, Lat. 37. Long. 60. The Holſtein Ambaſſadors ſay, 'tis encompaſſed with a noble Wall, adorned with many fair Structures. 'Tis enriched by Pilgrims, who come to the Tomb of Iman Reza, one of their twelve Saints, which is ſaid to perform miraculous Cures. This was a Contrivance of Abbas the Great, to prevent the carrying of Money out of his Country to Mecca; therefore he ſuborned Impoſtors to feign themſelves Blind and Lame, &c. and that they were cured here; which has ſo heightned the Fame of Reza's Moſque, that many Perſian Lords order their Corps to be buried in the Place, and leave great Legacies to it: which has made the Town ſo rich, that the Usbeck Tartars have ſeveral times attempted it, and can ſcarce be prevented by Armies or Bribes. John the Perſian ſays, there's a Tower here of maſſy Gold eighteen foot high, arched on the top with precious Stones, and that on the Pinnacle there's a Diamond as large as a Cheſnut, which may be ſeen a League off at night; ſo that they give fabulous Deſcriptions of the Place, to keep up the Reputation of the Miracles aſcribed to it. Texeira ſays, 'tis ſix Leagues round, including the Suburbs and Gardens, and contains 100000 People. Sanſon the Geographer ſays, they are handſome, ſtrong, and warlike.

(2.) Niſabur, Lat. 37. near Long. 60. is Capital of its Diſtrict, and was formerly much larger than now, having ſuffered much by Tamerlane's Wars. 'Tis chiefly noted for a Mountain in the Neighbourhood, which produces ſuch excellent Turquoiſes, that the King of Perſia reſerves them for his own Uſe.

(3.) Herat, or Heri, Capital of its Diſtrict, Lat. 35. Long. 62. noted for a greater plenty of Roſes than any other Place in the World. The Roſe-water made here excels ours. The Inhabitants mix it with Sherbet and other Liquors, and ſprinkle their Gueſts with it, becauſe of its admirable Scent. Sanſon ſays, they have ſuch abundance of Silk here, that they ſometimes load thouſands of Camels with it in a day. The Holſtein Ambaſſadors ſay, the beſt Perſian Tapeſtry is made here, and that the Indians drive a great Trade in this Place. It likewiſe abounds with Rhubarb and Wines, which keep very long. Herbert makes the Town three miles round. Ogilby ſays, there are fine tabby Cats here, much eſteemed all over Perſia. Their Hair is fine, long, and ſhines like Silk. They curl their Tails like Squirrels upon their Backs. The Hair of them is five or ſix Inches long, and the end of them reſembles a Plume of Feathers, which is very agreeable to the Sight.

The North Part of this Province, Eaſt of the Caſpian Sea, is little known, being full of ſandy Deſarts.

IX. Sableſtan, South South-Eaſt from Choraſan, is a ſmall Country, and was part of the antient Paropamiſus. It abounds with Proviſions, except on the Weſt-ſide, where it is barren. It had once ſo conſiderable a Trade with the reſt of Perſia, the Tartars, and the Indies, that it yielded the Mogul, when in his poſſeſſion, a very great Revenue. The North part of the Country is called Gor, and inhabited by Gaurs, Worſhippers of Fire, which they preſerve on a Mountain. Here are alſo ſome Banians, tolerated for the ſake of Trade, but not allowed their publick Worſhip. Some petty Princes inhabit the Mountains, who enjoy their Liberty on paying Tribute, and take part with the Perſians or Moguls, as they ſee occaſion. Here are alſo ſome Chriſtians in a mountainous Diſtrict call'd Peria, but very ignorant. There is no Town of Note in this Country.

X. Candahar, lies Eaſt from Sableſtan, and Weſt from the Mogul's Frontiers. Some make it part of Sableſtan, and others a Province by it ſelf. 'Tis a ſmall Province, the Capital of its own Name lies Lat. 33. Long. 69. Herbert ſays, the Town is not large, but ſtrong both by Art and Nature. The Suburbs are large and beautiful, but not well fortified, and the Water bad. The chief Subſiſtence of the Inhabitants is from the Paſſage of Caravans. It has been frequently an Occaſion of War betwixt the Perſians and Moguls. It was governed by a Prince, who reſigned it to the Perſians, on condition that one of his Race ſhould always be Governour. It has been in the hands of the Perſians ſince 1650. is defended by two Citadels, and has many fair Houſes. In its Diſtrict there are abundance of wild Sheep, ſome Rubies, and Mines of Silver.

XI. Segeſtan Province, lies South from Sableſtan, and Weſt from the Mogul's Frontiers. 'Tis ſuppoſed to be the antient Drangiana, is encompaſſed with Mountains, and the Country of Ruſtan; the principal Hero of the Perſian Romances. A Branch of Mount Taurus runs thro the North of this Province, and in the South Parts there's a Deſart of ten days Journey. The Capital of the ſame Name is in Lat. 31. Lon. 65. but we have no Deſcription of it. Kobin, or Kobinan, 90 miles South-Weſt from it, is noted for making Mirrors of Steel. We return to the Weſt-ſide of the Country.

XII. Chuſiſtan, in which we include Laureſtan, a ſmall Diſtrict North from it. They lie Eaſt from Hierak Arabi, on the Frontiers of Turkey, and North of the Perſian Gulph. They are about 360 miles South-Eaſt and North-Weſt, and 170 where broadeſt. The Holſtein Ambaſſadors take it to be the antient Suſiana, and ſay the Heats are ſo exceſſive here on the South-ſide the Mountains in Summer, that the Inhabitants retire to the North-ſide. Sanſon ſays the Territory is ſo fruitful, that it often yields 100 and 200 Fold. Places of Note are,

(1.) Suſter, antiently Suſa, ſuppoſed to be the Shuſhan in Eſther. 'Tis in Lat. 32. Long. 52. about 115 miles South Weſt of Iſpahan. Herbert ſays, the Palace here is thought to have been built by Mordecai, and ſcarce inferiour to that of Ecbatan. The Outſide and Pavement are of chequered Marble in Moſaick: The Arches and Pillars richly gilt, and ſet with ſhining Stones, and the Roof curiouſly painted with Stars. Bouſſingalt ſays, there's a large high Tower of white Marble near the Town, and magnificent Tombs of the Kings of Perſia and Media. The City and Palace were ſo rich, that Alexander found here 50000 Talents of uncoined Gold, beſides Wedges of Silver, and Jewels of ineſtimable Value.

(2.) Jaraene, inhabited moſtly by Jews. Heylin ſays, they were 1000 Families, ſuppoſed to be the Offspring of thoſe carried away by Salmanaſſar.

XIII. Fars, or Farſiſtan Province. Our Maps make it 300 miles South and North, and about 240 where broadeſt Eaſt and Weſt; but Sir John Chardin ſays, 'tis bigger than France, was antiently much larger, and is ſtill the largeſt and fruitfulleſt in Perſia, and the ſecond in Dignity. It has part of Chuſiſtan and the Perſian Gulph on the Weſt, Aderbeitzan on the North, Kerman on the Eaſt, and the Gulph of Ormus on the South. The North Parts are hilly and barren, but produce ſome coarſe Emeralds; the middle is pleaſant and fruitful, and furniſhes their Neighbours with Roſe-water and Cordovan Skins. Sanſon ſays, the Soil is good, their Woods furniſh abundance of Maſtick. The Arms made here are excellent, and there's a Mummy found in a Rock, a ſovereign Medicine for Poiſon, Wounds, and Ruptures, and reſerved for the King's Uſe; Bezoar is alſo found here. Places of Note are,

(1.) Schiras, or Ziieraes, Lon. 55. Lat. 39. Figueroa, who liv'd here ſix Months, thinks it to be the antient Cyropolis, founded by Cyrus. Ulugbeg, a Learned Geographer, Nephew to Tamerlane, ſays, in his Time 'twas fifteen miles round. 'Twas much larger ſince, tho now much decay'd. Herbert, who attended Sir Dodmore Cotton in his Embaſſy to Perſia, ſays, 'tis the ſecond City for Grandeur in the Monarchy. Some ſay Nimrod liv'd here for a time; that it was the Place where the firſt Sybil ſung our Saviour's Incarnation, and from whence the Wiſe Men of the Eaſt ſet out at his Birth. They add, that Magick was firſt invented here; and that it was the Royal Seat of two hundred Kings ſucceſſively. Herbert ſays, it had fifteen Moſques, cover'd on the top with Azure-Stone, beautified with many double-gilt Spires, and floor'd and laid within with black poliſh'd Marble. One of 'em had a ſquare Steeple above fifty foot high, partly leaded, and partly painted with Or and Azure, and over it had two ſlender Alcorans of Timber, round and coupled at top, adorn'd with great Coſt and Art, and near as high as our St. Paul's Steeple, from whence Boys ſung Eulogies to Ali and Mahomet three times every twenty four Hours. The other was like a Royal Caravanſera, ſquare, emboſs'd with Gold, painted with Blue, and flagg'd with Purple; and on this they lighted many Lamps on ſolemn Occaſions. Here was alſo a College for Aſtrology, Philoſophy, Phyſick, Chymiſtry, and Mathematicks. Figueroa ſays, the Alcorans of their Moſques have Galleries on the Outſide, where the Prieſts ſay their Prayers with a loud Voice; tho this is not commonly allow'd in Perſia, becauſe they don't love the Prieſts ſhould ogle their Women, who in Summer ſleep on the Terraſſes of their Houſes. Theſe Moſques, and two or three Palaces, in one of which the Spaniſh Ambaſſador liv'd, were the only Structures of Note, and the chief Beauty of the City; much of it being ruin'd, and the Fortifications diſmantled by Sha-Abbas, becauſe the Lord of the City rebell'd againſt him. The Town is ſurrounded with Gardens, among which there are ſeveral Villages and fine Houſes of Pleaſure, which make the City ſeem much larger than it is. Moſt of the Houſes are little and mean, the beſt of 'em having but a few Chambers, and a lower Gallery; ſo that the Town looks much better at a diſtance than it really is. Moſt of the Streets are winding; but there's one very ſtreight, eighty Paces broad, and two Miles long, betwixt two plaſter'd Walls, with pleaſant Gardens on both ſides, and ſome Pleaſure-Houſes belonging to the King, very well built, with large Galleries and Balconies towards the Street, and Gardens extended half a League on both ſides. Here they perform their Military Exerciſes on horſeback; and there are ſix Columns of white Marble at equal Diſtances for Barriers to them that ride the great Horſe. At the end of this Street is the Royal Palace, which forms a noble Proſpect by its Height, Galleries, and Balconies, with a Terraſs before it, and an Octogon of running Water. The ſecond Story had many noble Apartments, and a great Hall, larger than any in the Royal Palace at Madrid. Many of 'em were painted with Ladies in Italian Dreſs by Venetian Limners. Near the Palace was a Seraglio built in the ſame manner, with a large Terraſs at top, where they lie in Summer, and have a Proſpect of all the Gardens, which had fine Rows of large Cypreſſes reſembling great Obelisks, with Terraſſes on each ſide, green Walks in the middle, pleaſant Ponds, Water-Works, and Canals, with curious Barges upon them for the Ladies. The Canals and Ponds are ſo contriv'd, that the Water

Water runs from one to another. Thoſe Walks are all border'd with Hedges of Provence Roſe-Trees. The Gardeners have great Profit by their Roſe-Water, which is ſent as far as the Indies, beſides Medicines that they make of the Flowers. Among the Roſe-Buſhes lodge great Numbers of Animals, call'd Adives, a ſort of little Barbary Dogs, which are cunning, and hard to be caught, unleſs when they come to the Houſes for Food. The Trees in thoſe Gardens are ſo fruitful, that the Branches are ſcarce able to bear the Fruit, which is much better of all kinds than ours in Europe.

The Palace where the Spaniſh Ambaſſador lodged was very large, had many Chambers richly gilt and painted, with Galleries, Courts, Orchards, and Gardens, and the Terraſs at top covered with Graſs and Flowers, ſo large, that it reſembled a Plain; and ſo high, that they could ſee the King's Gardens and others for three Leagues round.

In ſome of the Streets are Canals of running Water, handſomely faced with Stone, and Bazars almoſt for every valuable Commodity of Turkey, Perſia, and the Indies. Here are Glaſs-houſes, where they make Bottles for Roſe-water and pickled Fruits, which they tranſport in great Quantities, particularly Capers and Grapes; the latter, pickled in Vinegar, have a pleaſant acid Taſte. Here are many large Fields of white Poppies round the Town, of which they make ſtore of Opium. Without the City there's a Vineyard two Leagues long, and one broad. 'Tis managed by the Jews, who pretend to be of Levi's Tribe, make about 5000 Tun of Wine per annum, and ſell it by Weight. Here's alſo a Manufacture of painted Cloth. There's a Well in the City, which they ſay is fifteen years a filling to the top, and ſinks again for other fifteen. Proviſions of all ſorts are plentiful and cheap, and for moſt part bought from the Cooks ready dreſſed, for few of the Inhabitants have Kitchens. Their Mutton, Lamb, and Wild Fowl are very good, but no Hares, Partridges, or Francolines are allowed to be killed, ſo that they multiply exceedingly. They have no tame Pork, but excellent Wild Boars and Hogs from the neighbouring Foreſts; and the Air being dry, the Meat keeps longer without Salt, and is much better than ours. A large Wild Boar is bought for a Crown, and the leſſer for half a Crown a-piece. They abound with Milk and Honey, of which they make many Diſhes; and their Wax is ſo fine, that it ſcarce needs any Purification. Wheat, Oranges, Almonds, Pomegranates, and Dates are alſo plentiful and cheap.

The City lies in a large Plain, encompaſſed on all ſides but one with Mountains, on which there are many Hermitages. There is one half a League from the City, where the chief Hermit was a Perſon of Quality, and far from living auſterely. Tho he was ſixty years old, he had a fine young Lady. His Hermitage was like the Pleaſure-Houſe of a Prince, with fine Terraſſes and Apartments, Walks, Fountains, Vines, and other Fruit-Trees. His own Apartment was cut out of the Rock, warm in Winter, and cool in Summer. He had a Stable for his Mule, upon which he rode to the City to receive Preſents from the Bigots; and on the top of the Mountain was a Church, where one of their Saints, who built the Hermitage, had his Sepulchre of Marble curiouſly carved and painted. The Aſcent to this Place was by 90 Steps cut out of the Rock. There was alſo a Sanctuary for Criminals, with ſeveral Apartments, that took up the whole Top of the Rock, which had frightful Precipices on all ſides. At the foot of the Mountain, towards the City, there's an antient admirable Architecture, with many Apartments and Courts cut out of the Rock, and great Veſſels of black Marble of curious Workmanſhip, with large Gardens, Ponds, and Cypreſs-Walks. The Inhabitants ſay, 'twas the Work of the antient Pagans, from whence Figueroa concludes, that the Sepulchres of Cyrus and other Princes were on this Mountain. On another, about a League South-Weſt, there are the Remains of a Heathen Temple, with ſtrange Figures on the top of the Hill, holding Veſſels in their hands, from whence Fire ſeems to iſſue. About two miles from this Mountain there's a Lake of Salt-water, ten Leagues round, filled by ſalt Springs that fall from the Mountains, and a ſalt River that runs into it, over which there's a large Stone Bridge. This Lake ſupplies the City and Country with Salt. The neighbouring Plain is ſo well watered by Canals and Aqueducts, that 'tis very fruitful and pleaſant. Theſe Aqueducts being cut thro Mountains and Rocks, have been the Effects of infinite Labour and Expence, and are aſcribed to their antient Monarchs. Upon a Canal, half a League from the Town, there's an antient Moſque, and the Sepulchre of one of their chief Saints, much frequented on pretence of miraculous Cures, where the Hermits read Legends to the Mob. There's a noble Aqueduct runs by this Moſque, and forms a large Pond full of Fiſh, but the Prieſts ſuffer none to be killed.

When Herbert was here, the Governour was a great Prince, one of the chief in Perſia, his Juriſdiction 400 miles ſquare, and his Court and Attendants like thoſe of a Monarch. Nothing could be more magnificent than his manner of receiving our Ambaſſador, nor any thing more ſumptuous than his Palace, his Throne, his own Apparel, and that of his Courtiers, all embroidered with Pearl and precious Stones. The Utenſils were of Gold and Silver, his Guards numerous and richly apparelled; he had 12 Sultans, and 50000 Horſe under his Command, had 20000 Men to attend him a hunting, and was the King of Perſia's chief Favourite. Le Brun, who was here in 1705, ſays, the Town is much decayed; that this Prince, who made ſuch a Figure, was the Darling of Abbas the Great, and advanced becauſe of his Father's and his own Services; that it was he who took Ormus, by the Aſſiſtance of the Engliſh, which was the Cauſe of the extraordinary Honour he did to the Engliſh Ambaſſadors; that the other Courtiers envied his Greatneſs, and upon Abbas's Death prevailed on his Son to ſend for this Governour, whom he ordered to be baſely murdered.

(2.) Perſepolis. Our Maps place it thirty miles North-Eaſt from Sciras, Lat. 31. The Natives call it Chelminar, which ſignifies forty Pillars, being a definite Number for an indefinite. It lies in a charming large Plain, which the Natives ſay contains 880 Villages, and that there are 1500 within twelve Leagues round Perſepolis. This Place, now in Ruins, was the Capital of Perſia, when deſtroyed by Alexander the Great, at the Inſtigation of a Harlot, and then accounted the richeſt and moſt magnificent City in the World. Diodorus Siculus gives a noble Account of the Town and Palace. Sir John Chardin, who viewed and took ſeveral Draughts of the Place, ſays, the Avenues to it are ſo naturally fortified by high Rocks, that he never ſaw any thing ſo ſecure in the World; and in thoſe Avenues there were antiently ſtrong Caſtles and Guards. He ſays, the Situation of the Town has been the moſt magnificent and pleaſant in the World, that 'tis impoſſible to give a ſufficient Idea of the Grandeur and Magnificence of the Temple by Cuts, becauſe they exceed all Expreſſion. He ſuppoſes it to have been the Workmanſhip of many thouſands of Men for a great number of Years, ſays it is a Maſter-piece, and contains all that could be performed by Art and Induſtry. He thinks it to be the greateſt Deſign that ever was invented by Architects. The Perſians tell many Fables about it, and aſcribe it to Deviis, becauſe they think it exceeds all human Power. The Perſian and Arabian Hiſtorians ſay, the Town was 36 miles long, 12 broad, and 300 years a building. Sir John thinks it was founded by a King of Perſia, about the time when Jacob went down to Egypt. He gives us Copies of the Figures and antient Inſcriptions, which are not now underſtood even by the Guebres, the Remains of the antient Perſians. He thinks they were engraved at ſeveral times, by order of their antient Princes and Prieſts, in memory of remarkable Victories, &c. Some of them are in antient Syriack, and others in Greek. Here are many ſubterranean Paſſages of vaſt Extent, which he thinks had a Communication with that called, The Mountain of Sepulchres, at two Leagues diſtance. He went a quarter of a League into one of them, attended by Servants with Torches and other Lights, and left Men at the ſeveral Turnings, which looked like a Labyrinth, otherwiſe he could never have found his way back. He went on till his Mens Courage failed, and that he found a Difficulty to breathe, which obliged him to return. The People of the Country ſay one of thoſe Paſſages is ſix Leagues long, and ſuppoſe vaſt Treaſures to be hid in it. Several have gone to ſearch for them, but none ever returned except one of the King's Farmers, who found Gold enough to pay part of his Debts, and loſt his Life in a ſecond Attempt.

Le Brun viewed thoſe Ruins with great Care, and has given us more Cuts of them than Sir John, and with much greater Exactneſs as he pretends, becauſe he underſtood Drawing and Antiquities of that ſort better. We have not room to inſiſt on Particulars, and therefore refer the Curious to his Book for the Cuts and Deſcriptions, which are truly ſurprizing. He takes notice of ſeveral Miſtakes of Tavernier, Sir John Chardin, and others about them; and ſays, that inſtead of 40 Columns, he found the Remains and Marks of 205, and above 1300 Figures cut out of the Rocks in the Mountain, of Tombs, &c. He adds, that theſe Ruins are the Remains of the Palace and Temple, but there is no ſign left of the Ruins of the City; and that the Britiſh Viſiers have deſtroyed many of them, to prevent the Expence which the Court is at for Guards, &c. when Ambaſſadors go to ſee them, for the Kings look upon thoſe Antiquities to be one of the chief Glories of their Country.

XIV. The Province or Kingdom of Laer or Lar. This Country is included in Farſiſtan, and lies on the Gulph of Baſſora or Perſia; and Herbert ſays, in his time, was about 300 miles in diameter: That moſt of it is barren and ſandy, and produces nothing but Palm-Trees; but near their Brooks and Springs, they had variety of Corn, plenty of Oranges, Lemons, Pomegranates, and Figs. They had alſo Mines of Sulphur, but knew not how to improve them. They had Kings of their own, as they pretend, for 2000 Years, till it was reduced with difficulty by Order of Sha-Abbas in 1602. when Lar their Capital was ſtormed, their King, an atheiſtical and bloody Tyrant, with 5000 of his Nobility and Gentry, killed, and the Fortifications demoliſhed. The King of Perſia had 700 Camels laden with his part of the Spoil. Places of Note are,

(1.) Lar the Capital, in Lat. 28. Long. 52 ½. about 45 miles North from the Bay. Herbert ſays, in his time it was not walled, but defended by high Rocks, and a ſtrong beautiful Caſtle, with Lodgings and Arms for 3000 Men. They had a ſtately Bazar, a Mint, and ſeveral Moſques, one of which reſembled that of Mecca, painted and adorned with Lamps, in honour of one of their Prophets. They have plenty of Proviſions and Fruits, but their Water breeds Diſeaſes, moſt of it being Rain-Water, which ſoon corrupts. Their Showers, he ſays, were few and violent. The People were a mixture of Jews and Mahometans, with blear Eyes, rotten Teeth, and mangy Legs, occaſioned by the violent Heats and bad Water. The Houſes are terraſſed at top, and have artificial Fans to let in the Air. Figueroa ſays, Caravans uſually lodge here in their way from Ormus to other Parts of Perſia, that their Bazar was well ſtored with Goods, and as much frequented as the greateſt Fairs in Europe. The Governor has a noble Palace and Gardens, with the beſt Dates in Perſia. Here are good Manufactories in Silk, Gun-pouder, and Fire-Arms, which are the beſt in Perſia. Near the Caſtle there are Springs of Oil, excellent againſt Poiſon. They flow only in June, and in ſmall Quantities, which are preſerved for the King's Uſe. The adjacent Fields abound with large Tamariſks. Le Brun, who was here in 1705. ſays, the Avenues reſemble a Wood, are kept in good Order; and there's ſuch abundance of Palm, Orange and Citron Trees, that the Town is ſcarce to be ſeen till one comes at it, tho moſt of the Houſes be high.

(2.) Gomron, Gombrown, or Bander Abaſſi, in Lat. 27. Long. 57. on the Gulph of Perſia. Le Brun ſays, it was called Bander Abaſſi, which ſignifies the Port of Abbas, becauſe that Prince took it. He obſerves, that 'tis commonly reckoned 200 Leagues from Iſpahan, tho 'tis but 186. He makes it about a League round, ſays the Houſes are for moſt part ſorry, except thoſe of the Engliſh, French, and Dutch Companies. That of the Governor is but indifferent; thoſe of the chief Citizens have Machines to draw in Air, made like a ſort of ſquare Towers, pretty high, open on all ſides, with long narrow Slits, and let in Air enough, if there be any Wind. The poorer ſort live in Huts made of Branches, and covered with the Leaves of Palm-Trees, which abound here. Tavernier ſays, the Air is ſo hot, that Strangers can't keep their Health but from December to March, and the Natives can ſcarce ſtay in it till the end of April, when they retire to the Mountains, two or three days Journey from hence. They that ſtay during the hot Weather fall into malignant Fever; and if they eſcape Death, have the Yellow-Jaundice ever after. Tavernier ſays, the Fiery Wind, call'd Samiel, blows in this Country in April, and burns ſometimes like Lightning; ſo that himſelf and his Company were like to have been kill'd by it, if ſome Arabians, perceiving it coming, had not perſuaded them to diſmount, and lie flat on their Bellies for half an Hour, cover'd with their Clokes; but their Horſes were put into ſuch a Sweat, that they were ſcarce able to carry them. The People take a little Nap at Noon, and ſleep at Night on Carpets ſpread upon Terraſſes.

Le Brun ſays, that October and November are as dangerous as the Summer Months; and that the Air is always unwholeſom, being exceſſively dry, or very moiſt; but their dry Weather is wholeſomeſt. Their beſt Water is brought from a Mountain four Leagues diſtant on Camels. The ordinary Water breeds Worms in the Feet and Legs of thoſe who drink it; which are very dangerous if they can't be pull'd out whole. To this end they tie the End of the Worm when it begins to come out of the Fleſh upon a Roller, and wrap it round gently by degrees; but if it break, the Part remaining in the Fleſh often proves fatal to the Patient. The uſual way to prevent this bad Effect of the Water, is to quench red-hot Iron in it, and then to ſtrain it thro Linen. The Trade and Buildings have increas'd ſince Ormus was taken by the Perſians; and many foreign Merchants and Factors come hither in hopes of raiſing Eſtates ſpeedily; but Le Brun ſays, few of 'em live to compleat their Deſign.

Tavernier ſays, 'tis wall'd, the beſt Landing-place on the Coaſt, and is the Port for Ships from India. They ride half a League from the Town, and are loaded and unloaded by ſmall Veſſels. Their Soil is ſo ſandy, that formerly an Herb was not to be ſeen in the Neighbourhood; but now by watering it frequently, they have ſome Lettices, Radiſhes, and Onions. The People are ſwarthy, wear nothing but Shifts; and their uſual Diet is Dates, Soals, Smelts, Pilchards, and Oyſters, which they have very good. The Rich have Wine, Mutton, Pigeons, and Partridges, from the neighbouring Provinces. They feed their Cattel, after they have browz'd on the barren Shrubs, with the Heads and Guts of boil'd Fiſh mix'd with the Kernels of Dates. Some of the People, during the Heats, lie naked in Troughs with Water, which in a manner parboils their Fleſh, and makes them apt to catch cold. There's abundance of leud Women here, who wear Noſe-Jewels above three Inches long, ſet with precious Stones, and on their Arms and Legs have Chains and Bracelets of Silver, Braſs, Ivory, &c. The Citizens Wives wear Linen-Drawers, and are adorned with Jewels and Bracelets; but when they go abroad cover themſelves with a white Sheet, ſo that they can't be known. The Men impreſs their Skins with round Circles, by way of Ornament and Bravery. There are a great many trading Banians here, who are an unſociable ſort of People. The Drink here, made of Rack-Sugar and Raiſins, is very dangerous to Strangers. There's a ſorry Caſtle at each end of the Town that was built by the Portugueſe. They are mounted with Braſs Guns taken at Ormus. The Streets are irregular, narrow, and ill kept. Their chief Trade is in the Pearl taken near the Iſland of Baharein; and in Callico, which they make on Looms of Cane. The Government here conſiſts of a Sultan, a Viſier, a Captain of the Guards, and a Receiver of the Cuſtoms. The Dutch pay none; and the Engliſh, tho they ought to have half the Impoſts for their Service in taking Ormus, are ſcarce allow'd the tenth part; for the Perſians reckon it no Crime to defraud Strangers, eſpecially Chriſtians, where the Intereſt of their Prince is concern'd. The Engliſh and Dutch pay fifty Crowns for every Horſe they export to the Indies, where an indifferent Perſian Horſe is worth four hundred Crowns, and the Engliſh have a Privilege to export twelve annually without Cuſtom. Raw Silks, Carpets, Cottons, &c. are brought hither by Caravans, and all ſorts of other Goods by Sea. The Engliſh and Dutch Merchants Houſes are the beſt, next to the Governor's; and the Engliſh are allow'd to put up a Flag on theirs, becauſe of their Help in taking Ormus. The Language of the Place has been Portugueſe ever ſince that Nation was Maſters of it; but none of them are now ſuffer'd to enter it, tho it be open to all other Nations. Figueroa ſays, this Town was taken by the King of Perſia from the King of Ormus; and that it was part of his Embaſſy to demand the reſtoring of it, but in vain. The terrible Rains and Thunders preſerve the Town from being taken during the hot Seaſon, when the Inhabitants leave it.

There are ſeveral Iſlands in the Neighbourhood; 1. Kiſmis, four Leagues and a half S. S. W. 'Tis ſeven Leagues long, and furniſhes moſt of the Wood for repairing Ships, and building Houſes at Gamron. 2. Laveke, five Leagues S. S. E. from Gamron. Each of thoſe Iſlands has a Citadel, but of no great Importance.

XV. The Province and Iſland of Ormus. It was once reckon'd a Kingdom, and had a large Territory in Greater Kirman. Ormus the Capital lies in the Iſland of that Name, Lat. 26 ¼. Long. 58. at the Mouth of the Perſian Gulph, that below it being call'd the Gulph of Ormus. The Iſland is cover'd all over with good Salt, and lies about two Leagues from the Perſian Shore. It alſo abounds with black ſhining Duſt, much us'd for Standiſhes. The Portugueſe took this Iſland in 1506, with two young Princes, Sons to the deceas'd King, and carried them to Spain, Portugal being then ſubject to that Crown. They were handſomely entertain'd at Madrid; and the King having ſhew'd them the Eſcurial, and other chief Structures, ask'd them how they'd like to live there? They applauded every thing they ſaw, but fetch'd a deep Sigh; and the King asking, Why? They anſwer'd, Becauſe they muſt never ſit more under their Banian Tree. Which is ſuppos'd to be that mention'd by Herbert at Gamron, (that Town being alſo ſubject to their Father) which had a Shade large enough for ſome Hundreds of Men to ſit, without crowding. They are call'd Indian Fig-Trees. Their Branches ſpread ſo wide, that by their Weight they fall to the Ground, take root, and riſe again; which forms diſtinct Apartments. Tavernier ſays, this was two hundred Paces round, and the Boughs ſo neatly trimm'd and ſupported by the Banians, that there was room for one to toſs a Pike under them. Here they had a Temple with ſuch deform'd Images, that one would think it impoſſible for the Invention of Man to frame ſuch monſtrous Things. The Portugueſe made Ormus a very magnificent City, erected a noble Fortreſs, and ſtately Churches. They ſuffer'd the Kings to continue their Vaſſals with a handſome Revenue; and were ſo fond of this Town, that they made the following Diſtich upon it:

Si terrarum Orbis quaqua patet annulus eſſet,
Illius Ormuzium gemma decuſque foret.

Id eſt,

"Were all the World a Ring, Ormus alone
"Ought to adorn it as the richeſt Stone.

By the Aſſiſtance of Goa, their Metropolis in the Eaſt-Indies, it gave Laws to all the neighbouring Powers. They made it a very compact City: Their Houſes were extremely well furniſh'd, their Exchange rich and beautiful, their Churches ſplendid, their Caſtles ſo regular, well fortified, and mounted with Cannon, that it exceeded all the Towns in the Eaſt. The Streets were narrow, and the Houſes high to ſhade them from the Heat of the Sun; and they had many Croſs-Streets, which ſerv'd for Channels to convey and purify the Air, and Towers on the tops to let in the Air, as thoſe of Gamron. The King had a Palace in a fine Plain, with a Tuft of Palm-Trees, and Towers, where he kept his Brothers after he had put out their Eyes, according to the manner of the Eaſt. The Natives during the Heats us'd to go into the ſhallow Places of the Sea, and by Night ſlept on their Terraſſes.

In 1622 Abbas the Great, King of Perſia, ſent 15000 Men againſt it, and with the Help of the Engliſh Merchant Ships and Cannon reduc'd it; for which, Herbert ſays, the King promis'd them the following Privileges: 1. That the Caſtle with all the Ordnance and Ammunition ſhould be theirs, and allowing the Perſians to build another in what part of the Iſland they thought fit. 2. That the Engliſh ſhould have half the Spoil on bearing half the Charge of the Siege, and be cuſtom-free in Gomron for ever. The Portugueſe made a brave Reſiſtance; but at laſt ſurrender'd it to the Engliſh on condition of ſparing their Lives, and being ſafely convey'd to Muſcat in Arabia. Thus Ormus, which was the Glory of the Eaſt 120 Years, in poſſeſſion of the Portugueſe, was deſtroyed becauſe of the Provocation they had given the Engliſh thro Pride and Avarice. Figueroa ſays, it was taken chiefly by the Treachery, Neglect, or Pride of the Governor of Goa, who was truſted with the Defence of the Town, but ſo haughty that he would take no Advice. He reckons that the Portugueſe loſt here above two Millions of Gold, beſides Jewels and other rich Goods, and above 300 Battering-Pieces; and blames the Governor for not including the Arabian Princes in the Capitulation. As ſoon as the Perſians became Maſters of the Place, they brought the Sea round the Citadel, which is the only thing they preſerv'd of that noble City.

XVI. Baharein, on the South-ſide of the Perſian Gulph, belongs alſo to the Crown of Perſia ſince they took Ormus. It lies along that Gulph 330 Miles, and is about 50 broad. 'Tis ſeparated from the reſt of Arabia on the South. This Province is reckon'd to have the beſt Horſes in Arabia. The only Town of Note is El Catif, a good Port, in the North-end of the Province, Lat. 26 ¼. Long. 51. over-againſt the Iſle Baharein, which, with all that part of the Coaſt, is noted for Pearl-fiſhing.

XVII. Kerman, or Karman, lies Eaſt from Farſiſtan, and has the Gulph of Ormus on the South. 'Tis about 330 Miles from South to North, and 180 Eaſt and Weſt. It produces Steel, Turquoiſes, Tutty, Roſe-Water, the Herb from hence nam'd Kermes, of which the Confection Al Kermes is made, and its Grain is us'd for dying Crimſon. It alſo produces Sumach, black ſhining Stones, good for Diſtempers of the Eyes, Braſs, Iron, Silver, Store of Alabaſter, Dates, Myrrh, and Arſenick. 'Tis alſo noted for a Manufacture of Tapeſtries and excellent Arms, particularly Scymiters, which the Turks value much. The Holſtein Ambaſſadors ſay, 'tis a mountainous Country; but their Valleys abound with odoriferous Flowers, and particularly Roſes, with the diſtill'd Water of which they drive a conſiderable Trade. The Capital is Kerman alias La-Sirjan, Lat. 30. Long. 60. It was formerly a large City, but has ſuffer'd much by War. Sanſon ſays, here's a good Manufacture of Gold and Silver Stuffs. Tavernier ſays, they make Earthen Ware as fine almoſt as China. They have plenty of Proviſions, and good Wine, made by the Gaurs, who are numerous in this Province. Their Sheep, he ſays, bear the fineſt Wool in Perſia. 'Tis naturally of a clear brown; and the white ſort, of which they have very little, is exceeding dear, becauſe the Mahometan Doctors engroſs it for their Girdles and Veils. The Perſians make fine Saſhes and Serges of it, which have as good a Luſtre as Silk. 'Tis much finer than any in Europe, and they throw ſalt Water upon it before they make it up into Bales, to keep it from rotting and Worms. The Sheep who bear it caſt their Fleeces naturally about May, when their Skins are as ſmooth as thoſe of a ſcalded Pig.

XVIII. Macran, lies Eaſt from Kerman as far as the Mogul's Country, is very large, but for the moſt part deſart; ſo that 'tis ſuppos'd to be here where Alexander's Army ſuffer'd ſo much in their Return from the Indian Sea. Towards the Coaſt it produces ſtore of Flax, Hemp, ſeveral Sorts of Oil, and a Breed of Horſes as good as the Arabian. There are ſome Towns on the Coaſt, of which we have no Deſcription, only Macran the Capital is ſaid to be the Seat of a Prince, and Gudel that of a Viceroy.

INDOSTAN, or, The Empire of the Great Mogul;

HAS Perſia and that call'd the Arabian Gulph on the Weſt, Tartary on the North and North-Eaſt, the Kingdom of Ava and the Bay of Bengal on the Eaſt, the Iſle of Ceylon on the South-Eaſt, and the Great Indian or Eaſtern Ocean on the South. From Cape Comorin on the South, to the Frontiers of Tartary on the North, 'tis 1620 Miles. The greateſt Breadth, Eaſt and Weſt from the Frontiers of Perſia to the Kingdom of Ava, is 1000 Miles; but 'tis very much contracted towards the South, where it ends in a Point, and is alſo much indented by Tartary on the North-Weſt. It is betwixt Lat. 8. & 35. The longeſt Day in the South Parts is twelve Hours and a half, and the North fourteen and a half. The Tropick of Cancer divides it almoſt in the middle. It includes moſt of the Country antiently known by the Name of India.

Bernier, in his Letter to M. Colbert, the great Miniſter of France, ſays, it contains many large Countries; ſome of which are ſo fruitful, particularly Bengal, that they exceed Egypt in Things neceſſary for Life, beſides many other Commodities that Egypt has not. Terry ſays, 'tis the fruitfulleſt Country of Aſia in Corn, Cattel, &c. They abound with Bufflers, have plenty of Deer and other wild Beaſts, Fowl, Fiſh, &c. Their Oxen have a thick fat Bunch upon their Shoulders. Their Sheep have ſhort, but very fine Wool: Their Fleſh is as good as ours; and their Tails broad and heavy. They have Ginger, Sugar-Canes, Melons, Pomgranates, Citrons, Lemons, Oranges, Dates, Figs, Raiſins, Plantanes, Ananas, ſtore of Apples and Pears, and all ſorts of Roots and Herbs that we have in Europe, beſides ſome peculiar to the Country. Here's alſo abundance of Salt-Petre. They have a Liquor call'd Taddy, produc'd by Inciſions in the Trunk of a very high Tree. 'Tis as pleaſant as any White Wine, if drawn in the Morning before the Sun riſes; but otherwiſe grows tart and unwholeſome. It has ſeveral phyſical Virtues, and is particularly good againſt the Stone.

Terry ſays, in that part of the Country from Surat to Agra, it rains only from the time that the Sun approaches the Tropick of Capricorn till the following Equinox, which is three Months. The Rains begin and end with Tempeſts, Lightning, and terrible Thunder; but the latter ſeldom does any hurt.

During that time it rains every Day, and ſometimes without Intermiſſion. This, together with the Heat of the Sun, makes the Soil as fruitful as that part of Egypt which is over-flow'd by the Nile. When the Rain is over, the Air is ſo clear, that 'tis rare to ſee any Cloud for the other nine Months; at the end of which the Ground is ſo parch'd by Heat, that it reſembles a ſandy Deſart, but is cover'd all over with Green after five or ſix Days Rain. They till their Land in May and June, and reap in November and December, which are their moſt temperate Months. The Corn comes up thicker and ſtronger than in England. They cut their Graſs as they want it, whether it be green or dry. They plant a great deal of Tobacco, but can't dreſs it; ſo that 'tis not ſo ſtrong as that of the Weſt Indies. Here are many fine Woods, and abundance of Trees which produce a great deal of Sap, but different from ours in Europe. Their Flowers are very agreeable for Beauty and Smell.

The chief Rivers are the Indus and Ganges. The Indus riſes on the Frontiers of Tartary, receives many other Rivers, and after a Courſe of 690 Miles, beſides Turnings and Windings, falls with three Mouths into the Arabian Gulph, on the Weſt-ſide of the Country, about Lat. 24. Long. 57 ½. The Ganges, whoſe Fountains have been as much diſputed as thoſe of the Nile, riſes very near the Head of the Indus; and after a Courſe of 850 Miles, beſides Turnings and Windings, and receiving many Rivers on both ſides, falls into the Bay of Bengal, on the Eaſt-ſide of the Country, with ſeven Mouths, in Lat. 22. Long. 87, & 88. Herbert ſays, it weighs an Ounce in a Pint lighter than any other Water of the Country; that the Mogul's Court drink none elſe, and have vaſt Numbers of Camels to bring it every day. 'Tis ſweet and clear, but occaſions Griping and Fluxes; ſo that moſt Europeans boil the Water before they drink it. Schouten ſays, that during the ordinary Tides it is from three to four Fathom deep towards the Mouth, and the Bottom ſoft whitiſh Clay. In April, when loweſt, 'tis in many Places almoſt dry; but in September, when higheſt, 'tis many Miles broad, and leaves a Slime which fructifies the Country. Multitudes of People come from Tartary and elſewhere to waſh away their Sins in this River, and cry out, O Ganges, purify me. They dip their Sick in order to recover their Health; and if they die ſoon after, think they are happy. The Water is tranſported for the ſame Ends to thoſe who live at a diſtance, and are not able to come to it.

Indoſtan, or the Empire of the Great Mogul, is divided into forty Parts, which they call Kingdoms. The Name Mogul is by ſome thought to ſignify a Stranger, and was given to the Tartars who invaded this Country under Tamerlane. Terry ſays, it ſignifies a Circumciſed Man; and Grand Mogul ſignifies King of all that are circumciſed. Authors differ ſo much as to the Dimenſions of the Provinces of this Empire, and make 'em ſo inconſiſtent with the general Map, that we only take their Situation.

The PROVINCES or KINGDOMS ſubject to the Mogul.

I. CABUL in the North-weſt Corner of the Country, has Perſia on the Weſt, and Tartary on the North. 'Tis cold and barren for moſt part, and ſubject to great Winds, yet ſome of its Valleys are fruitful, and have good Paſturage for their Horſes and Camels, which are many and fine. It abounds with ſmall Towns and Villages; and on the Roads they have ſtrong Houſes, with Guards of Soldiers to ſecure Travellers againſt the Augans, who inhabit Mountains of that Name betwixt this Country and Perſia, and plunder People. Moſt of the Natives are Pagans, and frequent their Idol-Temples with great Devotion each February, at the full Moon, for two Days, when they make their Oblations, are clad in Red, dance to the Sound of Trumpets, viſit their Friends by Companies in Maſquerade, eat together, make Bonefires, and conclude with a Child's ſhooting an Arrow at a Giant, to repreſent their God Cruſhman, who they ſay appear'd like a Child, and kill'd a Giant that endeavour'd his Ruin. Thevenot ſuppoſes they were formerly Chriſtians, and by this would repreſent our Saviour's Conqueſt over the Devil. All their Religion now conſiſts in Fables; and they think it meritorious to dig Wells, and build Houſes for Conveniency of Travellers. They abound with Banian Phyſicians, ſome of whom are very skilful in extracting the Poiſon of Spotted Fevers, &c. by Cauſticks. They ſcrape their Tongues every Morning with a Root, which brings up Phlegm, and prevents Dropſies, that would otherwiſe kill them. They uſually withdraw and vomit when they begin to eat, and then fall on with a good Appetite. The Capital of the ſame Name is in Lat. 37. near Long. 57 ½. 'Tis large and ſtrong, defended by two Caſtles, formerly the Reſidence of their Kings. They have a good Trade with Perſia, Tartary, and the Indies, have plenty of Proviſions, deal much in Drugs that grow in the Mountains, where they have Iron Mines and Canes, which ſupply their Manufacture for Arms and Lances. The Tartars ſell annually 60000 Horſes here.

II. Atock, Eaſt from Cabul. The Capital of the ſame Name is in Lat. 32. Long. 72 ½. at the Conflux of the Nilab and Indus. Tavernier ſays, 'tis one of the Mogul's ſtrongeſt Gariſons; and that no Stranger muſt enter it without a Paſſport.

III. Cachemire has Tartary on the North and Eaſt, and Atock on the Weſt; is encompaſs'd by Mountains and narrow Paſſes well water'd, one of the moſt fruitful Provinces of the Indies, and call'd the Mogul's Paradiſe, becauſe the Air is ſo temperate, that it abounds with all Things that make Life delightful. The Trees and Fruits are like ours in Europe. The People are brave and induſtrious, and pretend to be come of the Iſraelites carry'd captive by Salmanaſſar. Catrou ſays, tho they be all Mahometans or Pagans, they have ſomething of the Mien which diſtinguiſhes the Jews from other People. The Name Moſes is very common here; and they have the Ruins of a Structure on a high Mountain call'd Solomon's Throne. The Hills next to the Plains are of a middling Height, cover'd with Trees, or Paſtures fill'd with Cattel of all ſorts, and Game of divers Kinds; but have no ravenous Beaſts or Serpents. The Woods abound with Bees, and furniſh ſtore of Honey and Wax. In ſhort, Travellers make it a perfect Land of Promiſe, that flows with Milk and Honey. The whole Country reſembles a Garden of Ever-Greens, intermix'd with Villages, Corn-Fields, Meadows, and Canals. The Inhabitants are fit for all Arts and Sciences, of an European Complexion; and the Women ſo beautiful, that they are coveted by the Mogul Courtiers. The Natives excel in Varniſhing, and making Stuffs call'd Chales, of fine Wool or Goats-Hair, which they have from Tibet in Tartary. The latter are finer and ſofter than Caſtor; but muſt be air'd frequently, to prevent being eat by Worms. Both Sexes wear Mantles of them in Winter. The Mountains behind thoſe that lie next the Valleys are high, and always cover'd with Snow, but clear, and among them many Caſcades; one of them falls from the ſide of a high Mountain into a deep Precipice, and is ſo beautiful, that Jehan Guir erected a Theatre for his Ladies to ſee it, and was ſo pleas'd with this Country in general, that he ſaid he would rather loſe all his Dominions than it.

The Capital of the ſame Name is in Lat. 35 ½. Long. 73. at the North-end of a Lake, four Leagues round, that has many Iſlands, and is form'd by a River which breaks thro a Mountain, and carries the Product of the Country to the Indies. Jehan Guir, and others of the Great Moguls, built Palaces here with beautiful Gardens, Water-Works, and Canals, which the Sultaneſſes fill'd with tame Fiſh, and put Gold Rings in their Noſes.

The City is a League long, and half a League broad, without Walls; the Houſes of Timber, well built, and three Stories high, with Gardens and Canals to the Lake and the River which runs thro the Town.

Town, and has ſeveral Bridges. The Citizens divert themſelves with Boats on the River and Lake, the Banks of which are handſomely planted with tall Trees; and on the adjacent Hills there are many Gardens and Houſes of Pleaſure, one of 'em belonging to the Great Mogul, with ſtately Pleaſure-Houſes, long Canals fac'd with Free-ſtone, and many Walks adorn'd with Jets and other Water-Works. The Apartments of the chief Pleaſure-Houſe are like Domes, richly painted and gilt. It has four Gates oppoſite to one another, the Columns of which are of Stone finer than Porphyry or Marble; and at each Gate there's a Bridge over a Canal.

Bernier ſays, that three Days Journey from this City he ſaw a Well at the foot of a Mountain, that every May, when the Snow begins to melt, flows and ſtops for a Fortnight together at Break of Day, Noon, and Night. After the Fortnight it ſlackens its Courſe, and at the end of the Month ſtops till next Year, unleſs in great Rains, when it flows like others. The Natives have a Temple here in Honour of one of their Idols, and Pilgrims come from all Parts to bathe at this Fountain.

Among the Mountains are Valleys which produce Corn, Fruit, and Wine in plenty. The Inhabitants are in a manner independent, of a white Complexion, and truſting to their Paſſes ſometimes refuſe to pay their Tribute. They ſeem to have no other Religion but to abſtain from Fiſh, which they reckon unclean. Their Women are induſtrious, handſome, and chaſte.

IV. Hajacan, South from Cabul, and Eaſt from Perſia. The Inhabitants are ſaid to be Cannibals and Robbers, worſhip the Sun, and ſubſiſt chiefly by Agriculture, letting out Camels, and conducting Caravans, in which they are ſo truſty, that they'll venture their Lives rather than loſe any thing.

V. Multan lies Eaſt from Perſia, and South from Hajacan. Pelſart, Factor for the Dutch Eaſt-India Company, ſays, it produces vaſt Quantities of Sugar, Galls, Opium, Brimſtone, and ſome Spice. Their Manufactures are good white Cloth, Cotton, Thred, Silk of Bengal, painted Callicoes, red Stuffs, Turbants, and Horn Bows. They ſell alſo great Numbers of Camels. The Capital of the ſame Name is on the Eaſt-ſide of the Indus, near Lat. 30. Long. 72 ½. The Town is ſmall, but well fortified, and of great uſe to the Mogul ſince the Perſians took Candahar. It had a great Trade by the Indus and other Rivers; but ſince the Mouth of the Indus has been ſtopp'd with Sand, they are oblig'd to ſend their Goods by Land-Carriage, which has leſſen'd their Trade. The Inhabitants are Pagans of ſeveral ſorts, who have each their Idols and Temples, much frequented by Pilgrims.

VI. Lahor, or Pengab, lies N. E. from Multan, betwixt five Rivers which run into the Indus. Part of it is mountainous, inhabited by petty Princes; ſome of them ſubject to the Mogul; and others, truſting to their Faſtneſſes, refuſe him Tribute. The Product is Rice, Corn, Fruit, Wine, Sugar; and in their Towns are Manufactures of every thing made in the Empire. The Capital Lahor is in Lat. 32. Long. 74. on a River that runs into the Indus. It had formerly a great Commerce, when the Armenians and Indians traded by Land to Aleppo, was the Staple of Indico, and the chief Mart of Indoſtan; but ſince the Europeans found out a Way to the Eaſt-Indies by Sea, the Trade is ſo much decay'd, that were it not for the Reſidence of the Court during the cold Seaſon, it could not ſubſiſt. The Mogul has a fine Palace here, with curious Paintings, which is more commodious than that of Agra, tho not ſo magnificent. The Town is encompaſs'd by Stone-Walls, mounted with Cannon. There's a noble Road from hence to Agra, above three hundred Miles long, finely planted with Trees.

VII. Naugracut lies N. E. from Lahor to the Frontiers of Tartary, is mountainous, and noted only for its Metropolis of the ſame Name, Lat. 33. Long. 77 ½. much frequented becauſe of a ſplendid Chappel, ciel'd and pav'd with Plates of Silver and Gold in ſeveral Forms. The Indian Pilgrims, who come hither for Worſhip, frequently cut off a Snip of their Tongues as an Offering to their Idol. Near the South-ſide of the Province there's another Temple, built on a Rock; betwixt which and a neighbouring one Meteors ſometimes appear, and are worſhip'd by the Natives as Celeſtial Fire.

VIII. Siba lies South from Naugracut, is mountainous, and noted chiefly for a Rock in form of a Cow's Head, thro which the Ganges runs, and is worſhipp'd by the Heathens, who come hither in great Numbers to waſh in the River.

IX. Patna lies for the moſt part betwixt the Ganges and Tartary, S. E. from Siba. Terry ſays, 'tis a fruitful Province. The Capital of the ſame Name is on the Weſt-ſide of the Ganges, Lat. 26. Long. 84. Fitch, in his Voyages, ſays, the Ganges in time of the great Rains is ſo broad here, that a Man can't ſee over it; and that the People go into it to prevent their being ſcorch'd by the Sun. The Town is large; but the Houſes of Mudwall, cover'd with Straw. The Trade here is chiefly in Cotton, Cloth, Sugar, Opium, and Salt-Petre, for which the Dutch have a Factory in the Place, and refine it at Choupar, a large Town ten Miles higher up on the Ganges. The Women adorn themſelves with Silver and Copper, and wear Rings of thoſe Metals on their Toes. Gold is found here by digging deep Pits, and waſhing the Earth from it in great Bowls.

X. Bukor has Perſia on the Weſt, and Multan on the North; is fructified by the Indus, and abounds with Corn and Cattel about the River; but the Weſt part is deſart. Bukor the Capital lies on an Iſland in the Indus, Lat. 30. Long. 70. 'Tis defended by a Caſtle and a ſtrong Gariſon, to over-awe the Inhabitants of Hajacan, who are given to plunder and mutiny. The People are Mahometans, and drive a great Trade in India Cloths, &c.

XI. Hendowr lies Eaſt from Bukor, and is inhabited by People of the ſame Name, from whom the Country is ſuppos'd to be call'd Indoſtan. They are a warlike Nation of Heathens, and employ'd by the Mogul in many of his Gariſons. They ſtrip themſelves naked when they pray. The Women wear Silver, Copper, and Iron Chains about their Legs, Bracelets up to their Elbows, and Pendants in their Ears, where they make Holes ſo big, that one may put one's Finger through 'em. The Country has ſtore of Corn, Cotton, Cattel, and Fowls. They dreſs and eat their Meat in a round Spot of Ground, where none muſt enter but the Family while they are cooking and eating. They are much given to Robbery. They have a Capital of the ſame Name, but not deſcribed. Catron, who travell'd this Country, ſays, they have a large Town call'd Mearta, which our Maps place in Lat. 26. Long. 74. Ogilby ſays, it has a Market every day, and a good Trade in Callico, Indico, and Woollen Cloth.

XII. Dehli lies E. and N. E. from Hendows, abounds with Wheat, Rice, excellent Sugar, good Indico, and Fruits of all ſorts. Here are Camels of ſeveral kinds, Dromedaries, Elephants, Rhinoceroſſes as big as the largeſt Oxen, Mules, Aſſes, Buffaloes, Deer, Lions, Leopards, Tygers, Panthers, Hawks of all ſorts, and a good Breed of Horſes. Thevenot ſays, the Elephants here are of ſeveral kinds, go for moſt part in Troops, and when they do ſo hurt no body, but when they ſtraggle, kill and eat ſuch People as fall in their way. The Mogul is chiefly ſupplied with them from hence; and they are caught either by Pit-falls, or decoying them by tame Females.

Dehli the Capital lies on the River Gemena, which falls into the Ganges, is in Lat. 28. near Long. 77 ½. Some think it to be the Seat of King Porus, who fought with Alexander the Great. It was then a very large City, as appears by its Ruins near the preſent Town, which, Sanſon ſays, was built by Cha-Jehan, who call'd it Jehanabad. Near the Town there's a Stone Pyramid with unknown Characters, which the Natives think was erected by Alexander after the Defeat of Porus: But this ſeems improbable, becauſe the Characters in that Caſe muſt have been Greek. The City is compos'd of three Towns join'd together. The Fortreſs is half a League in Circuit, with good Walls, abundance of round Towers, large Ditches, and lovely Gardens about the whole. Here the Mogul has a Palace, which is very large and ſtately, with noble Apartments and rich Thrones. There's a Square towards the River for warlike Exerciſes, and the Fighting of Elephants, which is that Prince's chief Diverſion; and on the ſide of the Town there's another, where his Raja's, or Princes, keep Guard, and exerciſe their Troops; and it ſerves alſo for a Market-Place. The other remarkable Structures are the great Moſque with Domes of white Marble, and a noble Caravanſera. The two chief Streets are long, wide, and ſtrait, arch'd on both ſides, with Shops and Warehouſes under the Arches, and over them Terraſs-Walks, for the People to take the Air. Theſe Streets end at the great Square before the Palace, and form a lovely Proſpect. The other Streets are narrow, and the ordinary Houſes built of Earth and Canes. The Town is populous when the Court is here, but at other times ill inhabited. Many of the Inhabitants, eſpecially the Raja's, are very rich, particularly in Jewels, which they preſerve from Father to Son. The Pagan Women are handſome and chaſte, but the Mahometan Females otherwiſe. The City is about three Leagues round, and lies on the River in form of a Creſcent. The Walls are of Brick and red Stone, but not ſtrong. The Houſes of the Omrahs, or Great Men, are large and airy, have great Courts, Gardens, Groves of Trees, Ponds, Water-Works, and large Fans to cool the Air. They have Terraſſes equal with their Bed-Chambers, upon which they lie in Summer, but retire to their Chambers in the Morning, when there generally falls a piercing Dew, which occaſions Palſies and other Diſtempers. The Apartments of the Omrahs are very ſumptuous: Their Floors cover'd with Silk Tapeſtry, embroider'd with Gold and Silver; and they have Cuſhions of Brocade for Gueſts of Note. The Walls are full of Niches of different Figures, gilt or painted, and ſet off with China Pots full of Flowers. Others of Faſhion cover their Floors with Mats of Cotton in Summer, and Silk Tapeſtry in Winter. Rich Goods are ſold in the Warehouſes, and Proviſions in the common Shops. The ordinary Cooks dreſs Camels, Horſes, and Carrion; ſo that Strangers can have nothing good but what they buy from the Mogul's Butlers in the Palace at a dear Rate. Their Meat of all ſorts taſtes well, but ſeldom keeps above a day, and is hard of Digeſtion. The common ſort, and eſpecially the Heathens, who eat no Meat, feed on Rice, Barley, Wheat, Grey Peaſe, Oil, and Butter. Here's good Fiſh, but ſcarce, becauſe none muſt take them but the Omrahs. Wine is very ſcarce and dear, becauſe none muſt drink it but Strangers. The Climate is ſo hot, that by day the Emperor and all his Lords go bare-legg'd with thin Slippers, and very ſlight Garments. The moſt remarkable Thing about this City is the famous Road from hence to Agra on the South, and to Lahor on the North-weſt. 'Tis planted with Trees on each ſide, 500 Miles long, including Turnings and Windings, and each Half-league is mark'd with a Turret; and there are little Inns for Travellers. At one of thoſe Inns, ſix Leagues from Agra, is an Idol-Temple, one of the faireſt in the Indies, and an Hoſpital for Apes, to which the Pilgrims bring Food. Thevenot ſays, this Road is infeſted with Tygers, Panthers, Lions, and Robbers of both Sexes, who throw Nooſes with great dexterity about the Necks of Travellers, ſtrangle, and rob them. They alſo plant beautiful Women on the Road to enſnare Travellers; and theſe Sluts have always Bullies at hand to ſurprize them. Here are many other Towns in this Province, which we can't inſiſt on.

XIII. Sende, or Tatta, lies Eaſt from Perſia, and South from Bukor. The River Indus forms ſeveral Iſlands in this Country. The Capital of the ſame Name lies in an Iſland form'd by that River, Lat. 26. Long. 70. 'Tis the chief trading Town of the Province. Merchants buy many Curioſities made by the Inhabitants, who are in general Mahometans, and very ingenious in all Arts. The beſt and fineſt Palanquins and Travelling Chariots in India are made here. The Palanquins are Couches with four Feet, Balluſters of five Inches high on each ſide, and Stays at Head and Foot, with Mats or Cuſhions at bottom to lie or ſit upon. They are carried by four Men with Poles on their Shoulders, are very convenient; and thoſe for Perſons of Quality are chargeable, being adorn'd with Plates of cary'd Silver, cover'd and lin'd with Velvet, and the Carriages finely painted. This Town had a great Trade formerly by the Portugueſe, and is ſtill frequented by

Merchants

Merchants of ſeveral Nations. The chief Commodities are fine Cotton, Linen, Turbants, Carpets, fine Leather-Work, Boxes, Cabinets, and other curious Utenſils of Timber inlaid with Mother of Pearl. Here's alſo Oil of Cocoa-Nuts, Butter, Sugar, Pitch, Roſin, Stuffs of all ſorts, Anniſeeds, &c. which are brought down the Indus in Veſſels from the other Provinces. Lauribander, at the Mouth of the River, is the Port of this City, and, Thevenot ſays, the beſt Road in the Indies, there being no Worms here to gnaw the Ships, as elſewhere in this Country.

XIV. Bando, or Mando, lies Eaſt from Sinde. It abounds with Lions, Tygers, Elephants, Black Cattel with Bunches in the fore-part of their Backs, Opium, Azure, Saltpetre, and Muſk. The Country is infeſted by Scorpions, whoſe Venom they draw out by holding a live Coal to the Wound. The Inhabitants are Clowniſh and Thieviſh. In ſome Parts the Females marry at eight or nine, and have Children at ten Years of Age. The young ones go naked, but cover their Privities with a Rag. Oxen are made uſe of here for riding, govern'd by Strings thro the Griſtle of their Noſtrils. They uſe them alſo to draw Coaches; and they have white ones for that Uſe, which are very dear, and ſometimes ſold at 50 l. apiece. They are very beautiful: Thoſe of Quality tip their Horns with Copper.

The Capital, called Bando, or Aſmer, in Lat. 26. Long. 75. has a Caſtle on a high Mountain of difficult Acceſs, and lies at the Foot of it, near a broad River. 'Tis ſtrong by Situation, well fortified; and the Mogul has a ſpacious Stone Palace, where he often reſides, and near it a fine Grotto cut out of the Rock. Here are fine Moſques, and a noble Mauſoleum; near which there's a Tower an hundred and ſeventy Steps high, adorn'd with Porticos and Pillars, fine Gates and Windows. The Houſes of the City are of Stone; and its Gates high and well built. The ſtately Ruins about it ſhew that it has been formerly much larger. Near this City lies the Tomb of a famous Mahometan Saint, named Cogeamund, much frequented by Pilgrims, eſpecially ſuch as want Children. It has three large beautiful Courts, with the Sepulchres of other Saints, adorn'd with Lamps; but the innermoſt, where Cogeamund's lies, is the moſt ſtately, and the Gate of his Sepulchre adorn'd with Stones of ſeveral Colours mix'd with Mother of Pearl. There are three leſſer Courts, for lodging the Prieſts who attend thoſe Sepulchres, and read the Alcoran. Eckbar, the Great Mogul, made a Pilgrimage on foot hither from Agra, which is two hundred Miles, order'd a Stone for reſting on to be plac'd at every Mile, fair Houſes to be built for his Ladies at the end of every ten, and Inns for Man and Horſe at every twenty five, where they are entertain'd by Women, who demand but three Pence a Meal for Man and Horſe.

XV. Agra, or Indoſtan Proper, lies Eaſt from Bando. 'Tis not ſo fruitful of Corn and Wheat as Dehli, but abounds with Indigo, Manufactures of white Cloth, Stuffs of Silk, Silver, and Gold Lace, &c. which make it one of the richeſt Countries in the Indies. Eckbar founded the Town in 1566, and made it the Seat of his Empire, which ſoon drew Numbers of Merchants and other People thither, and particularly Popiſh Merchants, becauſe he allow'd the Jeſuits a Settlement and Penſion here, which they ſtill enjoy. The Town lies upon the Gemna, and is very long, becauſe the Houſes are ſo built as to have a Proſpect of the River. The Air is exceſſive hot in Summer, becauſe the Sun-Beams reflect from the Sands which lie near the Town. Bernier ſays, 'tis much larger than Dehli, and the adjacent Country very beautiful, becauſe of the ſtately Palaces of the Omrahs. Catrou ſays, 'tis nine Miles long, but not near ſo broad. Tavernier ſays, the Houſes are at a good diſtance from one another, and encompaſs'd with high Walls, that their Women may not be ſeen. Thevenot ſays, the Town is very populous, but not able to raiſe 200000 fighting Men, as ſome have given out; for the Palaces and Gardens take up the greateſt part of it. The Mahometans are moſt in Number; and ſome reckon 25000 Chriſtian Families, beſides Heathens. Bernier has no great Opinion of the Roman Miſſionaries here; ſays, moſt of them are ignorant and ſcandalous, and not ſo devout in their way as the Mahometans. The Dutch have a Factory in this City, and trade chiefly in Scarlet, Looking-Glaſſes, Silver, Gold, and White Lace, Hard Ware, Indigo, Cloth of Jelapour, and Spices. They have Houſes at ſeveral other Towns, whither they ſend Factors once a Year, and have always ſome Perſons near Court, to prevent being impos'd upon by the covetous tyrannical Governors on the Coaſt of Bengal, where they have Settlements. Here are above ſixty Caravanſeras, ſome of which have ſix large Courts, with Porticos and commodious Apartments for Merchants. The Baths are about eight hundred, and the Moſques ſeven hundred, ſome of which are Sanctuaries for Criminals. Here are about thirty Palaces of the Grandees, which lie in a Line from that of the Mogul, and many other leſſer Palaces and Structures in the ſame Line, which form a charming Proſpect on the other ſide the River. The Town abounds alſo with magnificent Sepulchres, it being the Cuſtom of the Grandees to build their own, or leave it in charge to their Sons. The two moſt remarkable are thoſe built by the Great Mogul Jehan Guir for his Father, and his own beloved Queen. They lie Eaſt from the Town; betwixt which and them there's a noble Walk, or rather Street with fine Houſes, Gardens, Caravanſeras, Canals, Ponds, magnificent Pavilions, with Arches and Galleries over one another, in ſuch admirable Order as charms the Spectators; beautiful Domes, Alcoves, large Terraſs-Walks, curious Water-Works, and Flower-Plots. The Queen's Sepulchre is in a large ſtately Dome of white Marble, encompaſs'd with Turrets of the ſame, that riſe gradually above one another. This Dome is ſupported by four great Arches, adorn'd in the Centre with Tables of white Marble inlaid with Arabian Characters of black Marble, and the Inſide of the Dome lin'd and floor'd with white Marble of curious Workmanſhip, embelliſh'd with Jaſper and precious Stones in various Figures; and beyond this Dome there's a large high Terraſs-Walk, from whence there's a Proſpect of the River, the Mogul's and other Palaces and Gardens: So that Bernier thinks this Mauſoleum deſerves better to be reckon'd among the Wonders of the World than the Pyramids of Egypt, or any thing elſe. He ſays, 'twas contriv'd by the ableſt Architects of the Indies, and twenty Years a building by great Numbers of Men. But the ordinary Houſes are low, made up for the moſt part of Straw, and ill inhabited when the Court is not there.

The Habits of the People differ little from thoſe of the Perſians: The better ſort wear long Breeches of ſtrip'd Silk, with their Shifts hanging over them, and open before from top to bottom for Coolneſs. In the Winter they have Waiſtcoats quilted with Cotton, the Outſide pink'd and painted with beautiful Colours; and over all, a Veſt of Cloth of Gold, or other rich Stuff, lin'd with Sables, tied before with Ribbands, and girt about with fine Perſian Girdles. They wear Maroquin Slippers, and thoſe of Quality have 'em border'd with Gold. The Women of Rank adorn their Arms as high as the Elbow with Caskanets and Bracelets of Silver, Gold, or Ivory, ſet with precious Stones; and they wear the like on the Small of their Legs.

They have a Way here of inlaying Gold upon Agat, Chryſtal, and other brittle Metal, better than our Lapidaries; and their Workmen exceed ours in Japanning and Furneering with Silver, Gold, &c.

The Mogul's PALACE, COURT, FORCES, REVENUES, and ADMINISTRATION.

Manouchi, an Italian, who liv'd in this Country forty eight Years, was the Great Mogul's Phyſician, and publiſh'd his Memoirs of this Empire in 1697, gives the following Account: He ſays, the Court is ſo ſumptuous, that it even ſurprizes Italians, who ſee ſo much Splendor in their own Country. He owns that the Structures are not ſo regular as thoſe of Rome and Venice, but have particular Beauties; are no way ſhocking to the Eye, and are more commodious, conſidering the Cuſtoms of the Country, than our Numbers of lofty Stories. The Palace, he ſays, is a Citadel, in form of a Creſcent, on the Banks of the Gemna. The Walls are mounted with Cannon of a middling ſize, planted at equal diſtances. The Palace is ſeen from afar, is built of red Stone like ſpeckled Marble, and caſts a beautiful Reflection when the Sun ſhines upon it. 'Tis encompaſs'd with Ditches, and a Terraſs-Garden, cut thro with Canals of running Water, mix'd with green Plots and Houſes of Pleaſure, which form a very lovely Proſpect. 'Tis divided from the City by a large Square, where the Raja's keep Guard by turns at the two Outer-gates, which face the principal Streets of the City. Without the Gates, which have Bridges over the Ditch, there's a large Canal of running Water, enclos'd by Walls of Stone ſo broad on both ſides, that there's a Way for Elephants, and for Paſſengers on foot and horſeback, with abundance of Guard-Houſes, other Habitations, and Shops, at certain diſtances. Here are likewiſe Apartments and Offices for the inferior Officers of the Court, and long Galleries for the Emperor's Manufactures of Stuffs of Gold, Silk, Silver, Tapeſtry, &c. Goldſmiths and Enamellers, that work for the Palace under their proper Directors. At the end of the Canal there's a large round Place of Arms, where the chief Officers of the Army muſter their Troops every day, and keep guard by turns. The whole Palace is encompaſs'd with Tents for the inferior Officers and Soldiers; ſo that one muſt march thro a conſiderable Army before one can enter the firſt Court of the Palace, which is a large Square ſupported by Arches, and affords a Shade at all times of the Day: And from a Height in the Square there's a Concert of Muſical Inſtruments, which play at certain Hours. This Court gives Entrance to the magnificent Hall of Audience, where all Subjects have liberty to come for Juſtice. 'Tis very large, open towards the Court; and at the end of it is the Emperor's Throne. About Noon the Omrahs come hither, ſtand on an Alcove rais'd ſome Steps above the Pavement, within a Silver Balluſter of curious Workmanſhip, next to the Throne. They keep ſilence till the Emperor comes, which is notified by the Sound of Inſtruments. He ſits down on his Throne, with his Sons at his Feet, on Cuſhions of Brocade; and Eunuchs ſtand by him with Fans to drive away the Flies, which is reckon'd an honourable Poſt. The Throne glitters ſo much with precious Stones, that it dazzles one's Eyes. 'Tis cover'd above with the Figures of two Peacocks, compos'd of Jewels. In this State and Magnificence he adminiſters Juſtice. The Omrahs give him an Account of Cauſes, Civil or Criminal, in a few Words; to which he gives cloſe Attention, and ſoon decides the Matter. The Moguls never fail to be preſent at the Hour of Audience; and they value themſelves ſo much on their Penetration and equitable Deciſions in difficult Caſes, that they have frequently order'd themſelves to be carried to this Throne when almoſt ſick to death. If the Crime reach Life, the Criminal is executed on the ſpot, and either trampled to death by Elephants, beheaded, or ſtung by a poiſonous Snake. Cauſes of leſs weight he leaves to the Omrahs, and ſees his Elephants and Horſes paſs before him in the Court. From this Hall he goes to the Council-Chamber, where he and his chief Omrahs treat of Affairs of State. After Sun-ſet he returns to the Great Hall, where he reviews his Troops as they paſs by in the Court, and particularly a Troop of Guards who are always about him, and appear then by Torch-light, with great Staves in their Hands, cover'd with Plate, and adorn'd at top with the Figures of Animals and Conſtellations. Out of them he chuſes Ambaſſadors for foreign Courts. None of the Lords are admitted with him into the Seraglio, where there there are 2000 Women, divided into ſeveral Orders. The firſt are the Empreſſes of the firſt Rank: The ſecond, Wives or Concubines of the ſecond Rank: The third are the Princeſſes, among whom the young Princes are kept: The fourth are the Queen's Ladies, and the Governeſſes of the young Princeſſes: The fifth are the Women Muſicians: And the ſixth, the Female Slaves, among whom live the Eunuchs. His Wives of the firſt Order are ſometimes ſix. Theſe are uſually the Daughters of Raja's, and married with Ceremony; but ſometimes he advances his Concubines, Female Muſicians, and Dancers, to that Dignity. None but the Sons of thoſe chief Wives ſucceed to the Crown; and ſince it was never known that a Mogul had above four Sons at a time, 'tis ſuppoſed that all above this Number are deſtroyed while Infants. All thoſe Wives have magnificent Apartments; and the Splendor of them proportion'd to their Rank. None but the Queens of the firſt Order, with the Princes and Princeſſes of the Blood, are ſerv'd from the Emperor's Kitchen; for the reſt have Penſions allow'd for their Maintenance. When the Daughters are thirteen or fourteen Years of Age, they are put into Seraglios of their own, and treated with as much Magnificence as the Queens. They are educated with great Indulgence, and being the chief Amuſement of their Father, their principal Study is to pleaſe him, and many times he allows them a greater Liberty than becomes their Sex and Dignity, which occaſions frequent Diſorders in the Seraglio; but the Governeſſes take ſuch care, that they are paſſed over without much noiſe. Nothing can be more rich and ſumptuous than the Head-Dreſſes and Apparel of the Queens and Princeſſes; ſome of them wear Turbants with Plumes of Feathers, adorned with Pearls and Diamonds; others wear their Treſſes in form of a Pyramid, interlaced with Pearl, which makes a ſort of Royal Diadem on their Foreheads, in the middle of which there's a rich Jewel, reſembling the Sun, a Creſcent, a Star, or ſome Flower. Their Necklaces are of the fineſt Oriental Pearl, mixed with Diamonds, Rubies, and Saphires. Their Clothes are of the fineſt Indian Silk, and becauſe of the Heat of the Climate, are ſo light, that they ſcarce weigh an Ounce. They never wear them above a day, and always vary their Colour. They load themſelves with Diamonds and Pearls, and glitter all over with Jewels of ineſtimable Value. Manouchi ſays, that the Reader may ſuppoſe that he is telling him a Story of Fairy Land; but adds, that the Mogul's Court is richer in Jewels than we can imagine in Europe. Tamerlane, the Founder of their Empire, plundered moſt of the Palaces in Aſia of their Jewels, and it is ſtill the Cuſtom of the Eaſtern Princes to add to their Collections. Aurengzebe, when he conquered Golconda, became Maſter of the Diamond-Mines there; and beſide what they have annually for Tribute, they buy the richeſt that can be had for their Wives and Daughters. They are all bored, to prevent the Sale of them to Merchants: and when any of the Queens or Princeſſes die, the Emperor ſeizes all, ſo that none of them are ever ſuffered to go out of the Palace. Thoſe for the Emperor's own Uſe are Maſter-pieces of Nature, and he calls them by particular Names, as the Sun, Moon, &c. He has ſix other Thrones, beſides that in the Great Hall, all ſet with Diamonds, Rubies, Emeralds, and the richeſt Pearl, made up in ſeveral Figures: That in the Great Hall was began by Tamerlane, finiſhed by Cha Jehan, and, if we may believe Tavernier, coſt above thirteen Millions Sterling. His Horſes and Elephants of War have all their Trappings of Silver and Gold, adorned with Diamonds and Pearl. The Elephants are taught to do him Obeiſance, and the keeping of them coſts great Sums. He is always ſerved by Women himſelf, and has a Guard of 100 Tartar Ladies, armed with Bows, Scimetars, and Darts, commanded by a Lady, who has the ſame Penſion as one of his Generals. He is obliged to this Precaution, becauſe the Jealouſy of his Queens and Concubines makes them implacably revengeful. He is alſo attended by 1200 Eunuchs, and the Number of his daily Attendants is reckoned 12000. He has two Apartments in the Palace, covered all over with Plates of Gold; and the Pillars, which ſupport his Pavilions, are covered with that Metal. Captain Hawkins ſays, the annual Expence of the Court in his time was 7300000 l. Sterling. Bernier ſays, when the Emperor goes a hunting, he is attended by above 100 Elephants with rich Trappings, and 20000 Men belonging to the Court. His Birth-Day is kept with more Solemnity than any Day conſecrated to their Deity: He is then adorned with his richeſt Jewels, and weighed in a Gold Balance againſt Gold, Silver, precious Stones, Silks, Butter, Rice, &c. which are afterwards given to the Poor. They keep an exact Account of his Weight every year, and meaſure their Rejoicing according to its Increaſe. He throws handfuls of Gold, made up like Fruit of ſeveral ſorts, from the Throne among his Nobles, but the Pieces are ſo thin that they don't come to much. This Solemnity laſts five Days, and the Preſents he receives, on this Occaſion, from the ſeveral Parts of his Dominions, and from his Grandees, amount ſometimes to a Million and half Sterling. He worſhips the Sun when it riſes, at Noon, and when it ſets, in preſence of his Omrahs. The Ladies about the Queen and Princeſſes, and the Eunuchs who attend the Seraglio, have the chief Sway at Court, which obliges the Grandees to a Dependance upon him. The chief Officers of the Court are, (1.) The Grand Viſier, or Lord Chancellor, who ſometimes has the Title of a Prince: he has the chief Management of Civil and Military Affairs, and muſt take no Preſents, but his Secretaries do. (2.) The chief of the Eunuchs. (3.) The Lord High Steward of the Treaſury, who wears a long Coat of Tiſſue, has twenty one Secretaries, and is carried in a Palanquin, with four Sceptres of Silver, and ten Standards before him. (4.) The principal Secretary of State. (5.) The General of the Elephants. (6.) The Surveyor of the Houſhold-ſtuff, Tents, and Jewels. Theſe are conſtant Members of the Privy Council, and ſometimes the Commander of the Guards, who is alſo Lord Chief Juſtice, is called to it. Theſe Officers approach the Mogul with a profound Veneration, make many Bows and Reverences when they ſpeak to him, and go out from him backward, bowing their Heads down to the Ground, put their Hands over their Eyes, and then upon their Breaſts, to ſhew their Humility. When the Emperor expreſſes his Friendſhip to any of them, he lays his Hand on their Shoulders, and as he changes his Apparel every day, they reckon it the greateſt Honour if he ſends them one of thoſe Suits.

His Forces.

MANOUCHI ſays, his Troops don't ſo much want Courage, as the Knowledge of true Diſcipline, and the Uſe of Arms. They come far ſhort of Europeans, but excel all their Neighbours. The Army, which encamps every day at the Gates of his Palace, amounts to 50000 Horſe, beſides a prodigious number of Foot. The Body moſt eſteemed are thoſe called his 4000 Slaves, who are marked in their Foreheads, and they are advanced by degrees from a Subaltern Officer to a General. There's another ſort, called the Guards of Gold, Silver, and Iron, who are alſo marked in the Forehead, have Pay in proportion to the Metal whoſe Names they bear, are all choſen Men; and no Man arrives to a Dignity in the State, until he has ſerved or diſtinguiſhed himſelf in one of thoſe Bodies, for Birth gives no Preheminence in his Armies. Manouchi gives a Liſt of the Men which every Kingdom or Province is obliged to raiſe, which amounts to 309667 Horſe, and 619336 Foot, in all 929003 Men, beſides the 200000 that attend the Court.

He has at leaſt 12000 Horſes in his Stables, and 500 Elephants, to which he gives whimſical Names, as The Terror of Armies, &c. and The Flight of the Wind, &c. The Harneſs of his Elephants is prodigiouſly rich. He that carries the Emperor has a ſtately Throne on his Back, adorned with Gold and precious Stones. The Trappings of the reſt are covered with Plates of Gold and Silver, their Houſings embroidered, and adorned with Gold Bells and Fringes. Manouchi took an Account of his Revenues from the ſeveral Provinces, as it ſtood in the Records of the Empire in 1697. the Total of which amounted to 48,278,069 l. Sterling; and his caſual Revenues from a Poll-Tax on the Pagan Indians, and Impoſts on Goods, &c. he reckons at the like Sum.

His Government and Adminiſtration.

MANOUCHI ſays, he is abſolute, and his Subjects no better than Slaves. The Affairs of State are managed by three or four Omrahs of the firſt Order, according as he commands them. The Etmadoulet is the chief Miniſter, but 'tis commonly a Title without Employment; for he is advanced as the Emperor pleaſes, without regard to Experience. He is ſometimes a Prince of the Blood, ſometimes the Father of a beloved Queen, or taken from the loweſt Order of the Militia, and ſometimes from the very Mob: So that the Burden of Government lies upon the two Secretaries of State, one of which collects the Money, and the other pays it. There's a third Officer, who ſeizes the Eſtates of all that die. This is a gainful, but odious Employ. The Command of the Armies, when the Emperor is not there in Perſon, is given to a Prince of the Blood; and if there be none ſuch, 'tis given to two Generals, one named by the Mogul out of the Mahometan Omrahs, and the other out of the Indian Rajas.

The Viceroys, Governors of Provinces, and Magiſtrates of Towns, act by the ſame Rules in adminiſtring Juſtice, as the Emperor himſelf does at Court. They alone decide all Affairs relating to the Lives and Fortunes of the People under their Juriſdiction. There's likewiſe a Judge appointed to determine certain Affairs in Towns, if the Parties pleaſe: but all have the Privilege of immediate Recourſe to the Governors of Places, the Viceroys of Provinces, or the Emperor himſelf.

There's likewiſe one, who is both a Civil Judge and a Grand Provoſt in Towns and Provinces. His Buſineſs is to prevent Drunkenneſs, and other Debauchery. He muſt give the Emperor an Account of all domeſtick Diſorders in private Families, of all Quarrels and Tumults, and of all Meetings by night; for which end he entertains great numbers of Spies, that go every morning into Peoples Houſes, inform themſelves from the Servants of what happens, and make their Report. He is to anſwer, out of his Salary, for all Robberies committed in his Diſtrict; therefore he always keeps Soldiers in the Province, and Perſons diſguiſed in the Towns, to ſee that good Orders be kept. There's another Judge who determines in matters of Religion and Divorce; but neither of theſe Judges can give Sentence of Death till the Cauſe be reported to the Emperor, and his Conſent required three times, on three ſeveral Days, to the Act of Condemnation, before it can be put in execution. Manouchi ſays, in ſhort, that Juſtice is adminiſtred here with the leaſt Delay, for every one pleads his own Cauſe, or by the Omrahs, without any Formality; and ſoon after the Witneſſes are heard, Judgment is given as equitable as it is ſpeedy; for all falſe Witneſſes and Judges are puniſhed with Death.

Murderers are delivered up to the Relations of the Deceaſed, who execute them according to Sentence. Other condemned Malefactors are executed by ſome of the People preſent, and not by a common Hangman: Some are ſowed up in moiſt Hides, expoſed to the Sun, which, as they dry and ſhrink, cruſh them to death: Some are condemned to go thro every Street in the City with Oxes Horns on their Heads: Some have their Eyes put out, ſome are poiſoned, and others hanged. When Noblemen are condemned, for any Crime leſs than High Treaſon, they are allowed to fight a Lion for their Lives. Murderers of Parents are tied to the Tails of Elephants, and dragged along the Streets till they die. No Malefactor lies in Priſon above one night, and ſometimes not at all; for if apprehended in the morning, he is carried immediately before a Judge, who either diſcharges or condemns him, according to Evidence; and if the Sentence be leſs than Death, he is puniſhed in his Preſence; but if condemned to die, he is inſtantly carried to the Market-Place, and executed. This ſudden way of puniſhing Offenders keeps the People in ſuch Awe, that they ſeldom commit capital Crimes.

There are many other Towns in this Province, but we can only take notice of Telipore, about ten miles Weſt from Agra. Fitch ſays, that in his time it was larger than Agra, and either of them bigger than London. The Mogul had a ſtately Palace here, and built a noble Bazar, ſix times larger than our Royal Exchange, and ſupported with beautiful Columns of one Stone each; but Thevenot ſays, tho the Mogul deſigned to have made it his Metropolis, he quitted it, becauſe the Water of the Place was unwholeſome. He adds, that tho the Town be much decayed, it has ſtill many fair Buildings, and a great Manufacture of Taffetas.

XVI. Guzuratte, or the Kingdom of Cambaya, lies South from Tatta, on the Arabian Gulph. Thevenot ſays, 'tis the pleaſanteſt Province of Indoſtan, fruitful, and ſo well watered, that it looks verdant all the Year, and abounds with Corn, and all ſorts of Fruit common to Europe and the Indies. They have alſo ſtore of Cattel, Fowl, and Fiſh. The Inhabitants are deſcended from the old Indians, and blacker than the Moguls, by whom this Country was ſubdued in 1565. Places of Note are,

(1.) Amedabad, Lat. 22. Long. 72. a very [illegible] rong City. Peljaert ſa[illegible] ous Indian Silks

Silks and Stuffs from China, Cuſhions wrought with Gold Wire, Spikenard, and many other Drugs, Sugar and Stuffs of Bengal, &c. and that they export Scarves for Turbants, Womens Headclothes wrought with Gold, Velvet, Sattins, Coco-Nuts, European Cloth, Lead, Pewter, Vermillion, Quickſilver, and Spices of all ſorts, which they buy of the Dutch at Surat. The Engliſh have a fair Lodge here, with Courts and convenient Apartments for their Goods. Thevenot ſays, the Dutch Merchants had alſo a Factory in the beſt Street, and dealt chiefly in painted Callicoes. The Town has many fair Moſques, Sepulchres, and Caravanſeras. Tavernier ſays, there are Hoſpitals here for lame and wounded Birds and Beaſts, that are carefully fed by the Pagans, who likewiſe feed multitudes of Apes, that have got a Haunt of coming to the Town on purpoſe, and retire very orderly to the neighbouring Woods. Ogilby ſays, 'tis one of the four Cities which the Mogul honours with his Court. The Moors have thirty great Temples beſides leſſer ones. The Banians have twelve in the City, beſides others in the Suburbs. The Brahmans have four, and the Armenians, Abyſſines, and Jews have likewiſe their Places of Worſhip. Thevenot gives a very particular Account of their chief Moſques and Sepulchres, and makes them extraordinary magnificent Structures, as he does their chief Caravanſeras. About a League and half from hence, at a large Village, there's the beſt Manufacture of Indico, and a ſtately Sepulchre of one of the Mahometan Saints, much frequented by Pilgrims.

(2.) Cambaya, in the Neck of the Peninſula, about 58 miles South Weſt from Amedabad, near the bottom of the Bay, to which it gives Name. Thevenot ſays, 'tis a very large City, twice as big as Surat, but not ſo populous, and is defended by Brick-Walls, with Towers upon them at certain diſtances. Mandeſtoe ſays, 'tis ten Leagues round, and has twelve Gates. The Houſes are of Brick, and high. Their Trade is in Perfumes, Spices, Silks, and other Stuffs, Ivory Bracelets, Chaplets, Rings, Cups of Agat, of which they have Quarries about four Leagues from the Town, but the Pieces no bigger than one's Fiſt. The Streets are large, and have Gates at their Ends, which they ſhut at night. The Governour reſides in the Caſtle, which is ſpacious, but not beautiful. There are ſeveral large Piazzas in the middle of the City, many fair Gardens within and without the Town, which abound with Mango-Trees. Here are likewiſe ſtately Sepulchres, one of which has three Courts, ſupported by Pillars of Porphyry. The Inhabitants are moſtly Banians and Rajeputs, who thinking it unlawful to take the Life of any Creature, the City is peſtered with Monkeys, which ſwarm on the Tops of Houſes, and throw things at the Peoples Heads. In the Suburbs there are Manufactures of Indico. The Sea, which formerly came up to this City, is now fallen half a League from it, which has leſſened their Trade, becauſe great Ships can come no nearer than three or four Leagues. The Tide is ſo ſwift to the North of the Gulph, that a Man on horſeback can't keep pace with the firſt Waves; therefore great Ships ſeldom go thither. The Dutch Ships don't come hither till the end of September, becauſe there's a violent Wind on this Coaſt the beginning of that Month, accompanied with thick Clouds, call'd Elephants, becauſe of their Shape; ſo that 'tis hardly poſſible to eſcape Shipwreck. There are likewiſe dangerous Banks in the Gulph, and the Coaſt is infeſted by Malabar Pirates. Thoſe who travel from hence to Surat by Land, take as a Safeguard one of the Gentiles, called Tcherons, and his Wife, becauſe the neighbouring Pagans have a great Veneration for this Tribe: ſo that if they offer to rob thoſe under their Guard, the Man threatens to cut his own Throat, and the Woman to cut off one of her Breaſts; upon which the Robbers march off, becauſe their Tribes would abandon them, as they have done ſeveral, who ſuffered thoſe People to kill themſelves rather than loſe their Booty. The Man and the Woman have a Crown a-day for this Service, but many times oblige Travellers to compound with the Robbers, in which 'tis ſuppoſed they go Sharers. The neighbouring Woods abound with Peacocks, and near the City there's an Idol Temple, frequented by Strumpets, where they worſhip naked Images, and particularly a large one of Apollo, with his Nudities uncovered. The Bawds purchaſe young Female Slaves, and train them up in this Place to Singing, Dancing, and their lewd Art. About nine miles from the Town the Mogul has one of his faireſt Palaces, with beautiful Gardens, &c. The Citizens have Ciſterns for Rain-Water, becauſe that of the Country is ſalt.

(3.) Dion is a Peninſula, or rather an Iſland of the ſame Name on the South-ſide of Guzurat, at the Entrance of the Gulph of Cambaya, Lat. 21. Long. 69. The Town is little, but the ſtrongeſt that the Portugueſe have in the Eaſt-Indies; 'twas fortified by Albuquerque, the famous Portugueſe General, in 1515. and has been beſieged in vain both by Indians and Turks, who were obliged to retire from before it with great Loſs. The Harbour is good and ſafe, and it had formerly a good Trade; but ſince the Engliſh and Dutch ſettled in Cambaya and Surat, 'tis much decay'd. The famous Stones named Cobra, that are uſed as Antidotes againſt Poiſon, are made here of the Aſhes of Roots burnt together with a ſort of Earth, and made up into Paſte. There are ſeveral Pariſh-Churches and Monaſteries, and the chief Trade now is in Corn.

(4.) Surat, on the Eaſt-ſide of the Gulph of Cambaya, Lat. 21. Long. 70. about 115 miles South from Cambaya. 'Tis a Town of the greateſt Note and Trade in the Indies. It lies on the River Tapti, about as broad here as the Thames at Windſor. The adjacent Country is ſandy, and the Air hot, but moiſt betwixt June and September, and mixed with Wind and Thunder. For the other eight Months, it either ſcorches or freezes. It was burnt by the Portugueſe, and afterwards taken by the Great Mogul in 1566. The Houſes are of carved Wood, or Sun-dried Bricks, and flat at top. Thoſe belonging to the Engliſh and Dutch are more ſtately than the reſt. The Town is ſquare, and on the Land-ſide has a good Stone-Rampart with fair Gardens. Lockyer ſays, the Caſtle lies near the Town, was founded by Tamerlane, defends the Entry of the River, and has a Drawbridge over it. There is a large Tower at each Corner of the Caſtle, mounted with Cannon, and the Ditch is filled by Water from the Sea and River. The Revenues of the Province are kept here. The Governour is independent on him of the Town, has a Gariſon of 300 Men, but muſt not go beyond a Garden near the Bridge on pain of Death. Building is dear here, becauſe the Materials are ſcarce and far-fetched. The Houſes of the meaner ſort are of Canes, covered with Palm-Branches. The Streets are large and ſtrait, have Shops on both ſides, but are not paved. Dr. Fryer ſays, the Engliſh Houſe here is partly the Emperor's Gift, and partly hired. 'Tis built of Stone and Timber, with excellent Carving, but no Figures of Animals. The Floors are made of the beſt Plaiſter, half a yard thick. The Preſident has ſpacious Lodgings, with pleaſant Tanks, Yards, and Hummums. The Houſe has upper and lower Galleries or Terraſs-Walks, with a neat Oratory, and a convenient Place for Dining. The Factory is known by an Engliſh Flag diſplayed at top, and was bravely defended by the Engliſh againſt two Attacks by the Rebel Seva Gi, when he plundered Surat. The Engliſh alſo ſaved the Caſtle, when the Mogul Governors of the Province and Town were afraid to ſhew their Heads. The Old and New Engliſh Eaſt-India Companies had ſeparate Houſes here, but the united Trade is now managed in the new Factory by a Preſident and Council, who have Factors under them that live in good Credit. The four chief Officers of the Factory are, (1.) The Accomptant, who is next to the Preſident, manages the general Accounts of all our Factories in India, and ſigns every thing, but the Broker keeps the Caſh. (2.) The Warehouſe-keeper, who regiſters all European Goods that are vended, and receives all the Eaſtern Commodities that are bought here. (3.) The Purſer-Marine, who gives an Account of Imports and Exports, pays the Seamen, provides Waggons and Porters, and looks after the Ships Tackling and Stores. (4.) The Secretary, who models all Conſultations, writes all Letters, carries them to the Preſident and Council to be peruſed and ſigned, keeps the Companies Seal, records all Tranſactions, and ſends Copies of them to the Company; but none of thoſe Officers can act any thing without the Approbation of the Preſident, who alone regulates all Affairs, iſſues out Orders, diſpoſes of Places, and manages the Council. The Preſident lives in great State, muſt always reſide here, and is choſe by the Company. His grand Council conſiſts of five Members, who are generally choſe out of the Factors that have acquitted themſelves well; and out of this Council are elected the Deputy-Governor of Bombay, and the Agent of Perſia. In the Extent of the Preſidency the Company has an hundred Servants in this Country; and all Ships, during their Stay, are under the Company's Command. If Offenders be refractory, they are ſent home; but in caſe of capital Crimes, are ſent to Bombay, and tried according to the Laws of England.

They export Cloth to Bantam, and import Sugar, Tea, Porcellane, lacquered Ware, Quickſilver, Tuthinag and Copper from China; Cowrys, and little Sea-Shells, from Siam and the Philippine Iſlands; Gold and Elephants Teeth from Sumatra, in exchange for Corn, Drugs, and Carmania Wool from Perſia, and Coffee from Mocha.

The inland Factories ſubject to this, are Amadabat, where they buy Silks and Gold Atlas's; Agra, where they have Indico; Chuperli, where they have coarſe Cloths; String, where they have Chints; and Baroch, where they have Baftas, broad and narrow Dimities, and other fine Calicoes; Bombay and Rajapore, where they have Salloes; Carnear, where they have Dungarees, and the heavieſt Pepper; Calicut for Spice, Ambergreeſe, Granate, Opium, and Salt-Petre.

The Dutch have alſo a Factory here, where they ſell Spices imported from Batavia; for part of the Product they ſend back coarſe Cloth for their Planters, and the reſt in Money. The French have likewiſe a Factory here, and a Convent of Capuchins.

The Harbour is at the Village of Swalley, or Sovalli, thirty miles North from the Town. All Ships bound to Surat did formerly anchor here, but none have been allowed that Privilege ſince 1666. except the Engliſh and Dutch, who have each a Port, Warehouſes, Gardens, and Burial-Places of their own, which gives them an Opportunity of running Goods at pleaſure. While the Ships lie here, which is commonly from September to March, the Indians, Perſians, Armenians, and Turks pitch their Straw-Huts along the Coaſt like a Fair, where they ſell Callicoes, China, Sattin, Porcellane, Cabinets of Mother of Pearl, Ebony, Ivory, Agats, Turquoiſes, Heliotropes, Plantanes, Arack, &c. There are Numbers of Boys, who ſerve as Interpreters, and go on Errands for 2 d. per day, but will not eat or drink with Chriſtians.

Since the Prohibition above-mentioned, the Ships of other Nations lie at the Bar, twelve miles below the Town, becauſe Veſſels of Burden can't enter the River till unloaded, and at a Spring-Tide, but Small-Craft go up to the City. The Officers of the Cuſtoms are very ſtrict, ſend Waiters to bring the Men and Goods a-ſhore, guard them cloſe till all be ſearched before the chief Officer, take 2 ½ per cent. for the Gold and Silver they have about them, make the Engliſh pay 3 ½ per cent. for the Goods they import, the Dutch 2 ½. other Chriſtians four, and the Banians five. They have no Book of Rates, but charge all things ad Valorem, and many times by delay make the Merchants part with Goods at what rate they pleaſe. They puniſh thoſe who defraud the Cuſtoms by whipping, but don't forfeit their Goods. Here are People of moſt Nations, but the Moors are moſt numerous, and the Engliſh and Dutch the moſt conſiderable Foreigners This Town is the Staple for all the Commodities of Europe, India, and China; and beſides what they ſell at the Harbour, they deal in all the Jewels, precious Stones, Perfumes, Fruits, Drugs, and Spices of the Eaſt, Quickſilver, Lack, &c. The Natives are expert in building Ships, follow the Engliſh Model, and ſail cheap. The Coco-Tree affords them Cordage, but they have their Anchors and Guns from Europe. During the Seaſon of Shipping, from January to April, the Town is ſo filled with Strangers, that Lodging is ſcarce. Here's good Meat and Fowl, their Sauce is Oil of wild Saffron, the beſt in the Indies. Here are ſeveral ſorts of diſtilled Waters, and the Dutch make a tart Wine of their Grapes. Many of the Moors and Banian Merchants are very rich, the former have lofty fine Houſes. The Eaſtern Merchants drive the greateſt Trade. The Governor lives in great State, keeps 1500 Foot and 200 Horſe in Pay, is always attended by 300 Foot, 40 Horſe, 3 Elephants, 24 Banners, Kettle-drums, Trumpets, &c. Next to him is the Coteval, who ſcours the Streets at night with 200 Men, Drums, Trumpets, and Flambeaux: He impriſons Criminals, and ſees Juſtice done upon them. The Cuſtom-houſe and Mint are very handſome Structures. After Sur-

Gu'z

Gi's Rebellion, the Walls of the Town were new built, with two Towers at each of the ſix Gates, which are barbed with Iron Spikes to keep off Elephants. They alſo erected 36 Baſtions, mounted with ſix Guns each, and placed Timber, with Iron Spikes on the tops of them, to hinder ſcaling. There are many Tombs and Out-walks about the Town, where they have Idol-Temples, and bury the Muſſulmen with their Heels upwards. The Citizens have Summer-Houſes in their Gardens, refreſhed by Water-Spouts in the hot Seaſon, and Grottoes, to which they deſcend by Arches and Steps, ſhaded by Trees, till they come to deep Wells, from whence Water is drawn up by Machines for their Gardens. They have alſo noble Banquetting-Houſes, encompaſſed with Trees in form of a Wilderneſs, divided by Gravel-Walks and Water-Courſes. In theſe Gardens they have Silk Cotton-Trees, and one named Culga, which produces Silk, is red as ſcarlet in the Morning, pale at Noon, and milk-white at Night. They have another called Alluh, whoſe Bark is a preſent Remedy againſt all Fluxes: That called the Senſitive Plant is common in their Fields. They have alſo Plantations of Tobacco and Sugar-Canes. Their Hedges and Lanes are ſet for moſt part with Buſhes, called Milk-Trees, becauſe of their white Juice, which is of ſuch a corroding Nature, that it frets one's Skin like an Eſcarotick, and blinds both Men and Beaſts. The Mogul has always four great Ships here, which carry Pilgrims to and from Mecca gratis; and there are ſome Frigates belonging to the Town of 30 or 40 Guns a-piece, but more for Shew than Service. The Moors are ſo ſlothful and proud, that they ſcorn to be taught any thing, and are ſo much addicted to Sodomy, that they are afraid to truſt their Children at School: ſo that few of their Merchants or Great Men can read or write, and therefore employ the Banians as Clerks and Agents, who are very dextrous at cheating. Theſe Banians are the chief Traders in rough Diamonds; and ſome of them, that look as if they were not worth a Groat, carry ſome thouſands of Pounds worth about them to ſell. Dr. Fryer ſays, the City is very naſty for want of Houſes of Office, ſo that they have a Dunghill almoſt at every Door; yet they are ſeldom troubled with the Plague, for the exceſſive Heats ſoon evaporate the noiſome Smells, and the great Rains waſh away the Filth. The Diſeaſes here are according to the Seaſons: The North Wind makes their Bodies ſolid and active, by exhauſting the ſerous Humours, and the dry Weather quickens their Digeſtion; but in the variable Months they are afflicted with Coughs, Catarrhs, Tumors in the Mouth and Throat, Rheumatiſms, and intermitting Fevers; and the Youth here, as well as in moſt part of India, are ſubject to the Small-Pox. In the extreme Heats they are troubled with cholerick Diſeaſes, and Inflammations of the Eyes: During the Rains they have Fluxes, Apoplexies, and Diſtempers of the Brain and Stomach; to prevent this they eat liquid Aſſafætida. Their Phyſicians are without Learning, practiſe only by Experience and Tradition, apply their Medicines, without regard to the Diverſity of Conſtitutions and Seaſons, and what happens to cure one they apply to all. The Doctor ſays, that a Brahman Phyſician got a vaſt Eſtate here, by making a Pouder for Agues of natural Cinnabar, which was as effectual as the Jeſuits Bark. The Engliſh Company has the preference of all Strangers, and are as much reſpected by the Natives as their Omrahs, becauſe of our Naval Force. The Engliſh Houſe is well fortified, has Docks for building Veſſels, and Yards for Seamen, Soldiers, and Stores.

The Inſects here are Centipedes, Scorpions, and large Spiders; they uſe an Oil extracted from thoſe Animals, as an Antidote againſt their Poiſon. The Fields are infected by poiſonous Snakes, and their Rivers by Crocodiles. Here are fine large milk-white Oxen, with circling Horns, artificially modelled in Caſes which ſhine like Jet, and are tipped with Silver, Gold, or Braſs. Such of them as are fit for Coaches coſt 30 or 40 l. a-piece. Horſes are very ſcarce, and ſeldom uſed but for War or Pleaſure, and ſo dear, that 300 l. is an ordinary Price for a good Perſian or Arabian Horſe. Their Buffaloes are dun, as big as the largeſt Oxen, and ſome of them ſo fierce, that they kill People. Here's a ſort of Guiana, which reſembles a Crocodile, and made uſe of by Robbers, who hold them by their Tails when they climber up Houſes. Near Swally there are Groves of Brab-Trees, from whence they draw Wine that reſembles Toddy, and is greedily drunk by the Seamen and Moors. Lockyer ſays, the Goods proper to be ſent hither from Europe, are Wine, Beer, fine Hats, and Perriwigs for Europeans; Small-ſhot, Lead, Iron, Caſe-Knives, Flint-Glaſs, Hubble-bubbles, Roſe-water, Bottles, Cochineal, Red and White Lead, the fineſt Knives and Sword-Blades, with Toys, &c. for the Country Merchants and Engliſh Woollen Manufacture. If a Man ſue here for Debt, Thevenot ſays, he muſt produce a Bond and two Witneſſes, or ſwear to it; if a Chriſtian, on the Goſpel; if a Moor, on the Alcoran; and if a Gentile, he lays his Hand on a Cow, and wiſhes he may eat her Fleſh, if what he ſays be not true: but moſt of them chuſe rather to loſe their Debt than take the Oath, becauſe they reckon it infamous; it being contrary to their Principles to take the Life of any thing, and they think it meritorious to redeem Cattel appointed to Slaughter. Here are many Hermaphrodites, who are obliged to wear a Man's Turbant and Womens Apparel. Many of the ordinary People get their Livelihood by cleanſing Lack, and making it up into Sticks for Sealing-Wax, of which the Engliſh and Dutch export great Quantities. The Pagans, or Banians, here are very magnificent at their Marriages: The Youth appearing in rich Habits of Gold and Silver Stuff, with Mitres on their Heads, and coſtly Saſhes about their Middles. The Bride and Bridegroom ride on horſeback, or in Palankins or Coaches, richly adorned and drawn by painted Oxen or Elks, whoſe Horns are tipped with Silver. They have Banners carried before them, the Women ſing Epithalamiums, and the Men throw Coco-Nuts from Pageants among the Spectators. The Bride and Bridegroom ſit two hours tied together by the Neck, while the Prieſt ſays Prayers; then the Woman has Gold and Silver Shackles put about her Wriſts and Ankles, a white Sheet is laid over her and the Bridegroom, the Bargain is confirmed by exchanging Coco-Nuts, and the Ceremony concludes, by the Prieſt's ſprinkling them with Water, and ſcattering Corn upon them, that they may increaſe and multiply.

The ſecond Moon in October the Banian Women repair to the ſacred Wells, where they are very liberal of their Favours, and reckon that the waſhing themſelves afterwards cleanſes them of all Sin. They ſpend the firſt Week of March in Revelling and laſcivious Diſcourſe. At the beginning of the rainy Seaſon they treat the Ants and Flies with Sweetmeats, Honey, and Sugar, and are conſtant Benefactors to the Dogs, but avoid touching them. The chief Pleaſure of the Banian Men is to cheat, cuckold, rail upon one another, and pull off their Turbants, which is called the Banian Fight by way of Proverb; and they are ſo implacable, that they ſtudy a ſure and ſecret Revenge upon the Lives and Eſtates of their Enemies.

(5.) Daman, about 48 miles South from Surat. It belongs to the Portugueſe, is fortified, is pretty large, and has a ſmall Harbour, which is dry at Ebb, ſo that big Ships muſt lie in the Road. 'Tis their ſecond Town in the Indies, and depends on Goa, as all the reſt do. The Biſhop of that Place has a Vicar-General here. The Citadel is well furniſhed with Cannon, is built of a white chalky Stone, as are moſt of the Houſes. They have four Churches, and ſeveral Convents, trade chiefly in Corn and Rice, have ſeveral Villages, and divers Iſlands, which pay them Tribute. Aurengzebe beſieged this Town twenty days with above 40000 Men, but wanting a Fleet to block it up by Sea, he was forced to raiſe the Siege with Diſgrace, after a Sally by the Gariſon; who attacking the Quarter of his Camp that was guarded by 200 Elephants, thoſe Creatures were ſo terrified by the Fireworks, that they broke in upon, and trampled down half the Men in the Camp; after which that Prince forbore making war on the Chriſtians.

(6.) Bacaim, or Baſſaim, on the ſame Coaſt, about ſixty miles South from Daman, belongs to the Portugueſe; it is fortified well enough againſt the Indians, but not able to reſiſt Europeans. The Town ſtands on an Iſland, ſeparated from the Continent by a ſmall Channel; three Parts of it belong to the Jeſuits, who have a fine College here: There are four other Convents, and ſix Churches. The Harbour is convenient, and the adjacent Country abounds with Sugar-Canes, Corn, Oil, and Coco-Nuts, but ſubject to the Incurſions of the Arabs, who are implacable againſt the Portugueſe, which obliges them to keep a Squadron on this Coaſt; where the Arabs, when they land, burn the Villages, carry off the People, and cut off all the Prieſts, becauſe when Muſcat in Arabia ſurrendred to the Portugueſe, they treated the Gariſon and People cruelly, contrary to Capitulation.

(7.) Bombay, or Bombaim, on the ſame Coaſt, eight miles South of Bacaim. The Name comes from its good Harbour, which is capable of 1000 Ships. It was given by the Crown of Portugal to King Charles the Second of England, on his Marriage with Catherine of Portugal in 1662. It lies in an Iſland of the ſame Name, and has ſeveral others ſubject to it. King Charles the Second finding the Place more burdenſome than profitable to the Crown, and that the New Adventurers underſold our Eaſt-India Company, who begg'd the Iſland of him, he gave it them on defraying his Charge, and agreeing to hold it of the Crown. Their Preſident Sir George Oxendine bravely defended it againſt the Dutch. He afterwards cut a Trench out of the Rock, and brought the Sea round the Fort, which Dr. Fryer ſays is ill contrived, not capable of lodging a ſufficient Number of Men to defend it, and is not well ſupplied with Water and Granaries. The Town lies at a pretty diſtance, is about a mile long, the Houſes mean, except a few left by the Portugueſe, and ſome built by the Company, whoſe Cuſtom-houſe and Ware-houſe are pretty Structures, and their Windows of Oyſter-Shells poliſhed inſtead of Glaſs, which look grateful enough. There's a handſome Market-place at the end of the Town, and the Portugueſe have pretty Houſes and a Church, with Orchards of Indian Fruit, but the Engliſh have neither Church nor Hoſpital. Here's no Water but Rain preſerved in Ciſterns, and when that fails they are forced to dig Water, which has a brackiſh Taſte; ſo that the better ſort are ſupplied from a Spring, about a mile further up the Bay. The Iſland is about eight miles long, twenty round, and inhabited by People of different Nations from the neighbouring Countries, who come hither as Fugitives, or to enjoy the Liberty of their Religion; which is envied them by the Moors and Portugueſe. but connived at by the Engliſh: ſo that the Iſland contains now above 60000 Souls, whereas in the time of the Portugueſe it had ſcarce 1000. The Iſland is not able to furniſh them Proviſions, but they are well ſupplied from the neighbouring Country at eaſy Rates. The Government here is ſubject to the Preſident and Council of Surat, who have a Juſticiary, with a Court of Pleas, and a Committee for regulating Affairs and preſenting Complaints; all which are to be determined according to the Laws of England. The Preſident is Viceroy here, who has a Court, Council, and Guards, and lives in great State; but the Doctor ſays the Climate is unhealthful, the Soil barren, and the Air putrid: ſo that the Product of the Place never coming to full Maturity, the Inhabitants don't digeſt what they eat, which occaſions many Diſtempers; yet the Natives, who live temperately, attain to a good Age. He adds, that the Iſland lies convenient for Trade, that the Banians like it better than Surat, and would willingly remove hither, could the Company open a way from hence up the Country. The Engliſh are obliged to live in Friendſhip with the Portugueſe, the neighbouring Raja, and the Mogul, but eſpecially the latter, whoſe Fleet they ſuffer to winter and recruit in the Bay; but the Raja and Portugueſe don't like it, or that we ſhould furniſh the Moguls with Fire-Arms, which the Portugueſe dare not do for fear of the Inquiſition. The Doctor mentions the Iſland of Canorein in the Neighbourhood, belonging to the Portugueſe, which is 20 miles long, and 70 round. He gives a very ſurprizing Account of the magnificent Ruins of an Heathen Temple, and a Palace here, for which we refer to him. The Cuſtoms of Trombay in this Iſland belong to the Engliſh. He likewiſe mentions the Iſle of Elephants in the Neighbourhood, which belongs to the Portugueſe, is ten miles round, has a magnificent Heathen Temple, and is remarkable for Toddy-Trees, and another called Brab, whoſe Fruit is leſs than that of the Coco, but the Wine made of it better, and the Tuft of the Tree when boiled eats like Colliflowers. Thoſe called Toddy-Birds form Neſts of Hay with wonderful Curioſity, and hang them by ſlender Threds to the Branches of theſe and the Toddy-Trees, ſo as the Squirrels, which are mortal Enemies to theſe Creatures, can't come at them; and ſome hundreds of theſe Neſts hang together. Dr. Fryer ſays, that during the rainy Seaſon at Bombay, and the neighbouring Iſlands, all Commerce merce and Hoſtilities ceaſe, there being no ſtirring out to Sea, or travelling in the Country, becauſe of the violent Rains and Thunder, which laſt till the end of Auguſt, and then European Ships venture to make in here.

He places the Towns and Iſlands laſt deſcrib'd in the Kingdom of Decan, the Lords of which, tho a ſort of Vaſſals to the Great Mogul, are hereditary Princes; and tho he pretends they are oblig'd to come and pay him Fealty at Viſapour, and obey his Commands, they do it very remiſſly, and make their Acknowledgment at five Leagues diſtance, attended in ſuch a hoſtile manner, as if they rather came to beſiege than do him Homage. They fall out with one another, and with their King at pleaſure; but when he gets them into his hands, he cuts off their Heads, and diſpoſes of their Eſtates.

Viſapour Province lies South from Guzuratte, and is alſo nam'd Canean. Dr. Fryer ſays, the Country in general is fruitful and plain; but towards the Sea 'tis mountainous, and cover'd with Woods full of Cattel. The Valleys yield plenty of Rice and Cocoa-Nuts: And here are many freſh and ſalt Rivers, and ſtore of Salt-Petre. The Boundaries are uncertain becauſe of the Invaſions of neighbouring Princes, who ſometimes conquer Parts of it, and loſe 'em again. Their King was formerly independent; but is now a Vaſſal to the Great Mogul, tho of late he has in a great meaſure ſhook off his Yoke. His Troops conſiſt of 8000 Foot, and 150000 Horſe. He frequently embroils himſelf with the Portugueſe and the Mogul, and the King of Golconda aſſiſts him under-hand againſt the latter.

Places of Note here are,

1. Viſapour, the Capital, in Lat. 17. Long. 75. 'Tis about five Leagues round, well fortified; has a large Gariſon, and a thouſand Cannon on the Walls, &c. Moſt of the Inhabitants are Idolaters, and ſome of 'em great Traders. The King has a large Palace, ſtrongly guarded; and none but his Domeſticks muſt enter it without his Leave. Here's a great Market for Diamonds. The Banians in the Neighbourhood are ſo brutiſhly ſuperſtitious, that they lie by their Cattel at Night, and catch their Dung in their Hands; which they think pleaſes their Idols.

2. Rajapour, on the Coaſt, 129 Miles N. W. from Viſapour, is reckon'd one of the beſt Maritime Towns in the Kingdom, had formerly an Engliſh Factory, which was afterwards poſſeſs'd by the French; but the Dutch have almoſt worm'd them out of their Trade, eſpecially in Pepper.

3. Dabul, on the Coaſt, about ſixty ſix Miles N. W. from Rajapour, antiently a great Town, but has ſuffer'd much by War. The Portugueſe took it in 1508. The Engliſh took it afterwards, ſtill trade hither, and pay but half the Cuſtoms that other Nations do. Moſt of the Inhabitants are Banians and Goldſmiths.

4. Wingurla, or Vingorla, about forty Miles North from Goa, on the ſame Coaſt. The Dutch Eaſt-India Company have a Factory here, well fortify'd, and the Works mounted with great Guns. The Front is after the Italian Faſhion, and the Entrance to it is by a Draw-Bridge. It has a very good Harbour, where Ships come up to the Factory; is conſiderable for its Neighbourhood to Goa, for a great Market of Wheat, Rice, and all other ſorts of Proviſions; and is the Place where Ships bound to Perſia furniſh themſelves with freſh Water, Fuel, &c. The Dutch have great Privileges from the King, an Exemption from all Taxes, and a Right to their own Wrecks. Great ſtore of coarſe Calicoes and Mats are made here; and 'tis a Market for Cardamoms, which the Natives reckon the beſt of Spices, and ſell dear, becauſe they are not to be had elſewhere.

5. Goa, on the Coaſt, Lat. 16. Long. 72. It lies in an Iſland ſix or ſeven Leagues round. The Soil is fruitful, and it has many pleaſant Groves, Gardens, Ponds, and Rivulets. It was betray'd to the Portugueſe General, Albuquerque, who found a great Booty here. But the King coming to beſiege it, the Inhabitants favour'd him; ſo that Albuquerque was forc'd to quit the Town, and go on board his Ships, with which, after many great Difficulties, he made his Eſcape to the neighbouring Iſle of Anchediva, where he ſtaid till reinforc'd by ten Portugueſe Men of War, with which he retook the Town in 1510, ſhut up his Priſoners in a Moſque, where he burnt them, cut off all that had a hand in the Mutiny againſt him, order'd his Soldiers to marry the young Women of the Country, and repeople the Place. The Jeſuits have a fine College here, where they keep the Body of St. Francis Xavier, whom they call the Apoſtle of the Indies, and aſcribe Miracles to his Relicks. The Portugueſe made the Town very ſtrong, and drove a great Trade with Perſia, Arabia, and the Indies; but 'tis much decay'd ſince the Dutch block'd up their Bar for twelve Years together. The Mouth of the River that goes up to it, is defended by four impregnable Forts and a Block-Houſe, and the Aqueduct on the left is guarded by a Platform with great Ordnance. Over-againſt that, there's another ſtrong Caſtle; and beyond it a Fort, which commands the Town and the Bay. The River is adorn'd with ſtately Churches and Palaces on its Banks, forms ſeveral little Iſlands, and then runs under a Stone Bridge of ſix and thirty Arches, from whence it paſſes by a Sluice on each ſide of a Stone Cauſeway, two Miles long, with ſeveral Wears for Fiſh, and Dams for Salt. Dr. Fryer ſays, the Town looks well at a ſmall diſtance. It ſtands upon ſeven Hills, ten Miles from the Mouth of the River. The Streets are very confus'd, and ſeveral of the Houſes ruinous. Baldæus ſays, the Portugueſe here are generally idle and haughty, leave moſt part of their Buſineſs to Slaves; and are ſo luſtful, that the Venereal Diſeaſe is common, and reckon'd no Diſgrace. They are ſo jealous, that they confine their Wives to their Chambers; and contrive their Windows ſo, as they may look upwards, but can't look down to the Streets; and they are not allow'd to go abroad but in cover'd Chairs. The Women in revenge mix the Juice of a Plant called Daroa in their Husband's Liquor, which lays them faſt aſleep for four and twenty Hours, without any Senſe or Motion, tho ſome of 'em lie with their Eyes open; and then their Female Slaves bring in their Gallants. The Herb reſembles our Bear's-Foot, grows in the Shade, and its Seed beat to Powder has the ſame Effect. Cold Water apply'd to the Soles of the Feet, makes the Perſon awake as out of a ſound Sleep. The Portugueſe are moderate in their Diet, becauſe the Climate occaſions burning Fevers, which they cure by bleeding a little five or ſix times in a day. The Women feed chiefly on Rice, tho they have good Wheat-Bread; and uſe Betel, Arack, and all ſorts of Pickles, which make them look pale. The Portugueſe generally marry Natives, and the Women Slaves ſuckle their Children. The great Street has rich Shops with Silks, Porcellane, Drugs, and other valuable Commodities and Manufactures. Slaves, Cattel, Goods of all ſorts, and Proviſions are daily ſold in the Market by publick Auction; but they leave off betimes, becauſe of the exceſſive Heat at Noon. Here's a Palace where the Viceroy reſides; which is a fine Structure, has a long Gallery with the Pictures of all the Viceroys from the firſt, and two Royal Chairs of State. The Viceroy gives Law to all the Secular; but capital Crimes committed by the Nobility are referred to the King, and ſent to be tried in Portugal. It is alſo the See of an Archbiſhop; but the Jeſuits are independent on him, and have a Provoſt of their own, who lives in as great State as he; and when he goes abroad, is carried in a Sedan, with eight Clergymen walking bare-headed on each ſide, beſides other Attendants. He reſides at the Monaſtery of St. Paul; and they have another at St. Roch, which is larger, has a Library, an Hoſpital, and an Apothecary's Shop well furniſh'd, where Gaſpar Antonio of Florence, a Lay-Brother, and an able Phyſician, invented the Goa Stones, which bring the Society 40000 Crowns per Annum. This Monaſtery is a noble Structure, and looks like a Seraglio from the Water. The Government and Trade of the Town is chiefly in the hands of the Jeſuits. The great College of the Dominicans, where the Inquiſitor reſides, is a pleaſant and ſtately Fabrick, and has a noble Front towards the Street. Their Church is very rich in Ornaments and Plate, its Pillars gilt, and the Martyrology of their Order is painted on the Walls. There's an Iſland where they burn thoſe condemn'd by the Inquiſitor; and ſuch as he thinks fit to call Witches, are ſent to work in the Powder-Mills. The Cathedral is neat and rich; and here are fine Friaries and Nunneries of ſeveral Orders: That call'd Old Goa ſtands on the main Iſland, at the left of the Bay. The Road betwixt it and New Goa is three Miles long, with Country Seats, Villages, Churches, and ſhady Grottos on each ſide. The Trade is now removed to New Goa, and the Inhabitants of the Old live chiefly by knitting and fiſhing. The Gentry ſtill keep their Country-Houſes here; ſo that the Inhabitants are civil, and not ſo much peſter'd with drunken Soldiers as at New Goa, where they take ſo much Liberty for want of Pay, that 'tis not ſafe to go abroad at Night without a drawn Sword in one's Hand, nor to ſleep without Arms at one's Pillow. The Fidalgos, or thoſe call'd Noblemen, here command their Galleons, and go in great State with Convoys to fetch Corn: Every Commodore has two or three Royal Galleys, that carry the King's Arms only in their Enſigns; but the Admiral, Vice-Admiral and Captain-Major carry the Flag aloft, as well as aſtern. Their beſt Galleons carry only eight or ten ſmall Guns; and the Viceroy has a Generaliſſimo under him by Land and Sea. Dr. Fryer ſays, this City is the Indian Rome for abſolute Power, fine Structures, and Pomp. The Laity's Houſes are all Stone; but the Streets are cleaner than the Tops of their Houſes, where they do all their Occaſions. The chief Inhabitants are always attended by Numbers of Slaves with Umbrellas. The Clergy generally go in Couples; and when they meet a Father, kiſs the Hem of his Garment, and beg his Bleſſing. The Natives are more than the Europeans; but give them the Way wherever they meet them, for fear of the Stocado. The Women load themſelves with Jewels and Roſaries of Gold and Silver, Bracelets of Gold, Necklaces of Pearl, Lockets and Pendants of Diamond. They wear no Stockins, but have very rich Slippers. Some of them have good Features and Shapes; but their cloſe Confinement makes them baſhful and diſagreeable in Converſation. Their chief Diverſion is Singing, and playing on the Lute; and their chief Buſineſs is to make Confections, pickle Mangoes, dreſs Soops, Pottages, Ragoos, and Variety of ſtew'd Meats; in all which they are very nice, and uſe China Diſhes. They rarely ſit at Table if a Stranger dine with their Husbands; and the Children are ſuffer'd to run up and down naked, till they grow aſham'd of it themſelves. All Butcher's Meat, except Pork, is forbid here, becauſe their Cattel are as lean as Carrion. Their Mangoes are the beſt and largeſt in India; and when ripe, taſte better than Nectarins, Peaches, or Apricocks; cleanſe the Blood, are very effectual in Salivations; and when pickled, are reckon'd provocative. The Wars which the Portugueſe have had with the Arabs, who beat them out of Maskat, and ſeveral other Places on the Coaſt of Arabia, and thoſe with the Natives and Dutch, have very much weaken'd their Power and Trade here, tho they were ſo rich before the Settlements of the Dutch and Engliſh, that their Merchants had moſt of their Utenſils of Gold and Silver. Three or four Voyages to Japan, China, or the Philippine and Molucca Iſlands, were enough to enrich them. To be Viceroy of Goa was then one of the beſt Poſts in the World; for he had ſuch inferior Governments at his diſpoſal, as few Monarchs had the like. Tavernier ſays, the Viceroy in his Time had in three Years got above 200000 Crowns in Ambergreaſe, beſides Gold and Elephants Teeth, which amounted to a far greater Sum. Their chief Trade now is in ſupplying the Country, as far as Molucca, with Arack of ſeveral ſorts. The Jeſuits continue to make their Goa-Stones, from three Fourths to eight Ounces each; but they are often counterfeited. They alſo make another ſort, call'd Snake-Stones, which they pretend to be good againſt the Stings of Scorpions, &c. But Lockyer ſays, he did not find it ſo on experiment. They alſo make little ſquare Stones, which they call Magnetick; and ſay, they give effectual Relief to Women in Labour with dead Children; but he ſays, they do not anſwer the End. Gilt Sword-Blades, Daggers, ordinary Wigs and Hats, &c. from England, turn to a good account here. The Portugueſe, tho their Trade be decay'd, are as proud as ever; and their Wives beg in Palanquins at the Doors of their Neighbours, with the Recommendations of ſome Clergy-Man, giving an Account how they fell to decay. Tavernier ſays, that as ſoon as the Portugueſe paſs the Cape of Good-Hope, they all pretend to be Gentlemen, and add the Title of Don to their Chriſtian-Names, grow more proud, cruel, and luſtful than at home; and if affronted by a Perſon of too much Courage for them, order their Slaves to murder him, tho it be even at the Altar. Theſe Things, he ſays, go generally unpuniſh'd, becauſe the Criminals are the chief of the Country. The Canareins, ſo called from the adjacent Province, which they inhabit, are black, witty, and ſtout, but kept under by the Portugueſe. If one of them ſtrike an European, his Hand is cut off; nor are they ſuffer'd to wear Stockins and Shoes, tho they have offer'd great Sums for that Liberty, and many of them are so rich, that they are attended by thirty or forty Slaves apiece, well apparell'd. They commonly worship Apes; and had a Temple in the Island of Salsette, where they kept and worshipp'd the Skeleton of one, which they fancied did great Service to their Ancestors, and brought Intelligence of Designs against them. They offer'd a great Sum to redeem it from the Portuguese Clergy, when they spoil'd the Temple, and threw the Skeleton into the Sea. Linschotten says, the Portuguese are very profuse at their Weddings and Christenings, when those of Note are attended to Church by fifty or a hundred Horse, in very good Order, with Musick, &c. and entertain the Company in Vessels of Gold and Silver. The Men chuse handsome Wenches for Slaves, and employ 'em to sell their Fruit, &c. that they may get more Custom and better Rates. They sell them and their Children like Beasts, tho those poor Creatures love the Children they have by Europeans so dearly, that they had rather quit their Lives than part with them. Nothing can be more miserable than the Portuguese Soldiers here, in time of Peace: They live by ten or twelve together in a Hut; have but two or three Suits among them all: When they go a begging, they wear them by turns, having no other way to subsist, but either to do so, or to revenge the Quarrels of the Gentry upon such as they order them, or to satisfy the Lusts of the Women, who pay them well for it. And as the Husbands frequently dispatch their unfaithful Wives by Dagger and Poison, the Women revenge themselves by giving Poison to their Husbands, which they temper so as to make it operate quick or slow, as they please. The Winter begins here at the end of June with South-West Winds, which blow on this Coast from April to September; when Tempests are so frequent, that Ships are scarce safe in any of their Harbours, as far as Cape Comorin. The Winds blow from North-East from October to March, which is their fair Season. The Portuguese Ships arrive here in September; and after fifty Days stay go to Cochin, where they lade Pepper. Linschotten adds, that the Jews are allow'd a Synagogue here; and that many of the Heathens of the neighbouring Country worship the Sun and Moon, and Images. From the latter they pretend to have frequent Answers to their Questions; and they honour the Devil for fear he should hurt them. They bring their Brides to Idols that have Pins of Ivory, with which the nearest of Kin make them deflower the Bride, and the Bridegroom takes it as a great Honour. They commonly pray the whole Day to whatever Creature they meet first in the Morning, unless it be a Cow, which they take as an ill Omen, return home, and go no more abroad that Day.

The Islands of Salsette and Barde, which lie on the Coast near Goa, are farm'd out by the Viceroy; and he and his Officers, with the Archbishop, the Clergy, and Monasteries, are chiefly maintain'd by their Rents. There are many Villages in the latter, inhabited by Indian Christians. It has store of Cocoa-Trees, &c. which are always verdant; and they export a great deal of Palm-Wines. It is high Land, affords good Anchorage, and Conveniency for the Portuguese to load and unload their Ships.

6. Carwar, or Coroual, on the same Coast, thirty six Miles South from Goa. Dr. Fryer says, 'tis the chief Port of Visapour. The English have a Factory here, well fortify'd. They defended it bravely against the Rebel Seva-Gi, after he had taken the Town and Castle. The Factory stands on the Branch of a River, over-against a pleasant Island full of Game. Here's a Chief and Council to manage the Trade for the Company, and a small Garison. He says, the best Pepper in the World grows hereabouts, which was the chief Cause of our Settlement. In the Neighbourhood there's abundance of Cassia Lignum, or Bastard Cinnamon, and Nux Vomica. 'Tis the most healthful and pleasant Place on the Malabar Coast. Ships ride safe in a neighbouring Cove from the South-West Wind, and the River is navigable by the largest Vessels, but the Entry difficult. Here's abundance of Red Deer, and other Game; but the Woods are infested by Tygers and Leopards. Here are Fowls of the Size of a Pigeon, call'd Bill-Birds, because of their large Bills, which are of several Forms and Colours, and make excellent Flasks for Powder, the small ones being large enough to hold half a Pound. The Raja has one half per Cent. for Goods imported by the English, which is seldom demanded for small Parcels; and they account with him only once per Ann.

Malabar lies along the Coast from Canara in the North to Cape Comorin on the South, has the Sea on the West, and the Mountains of Ballegate on the East. The Country is healthful and fruitful, and the Inhabitants rich. Here's little Wheat, but plenty of Rice, Maiz, and other Grain, Fruits, Drugs, Spices, precious Stones, and all sorts of Animals. Here are many Woods that afford as good Masts as Norway. Sanson says, its chief Riches consist in Pepper and precious Stones. Baldæus says, it abounds with Rivers, but most of them too shallow for Vessels of Burden: only two or three have about nineteen Foot at high Water. The Nights are cold and foggy along the Coast in January, February, and March, when the Days are excessive hot. The Sea-Wind begins at Nine or Ten a-clock every Morning, and lasts till Sun-set; after which they have a Land-Wind, which never reaches above ten Leagues out at Sea. The Coast is scarce navigable from June till November, which is their Winter. It rains continually during that Season; but the Rains being warm, make their Fruits florid and green. In October, November, and December, they have dreadful Storms of Thunder and Lightning; so that the best Season here is from April to June. The Country is so full of Pools, Rivers, and Channels, that it resembles Holland, and is not to be travell'd without Boats. Here's abundance of Fish, Black Cattel, Swine, and Poultry. Their chief Product is Pepper, the best in the Indies; which the Dutch have engross'd by their Leagues with the neighbouring Princes, and are Masters of the Kingdoms or Provinces of Cranganor, Cochin, and Coulan, where they have many strong Forts and Garisons. Their other Spices and Drugs are Cardamoms, Ginger, Borbori of a Saffron Colour, some Aloes, and Bezoar-Stones; and here's also Gum-Lack, Wax, Honey, and Salt-Petre. The Cocoa-Trees, besides Nuts, yield them a wholesome Liquor, from which they distil Arack. They thrive better in their Marshes than any where else in the Indies, some of them being about ninety five Foot high. They drive a great Trade with the Oil and Bark of the Fruit. Some of these Trees yield thirty Quarts in twenty four Hours, but if drain'd too much they perish. The Natives mix their Arack with Amsion, or put the quantity of a Pea in their Mouths, and chew it till they fall asleep, when they say it makes 'em dream of the Elysian Fields. They take it in great quantities when they go to fight, which makes them fall on without Fear or Wit, and they remember nothing they say or do while it lies in their Heads.

The chief Foreigners are Arabians, who have been settled on the Coast for many Ages. Those of the Natives who are Nobles are called Nairo's, and the Commons Moncouri's, Poulca's, or Parva's. The Nairo's are train'd up to War from their Youth, wear a Shield on their left Arm, a naked Sword in their right Hand, and are very haughty. They disputed the Precedency with the Portuguese, till it was determin'd by a single Combat, wherein the Nairo was worsted; but they take place of all other Malabars. They are well-proportion'd, of an Olive Colour, and affect long Ears, which with Art they draw down as low as their Breasts. They bore them when young, fill the Holes with Palm-Leaves by degrees, till they bring their Ears to the utmost Length, and then adorn them with Gold, Silver, and Jewels. They are brave, civil in Conversation, but much addicted to rob and murder Travellers, unless they have a Nairo for their Guide. They converse with none of the inferior Orders but their Brahmans, or Priests, and reckon themselves defil'd if any of the rest touch them, or enter their Houses. The poorer Nairo's wait at the Gates of Towns, to conduct Travellers for a little Money. They have small Plates of Metal on the Hilts of their Swords, which make a noise when they fight, and, as they think, add to their Courage. They are quite naked, except their Privities. A Nairo is allow'd but one Wife at a time; but a Woman may have three Husbands at once, except she be the Daughter of a Brahman, married to a Nairo. The three Husbands equally contribute to the Maintenance of the Woman and Children, without any Jealousy; and when any of them comes to see her, he leaves his Arms at the Door, and none of the others must enter till he be gone. The Men cut their Hair close, except one Tuft on their Crown; but the Women wear theirs long, and a piece of Calico about their Middle, which reaches to their Knees. They make their Teeth black by chewing Betel, and despise those that don't. The Women are generally vicious, and are oblig'd by Custom, when about seventeen, to prostitute themselves; for the Malabars don't care to marry a Maid: And she that has most Gallants is sooneſt married. The Youth are train'd up to one sort of Arms, as they fancy; for they think none can be good at all. They anoint the Limbs of their Children every day with Oil, to make them pliant, for they rely much on their Agility; and when put to flight, frequently turn back and charge their Enemies in the Rear, and are very dextrous at throwing their Javelins backward. There's another sort of Nairo's, call'd Amoco's, more esteem'd than the rest, because they are desperate Bravoes, oblige themselves by Imprecations to revenge Affronts put upon their Friends, and run like mad Men on the Points of their Enemies Swords, or Mouths of their Guns; which makes them generally dreaded, tho their Fool-hardiness is chiefly owing to their excessive use of Amsion. The more potent any Prince is, the more of these Fellows he has about him. When the King advances one to the Order of a Nairo, their Badge is a Gold Ring on their right Arm, or a Buffler's Horn, and a red Silk Scarf with a Fringe of Silk, or of Silk and Gold. Their Women are clothed in the same manner, and must marry none but their own Tribe, except a Brahman, on pain of Death. The Parva's are miserable Slaves: Their Wives and Daughters expose themselves to any Man for Money without reproach, and are the only common Strumpets here; for the rest are confin'd to their own Tribes. The Mahometan Malabars are Merchants or Pirates, and constantly arm'd. The Merchants are distinguish'd by a scarlet Cap, with an embroider'd Handkerchief round it, like a Turbant; and the Pirates tie their Hair up in a Knot, and wear a Handkerchief over it. They are bold Fellows, engage in the Service of any Foreigner, and when they take Prizes, the Merchants buy the Goods without any scruple. These Pirates pay Allegiance and Taxes to the Indian Kings, whose Harbours they frequent. We refer for a farther Account of the Government, Religion, and Customs of the Malabars to Nieuhoff, who is very large and particular on the Subject.

The remarkable Kingdoms and Places in this Country are,

I. Cananor, so named from its Capital on the Coast, Lat. 12. Long. 74. The King maintains a considerable Number of expert Musqueteers and Archers. The City is populous, inhabited chiefly by Mahometan Merchants. It has a spacious and secure Harbour. 'Twas formerly possess'd by the Portuguese; but taken from them in 1663 by the Dutch, who enter'd into an Alliance with the King, that lives at some distance in the Country. They have made it very strong. The Commodities here are Pepper, Cardamoms, Ginger, Mirobalans, Tamarinds, Cassia, Ambergrease, Hyacinths, Granates, Saphires, and Rubies. The Province abounds with Elephants, Camels, Bufflers, Lions, Tygers, Wolves, Black Cattel, Sheep, Antelopes, Civet-Cats, Apes, Peacocks, Parrots, and large Partridges. Here's a Mine of Stone, called Azazimit, of the same Virtue with the Terra Sigillata, valued all over the Indies as an Antidote against Poison, and for the Cure of Fevers, Bloody-Fluxes, and Indigestions.

2. Telichery, ten Leagues South from Cananor, is noted for an English Factory, defended by a Fort and a few Soldiers. Their Trade is chiefly in Pepper and Cardamoms. Sometimes they have Ambergrease, Coire, Cowries, and Chank from the Maldivas; the best Opium, of a deep purple Colour, is made hereabouts. Here are black Monkeys valued at five or six Crowns a-piece when tame, and there are black Scorpions and dangerous Snakes in the Neighbourhood.

3. Panola is a French Factory for Pepper, which they sell in great quantities, five miles South of Telichery.

II. Calicut Province, lies South from Cananor. Their King is the powerfulleſt of the Malabar Princes; his Dominions reach almost to Goa on the North, and his Nairos range all the Coast from Goa to Ceylon, having always four or five Vessels together, with about sixteen Men in each; which is connived at by that Prince, tho he does not own it. The chief Towns here are,

1. Cal-

1. Calicut, about ſixteen Leagues from Cananor. 'Tis as conſiderable for Trade as any Town upon the Coaſt. It was formerly taken by the Portugueſe, but retaken by the Natives. 'Tis a large ſtraggling Town, moſt of the Inhabitants are Natives. The Engliſh, French and Armenians have Factories here. The Engliſh have a large old Houſe, with a ſmall Court and Galleries, but no Guns or Fortification. The French have little Trade here, and would very thankfully barter Goods, or ſupply any body for Money. Lockyer ſays, there are many Merchants here better able to furniſh or buy Goods than the Chiefs of their Factories. The Commodities ſold here are Pepper, Cardamoms, Corulus-India, Nux Vomica, Turmerick, Caſſia Lignea, Coco-Nuts and Kernels, Coire, Cories, Arrack or Betel-Nut, Hubblebubble Canes, Rice, Sappan Wood, Teak, Timber, Sharks-Fins, Nurſe's-Skins, Tarians, and ſometimes Bezoar and Ambergreeſe. The Goods imported are Sugar, Sugar-Candy, China Silks, Lackered Ware, Bengal Calicoes, Roſe-water, Perſian Fruits of all ſorts, Cotton, Wool, broad Sword-Blades, and Neceſſaries for Europeans. The Warehouſes here are peſtered with white Ants, and the Woods with Beaſts of Prey. The Natives are groſs Idolaters, and worſhip an Idol, which, Herbert ſays, is as ugly as the Devil himſelf: a Prieſt clad in Lawn offers him a live Cock every morning, which is ſent afterwards to the Emperor, who eats what he pleaſes, and gives the reſt to the Crows. They exchange Wives here, and allow Polygamy in both Sexes. Mr. Haves, who was Engliſh Reſident here, ſays, the King granted the Engliſh Factory large Privileges, but the Governor was their Enemy, and hindered their Progreſs. The Native Merchants were alſo great Cheats, ſo that the Engliſh had no way to be even with them but to ſtay in their Houſes, and force them to be honeſt, or ſtarve; for, according to their Principles, they were not to eat or drink while a Chriſtian ſtaid in the Houſe. Baldæus gives a large Account of the Samorin, or Emperor, who kept his Court here. He was attended by the High Prieſt of the Brahmans, clad in white Calico, and had ten Centinels at the Door of each Apartment in his Palace. The Walls and Floors of his Hall of Audience were covered with Tapeſtry and Carpets of Silk and Gold. His Grandees ſat about him in carved Seats, in form of an Amphitheatre. His Robe was of white fine Calico, embroidered with Flowers of Gold, and Rows of Diamonds of great Value. He had rich Pendants of precious Stones in his Ears; his Cap was adorned with the like, and his Toes with Rings ſet with Jewels. The Dutch made a League with him in 1604, and obtained a free Trade in his Dominions. The Town is about four miles long, the Houſes mean, except the Palace, and ſome Moſques and Bazars. It was formerly the moſt famous Mart in Aſia, and the Toll ſo great as made the Prince very potent, but the Trade is now much decayed. The Dutch have built a Fortreſs near the Town, to curb the Samorin, who, Remefort ſays, offered to put himſelf under Protection of the French, but they did not think fit to accept the Propoſal.

2. Panane, or Panian, about 40 miles South from Calicut. The Engliſh have a Factory here; but Mr. Hoar, in his Account to our Eaſt-India Company, complained that the Samorin was treacherous, refuſed to pay the Engliſh what he owed, or to trade fairly with them, and deſigned to ſurprize them by Ambuſh. It has a good Trade, eſpecially in the beſt Pepper, which is ſold here very cheap.

3. Tanor, 35 miles South from Calicut, is Capital of a Kingdom, tho a poor ſtraggling Town, and the Houſes mean. The Engliſh have a Factory here, which deals in Pepper, and other Commodities of the Country.

III. Cranganor, lies twelve Leagues South of Calicut, is of ſmall Extent, and depends on the Samorin, tho it has a King of its own. His Subjects are for the moſt part Thieves, who give him a ſhare of their Booty; ſo that, Mr. Frederick ſays, there's no trading here but with great Ships well armed. The Capital is of the ſame Name, was poſſeſſed by the Portugueſe, but taken by the Dutch in 1662. They reſtored it immediately to the King, but he breaking his Word with them, they retook and fortified it. The Inhabitants were very glad when the Dutch drove out the Portugueſe, who cruelly oppreſſed them. The Product here is much the ſame with the reſt of Malabar, and ſometimes they meet with Gold Duſt. The Women here go ſtark naked, and are very dextrous at whitening Linen. The King's Palace is mean, but encompaſſed with tall Trees and Gardens, and the other Houſes ſtand ſingle, with Gardens and green Fields betwixt them.

IV. Cochin lies ſixteen Leagues South from Cranganor, and is Capital of a ſmall Kingdom. Their Kings always adhered to the Portugueſe, ſince they reſtored one of them, who was conquered by the King of Calicut, till 1662. that it was taken by the Dutch, after the Portugueſe had been in poſſeſſion 150 Years. The Dutch contracted the Town into a ſmaller Compaſs, and pulled down ſeveral Churches to make it more ſtrong, and the Fortifications regular; ſo that Nieuhoff ſays, 'tis now impregnable. They allow the Jews, who are all Blacks here, a Synagogue, and the Franciſcan Church and Convent to the remaining Portugueſe. The Town is next to Goa for Largeneſs, and the River has about ſeventeen Fathom Water at High-Tide. The Entrance is difficult in Winter, becauſe of the Sand, which is cleared again by the Violence of the Summer Currents. The Situation of the Town is pleaſant, but unwholeſome; and good Water and Proviſions are ſcarce, which makes the People ſcabby, and ſwells their Legs. Here are ſeveral fine Structures, and a Royal Palace, at that called Malabar-Cochin, which ſtands lower on the Banks of the River, is built after the Indian Faſhion, with broad Streets, and very populous. Here are ſeveral fine Idol Temples, and a Royal Palace built of Brick, after the European manner, with lofty Apartments. The King of this Country, who was dethroned by the Portugueſe, came on board the Dutch Fleet, and deſired them to reſtore him; but he died before they could doit, and they gave the Crown to his Brother, with the Cypher of the Dutch Eaſt-India Company engraven upon it. He is the only Prince in Malabar, who dares to diſpute with him of Calicut. He moves up and down with a ſmall Guard to his ſeveral Palaces and Pleaſure-Houſes, but has none very ſtately. There's a pleaſant River betwixt the two Towns, which is navigable by ſmall Barks. The Trade here is in much the ſame Commodities with thoſe of the other Towns already mentioned, and the Product of the Country the like. Baldæus gives an Account of the Chriſtians of St. Thomas in this Country; they ſay, and he thinks it not improbable, that this Apoſtle planted Chriſtianity here and in China, from whence he returned to Meliapour, and there ſuffered Martyrdom. They teach their Children, that St. Thomas was their Apoſtle, and converted ſeveral of their Kings. They continued many Years in the true Doctrine of Chriſtianity, but for want of good Paſtors, were tainted with Pagan Superſtitions, and afterwards with the Neſtorian Hereſy. Their Anceſtors took the Sacrament in both kinds, but uſed Raiſins inſtead of Wine. They had the New Teſtament in Syriack. Their Numbers in Malabar, Coromandel, &c. are very conſiderable. The Portugueſe brought them to ſubmit generally to the Church of Rome in 1599. but many of them are ſtill Neſtorians. Linſchotten ſays, that in the Neighbourhood of the Town there are Trees called Angelina, ſo big, that of one Piece of a Trunk they dig Skiffs that will carry 20 or 30 Pipes of Water. The Timber is harder and more durable than Iron. Here are alſo Sugar-Canes and Bamboos, which grow very tall, are as thick as a Man's Thigh, and their Pith is medicinal.

IV. Porca, eight Leagues South from Cochin, is Capital of a ſmall Kingdom, and was poſſeſſed by the Portugueſe, but taken by the Dutch in 1642. when they were well received by the King, who did not love the Portugueſe, but ſubmitted to the Dutch. He has about 500 ſmall Frigates, which make Excurſions as far as Cape Comorin. The Country is fruitful, but unwholeſome, and abounds with Pepper, moſt of which, ſays Nieuhoff, was bought by the Engliſh, who long had a Factory here upon the Shore, but 'tis now removed. The Pepper is gathered by Portugueſe Converts, and delivered to the Dutch Merchants by the King's Order. Moſt of the Inhabitants are Idolaters. The King's Palace is ten Leagues from the Town, the way to it is thro ſeveral Channels, and a Lake with Rows of Trees and pleaſant Rice-Fields on each ſide, which bear all the Year; ſo that while they ſow in one Field, they reap in another. The Palace is an old-faſhioned ſquare Structure, with a Court in the middle, many Apartments adorned with Carving and Foliage, and ſeveral Tanks for Bathing. The Country abounds with many fair Houſes and Gardens.

V. Marta, or Marten, lies South from Porca, is mountainous on the Eaſt, but populous, abounds with Pepper, Peaſe, Beans, Rice, and Salt-Pits. There have been Chriſtians here of a long time, who are allowed a Church. The Capital of the ſame Name lies three Leagues South of Cochin. The Dutch have a large Factory here, with good Gardens.

Carnopoly, where the King reſides, lies in the South Part of the Country, about 15 miles North of Coulan. 'Twas formerly poſſeſſed by the Portugueſe, but taken by the Dutch, who have built a Caſtle here, and exact Cuſtoms for all Goods exported. The Portugueſe have ſtill a ſmall Factory here, and the Engliſh had one, but have removed it.

VI. Calecoulan, about eight Leagues South from Porca, is a ſmall Kingdom, where the Dutch Company have had a Factory of a long ſtanding in the Capital of the ſame Name. The Trade in Pepper is granted them by the King, which they buy in great Quantities, tranſport it to Surat and the Red-Sea, and make the Returns to Batavia, in the Product of thoſe Countries.

VII. Coulan, or Quilon, lies thirty miles South from Carnopoly, the Capital of the ſame Name, is well fortified, and has ſeveral magnificent Structures. The Dutch took it from the Portugueſe in 1661. reduced the City to a narrower Compaſs, that the Fortifications might be more regular, but ſpared the Caſtle and the Church of St. Thomas, built by the Chriſtians of that Name many Ages ago. The Air of the City and Neighbourhood is very wholeſome, the Country pleaſant and fruitful, and the Situation of the Town as pleaſant as any in the Indies. Moſt of the Houſes have Gardens with Indian Fruits, and fine Tanks cut out of the Rocks. The Harbour is convenient for ſmall Veſſels.

VIII. Travancour, South of Coulan, abounds with Pepper and the beſt Cinnamon, and has a potent King. Places of Note are,

1. Anjango, about eighteen miles South from Coulan, an Engliſh Factory, with a Fort and Gariſon. Their chief Trade is in Pepper, not ſo large and good as that to the Northward, about Carwar, &c. Here's a Manufacture of ſeveral ſorts of Cotton, of which great Quantities are ſent to Madraſpatan.

2. Tegapatan, ſixteen Leagues South of Calicoulan. The Dutch have a Factory and a ſmall Fort here, their Trade is in Cordage of Coco, and brown Sugar-Candy, which they ſend to Cochin.

3. Colate. Nieuhoff ſays, 'tis a Place of great Trade in Pepper and Rice, and lies North of the Cape about eight Leagues according to our Maps, but he ſays four and an half.

4. Cape Comorin. Captain Saies, in the eighth Voyage of our Eaſt-India Company, corrects the Error of our common Maps, which place it in Lat. 6, 10. and ſays it ought to be in 7, 42. Mr. Beſt, who made the tenth Voyage, makes it 7, 50. and ſays the Variation of the Compaſs here is fourteen Degrees and a half. Dr. Fryer places it in Lat. 8, 50. ſays it launches out into the Sea in three Points. Remefort ſays, that towards the Extremity the Land is low and white. The Inhabitants near the Point are almoſt as black as Africans, but much handſomer, and have naturally long Hair, tho the Heat obliges them to cut it. They go naked, and cover their Privities with a Piece of Linen tied about their Waiſts. They are continually at war with their Neighbours, and poiſon their Arms.

Having finiſhed the Deſcription of the Malabar Coaſt, we come to the Inland Parts.

1. Raolconda, Lat. 15. Long. 75. 60 Leagues South-Eaſt of Goa. 'Tis noted for a Diamond Mine, and lies in the Territory of Viſapour. The Country about is ſandy, and full of Rocks. The Miners take up the Earth or Sand, put it into Tubs, waſh it, and look for the Diamonds; and there are ſeveral Veins in the Rock, which they break, break, in order to follow the Traces. The cleaneſt Stones, and thoſe of the whiteſt Water, are found here. The King has two per cent. for all that are ſold, beſides a Duty from the Merchants, according to the Number of Diggers they employ. The Miners have ſo little Pay, that they now and then hide a Stone, tho great Care is taken to prevent it; for they are naked, and have only a Rag about their Pities: but when they chance to meet with a Stone of fifteen or ſixteen Carats, they are allowed a Reward. The Merchants have Lodgings about the Mine, and every morning the Maſters of the Miners bring them the Diamonds, and bargain for them by Signs, without ſpeaking a word: The Buyer and Seller ſit facing one another croſs-legged, the Seller takes hold of the Buyer's right Hand, covers his own and the Buyer's with his Girdle, under which they ſecretly drive a Bargain, without diſcovering to the other Merchants, who are at the ſame time in the Hall, what it is; but the Buyer and Seller know one another's Minds, by ſqueezing all or part of their Hands under the Girdle, and there's a Perſon imployed by the King to weigh the Stones.

2. Biſnagar Proper, or Narſingua, ſo called to diſtinguiſh it from Biſnagar taken at large; which comprehends Canara, the Coaſts of Malabar and Coromandel. It lies in the middle of the Country, betwixt thoſe Coaſts Herbert ſays, it abounds with fair Towns, ſtrong Forts, pleaſant Fields, and choice Minerals. 'Twas once ſo potent, that their King brought into the Field 766000 Foot, 34000 Horſe, and 600 Elephants; but was afterwards parcelled out by the Nobles, upon the Death of their King, into many petty Sovereignties, which brought Famine, and all the other Calamities of War upon the Country. Places of Note are,

(1.) Biſnagar the Capital, Lat. 14. Long. 78. Authors agree, that 'tis a fine, rich, ſtrong, and large City, but differ as to its Extent. Laet ſays, 'tis the Reſidence of a King, lies on a Hill near the Banks of a River, and has a ſtrong Fort. Their Trade is in Arabian Horſes, Velvets, Damasks, Sattins, China, Saffron, Scarlets, Turky Jewels, and Gold Ducats, alias Pagodies; and the Inhabitants are richly appareled. When the Husband dies here, his Wife and Concubines are burnt with him, or ſtrangled, while they claſp the Cord about the Neck.

(2.) Narſingua, 30 miles further North, once ſo large that it gave Name to the Country, and was the Royal Seat. Bouſſingalt ſays, 'twas as large in his time as Florence, and that the King had a ſtately Palace and numerous Guards.

South from thence live the Malleans among the Mountains. Nieuhoff ſays, they are the moſt warlike of the Indies, are more honeſt, good-natured, courageous and ingenious than their Neighbours, have but one Wife at a time, and differ in Complexion from the other Malabars. They conſult the Devil to know Futurity, live in Huts made up of Canes and Clay, and they who inhabit the Woods have Huts on the Trees, to ſecure themſelves againſt Tygers and Elephants, which they catch in Holes, covered over with Branches and Earth. They have Captains and Judges, who have 5 or 6000 People in a Diſtrict. Many of them are brought over to the Church of Rome by the Portugueſe Miſſionaries.

We come next to the Eaſt-ſide of the Peninſula, and ſhall deſcribe the Country from South to North, according to the Courſe of Trade. The Provinces or Kingdoms here are,

I. Madura, or the Fiſhing-Coaſt. It lies in the South-Eaſt Corner of the Peninſula, and is called the Fiſhing-Coaſt, becauſe of the great Pearl-fiſhing there, where 60000 People are imployed in the Fiſhery, and guarding the Veſſels. Nieuhoff ſays, this Country was formerly ſubject to the Portugueſe, who were invited hither by the People called Parens, to aſſiſt them againſt the Moors, but now belongs to the Dutch Eaſt-India Company, who keep a good Underſtanding with the Naique or Prince of the Natives. It bears no Herbs or Plants, but Thiſtles or Houſeleek; yet they have all neceſſary Proviſions from their Neighbours and their own Coaſts, that abound with Rabbits and Partridges. They are much infeſted by Mice as large as Cats, for whom they are an Overmatch. They have no Hair, but rough Skins, dig Holes under the Doors, and do a great deal of miſchief to Goods. Here are alſo red Mice of a leſſer Size, which are ſo fierce, that they make Cats run. Here are likewiſe many Serpents and other venemous Creatures. In October, November, and December, the Winds are as hot as if they came from a Furnace, and blow the Sand with ſuch Violence from the Mountains, that there's no holding up one's Eyes, and People abroad are frequently overwhelmed by it.

Within Land they have ſometimes a great deal of Rain, and likewiſe near Cape Comorin, but never at Teutocurin, where a very cold Dew falls every Night, and by the ſudden Alteration of the Weather makes the Place very unwholeſome. The Naique or Prince of Madura has ſeveral other conſiderable Countries, with Governors under him. To ſecure their Obedience, he keeps their Wives and Children in a ſtrong Caſtle guarded by Eunuchs, where they are not allowed to ſee them without his Licence, nor to ſtay with them above two or three days at a time; ſo that ſome of them, to avoid this Dependance, content themſelves with Harlots. The Natives are good Soldiers, but inferior to the Malabars: They are black, ſtrong, deceitful, make little account of their Wives, and generally keep Harlots, by whom they have many Children. The Men wear only a fine Piece of Callico round their middle, and another about their Head. The ordinary Women wear painted Callicos, and thoſe of Faſhion wear Gold Rings and Bracelets when abroad, but are very naſty at home. Their ordinary Food is Meat and Rice. They drink nothing but Water, which thoſe on the Coaſt muſt bring half a League from within Land. Great Numbers are imployed in weaving Linen and Callico, and in painting the latter, which they do very artfully. They are governed by Judges of their own, of whom they name four; and the Governor of the Dutch Factory at Tutucurin chuſes two out of them. They determine Civil Cauſes in their reſpective Villages, but Crimes are tried by the Dutch Governor and the Council of Nine at Tutucurin. The Portugueſe, who are left here, pay nothing to the Dutch, but to the Naique, with the Conſent of the Dutch Governor, who adjuſts their Shares. If they fail, the Naique levies it by military Execution; but when the People are not able, the Dutch interpoſe for them by Preſents. He is frequently at war with his Neighbours of Tangaor and Gingi, and ſometimes asks help of the Dutch, who are cautious how they grant it, becauſe they would keep fair with all of them. The Inhabitants, under the Juriſdiction of the Dutch, live in ſeven large Villages along the Coaſt, and Nieuhoff ſays, are about 33000, beſides great Numbers that live on the Coaſt of Comorin. The Portugueſe Prieſts do now and then ſay Maſs to great Numbers of the Natives, tho they be rather Pagans than Chriſtians.

The Pearl Banks lie betwixt the Coaſts and the Iſle of Ceylon, and are Rocks of white Coral Stone, ſometimes covered with Sand. They are twelve or fifteen Fathom from the Shore, and from three to fifteen Fathom under Water. The Oyſters faſten on thoſe Rocks, and live about ſix Years; after which the Shells open, and the Pearl is loſt. The Banks are ſearched every Year in October, when the Weather is calmer, to ſee whether the Shells be come to maturity. If the Oyſters be ripe, 'tis notified by Proclamation, and the Merchants ſet up their Tents on the Shore, and hire Boats and Divers. The Boats are 28 Foot long, have Stones inſtead of Anchors, and from five to eight Divers, that follow one another. They have a thin Waiſtcoat, a Net hanging down from their Necks, and Gloves on their Hands. Each Diver has a Stone of a foot long, and 50 l. weight to ſink them the ſooner. The Stone is faſtened to a Rope, held by one in the Boat, and as ſoon as the Diver comes to the bottom, he pulls the Rope, that thoſe in the Boat may pull up the Stone; and when he fills his Net, he pulls again, and then is drawn up with his Oyſters. The Divers, when they go down, ſtop their Noſtrils with their right Hand to keep in their Breath, which they can do four times as long as other People. The Boats go to Sea every Morning at break of Day, ſometimes three or four hundred together, return in the Afternoon, and lay up the Oyſters in a great Heap till the Fiſhery is over, which continues all November and December. This makes the Oyſters ſmell very ſtrong, and ſometimes occaſions Diſtempers. The Fiſhery being done, the Oyſters are opened before Commiſſioners; but moſt of them have no Pearls, or at leaſt ſmall ones; and others have from five to eight a-peice, ſome in the Liquor, ſome in the Fiſh, and others ſticking to the Shell. They are equally divided betwixt the Naique and the Company, the Dutch Governour and two Judges being there to determine Differences. They are ſorted according to their Sizes, and ſold to the faireſt Bidder. The Oyſters are eatable, but rank, and not comparable to ours. They rub the Pearl with Salt and powdered Rice, which gives them a Gloſs.

On the ſame Coaſt they fiſh a ſort of Horn, called Stankoes, very white, long, round, and thick. They are found in three or twelve Fathom Water, about ten Leagues from the Coaſt. They fiſh it from the middle of December to the middle of March; and when poliſhed, 'tis of a lovely ſhining white Colour, and preferable to Ivory: ſometimes, but very ſeldom, they find a Horn that is red without, and green within. Theſe they call the King's Horns, and the Indian Kings value them ſo much, that they are anointed out of them. The only Places of Note are,

(1.) Teutucurin, Lat. 4. Long. 78. 'Tis the chief Port on the Coaſt of Madura, and the Seat of a Dutch Factory. 'Tis a Town of good Trade, becauſe the Inhabitants along the Coaſt are furniſhed with foreign Commodities here. 'Tis an open Town, but has ſeveral fine Stone Houſes, and three Churches built by the Portugueſe, from whom the Dutch took it in 1658. Here's good Anchorage in five Fathom Water, and a ſandy Bottom. The Steeples of the Churches and the Dutch Flag are ſeen at a great diſtance by Sea. The beſt Lime in the Indies is made here of Oyſter-Shells. Here's a great Trade in weaving Cloth, and ſelling Proviſions, by which the Dutch reap much Profit. The Salt-Water here occaſions Scabs, and other cutaneous Diſtempers.

(2.) Further North on the Coaſt, lie the Paravas and Maravas, a barbarous ſort of Robbers, whom the Dutch endeavoured to convert, ſays Baldæus, who preached among them in Portugueſe, which Language they had learned while under the Crown of Portugal; but he had no Succeſs: for the Popiſh Worſhip of Images was ſo like their own, that they were more inclinable to that, and thought themſelves very good Chriſtians, becauſe they could ſay an Ave-Mary, the Creed, the Lord's Prayer, and ten Commandments by heart; and the Popiſh Prieſts minding their own Advantage more than that of their Flocks, Paganiſm ſtill prevailed: ſo that the Jeſuits, &c. could not reclaim them from their Robberies and other vile Practices.

(3.) There are ſeveral Iſlands on the Coaſt betwixt the Peninſula and the Iſle of Ceylon, as Manar, Ramanancoil, &c. where the Natives have built Caſtles and Idol-Temples, that are ſaid to be vaſtly rich; and by ſinking Stones, &c. make the Paſſage between thoſe Iſlands very difficult, eſpecially becauſe of the Sand-Banks, that are only to be paſſed by ſmall Boats.

II. Coromandel Coaſt. Authors differ as to the Extent of it, ſome running it as far North as the Mouth of the Ganges, but our Maps place it betwixt Lat. 10, and 15. along the Bay of Bengal. 'Tis very fruitful in Rice, yet ſometimes for want of Rain the Crop fails, ſo as the poor Natives ſell themſelves Slaves for Food. Their chief Manufacture is fine Callico, Silk, and Muſlin, which they ſell or barter for what they want. Here are many commodious Harbours, moſt of which are in the hands of Europeans. The Natives are very ſubject to the Small-Pox, and the Youth particularly to Inflammations of their Tongues, &c. which kill them if not prevented in time by cooling Herbs. Bernier ſays, the Rains begin and end a Month ſooner here than on the Coaſt of Malabar. Moſt of the Inhabitants are Mahometans or Pagans, and many of them are likewiſe Chriſtians of St. Thomas. They are for the moſt part black, and of the Size of Europeans. The Mahometans poſſeſs the North part, and the Pagans the South; the former wear Turbants of Stuff with Gold Stripes, a fine Shirt, a Cotton Veſt to their Knees, and long ſtrait Sleeves as low as their Feet, ſtrait Breeches, large Shoes without Heels, and Girdles of green or yellow Silk. The Pagans wind a piece of white Cotton three or four times about their Heads. Many of them go naked from the Girdle upwards; and ſuch as would be thought more grave wrap a piece of Cloth round their Body from the Girdle to their Knees, and ſometimes down to their Feet. The Fiſhermen and Peaſants go naked, all but their Privities. The Rich wear Ear-Rings of Gold or Ivory. Moſt of the Women have their upper Parts naked, and Aprons of flower'd Silk or Cotton, ſome as low as their Knees, and others down to their Ancles. Thoſe of Note wear flower'd Gauſe on their Shoulders and Breaſts; but all go bare-headed and bare-footed, except ſome of Quality, who wear Slippers. They anoint their Hair, and tie it behind in Buckles. The young Women of Note wear Necklaces and Bracelets, with Rings of Gold or Pearl in their Noſes and Ears. The Pagans have a great Eſteem for Serpents and Cows, which they think it unlawful to kill. When any of them are at the point of Death, they lay them behind a fat Cow, lift up her Tail, provoke her to piſs; and if her Urine fall upon the Patient's Face, they reckon their Souls will be happy; but if otherwiſe, are full of Sorrow. When the Cows are ſick, they lead them to the ſide of a Pond or River; for if they die in the Houſe, the Brahmans or Prieſts fine the Owners. The Women, when their Huſbands die, are either burnt, or buried alive with them in Sand-Pits, upon which the People jump till the Women be ſtifled.

to

Here are Multitudes of Sheep without Wool, but they have a little Hair inſtead of it. Moſt of the Country is plain, and they have but few Mountains or Trees. They have little Huts built of Clay; and they plaiſter their Walls and Floors with Cow-Dung, which they reckon holy. Their Temples are full of monſtrous Idols. They have ſcarce any thing curious about them but their Looms, artfully made of Cane for the fineſt Silks, Callicoes, and Muſlins.

Places of Note are,

1. Negapatan, in the Principality of Tangeor. It lies a little North of Cape Cagnameiro, near the Mouth of a River, Lat. 11. Long. 79. It ſignifies a City of Serpents. It was built by the Portugueſe, who erected ſeveral fine Churches, a Jeſuits College, a Monaſtery, and other large Structures here. The Dutch took it in 1658. 'Tis populous, and well fortified. The Inhabitants are deſcended from the Portugueſe, and are of a tawny Complexion. The adjacent Country abounds with Rice, and is poſſeſs'd by brutiſh Pagans; yet in many of the neighbouring Villages the Dutch have planted Chriſtianity, tho in the Suburbs there are many Temples with monſtrous Idols, and in the Neighbourhood there's one with an extraordinary high Steeple, which the Natives fancy was built by the Devil in one Night. The Harbour is not convenient. The Land-Winds are exceſſive hot, and the Sea-Winds very refreſhing. When the Land-Winds blow, the People put their Water into Stone Pots, which keep it very cool. The Women here are very jealous of their Husbands.

2. Tangeor, Capital of the Country, lies within Land 12 Leagues N.W. from Negapatan, on the ſame River. 'Tis the Seat of the Prince, whoſe Country was ſo diſtreſt by the K. of Viſapour in 1662, that many thouſand of the Inhabitants ſold themſelves to the Dutch for Bread and Protection.

3. Trangobar, on the Coaſt, about nine Leagues North of Negapatan. It belongs to the Danes, and is very ſtrong. It yields a pleaſant Proſpect from the Sea; and the Daniſh Miſſionaries ſay, that next to Batavia, 'tis one of the largeſt Cities in the Indies. Theſe Miſſionaries have planted a Congregation here, which increaſes daily, notwithſtanding the great Oppoſition made to it. They have a School, with Maſters who underſtand the Malabar Tongue, have tranſlated the Bible into it, and inſtruct Youth in the Chriſtian Religion. They found the Brahmans very kind, and attentive to the Proteſtant Doctrine, tho much oppos'd by the Popiſh Miſſionaries. Moſt of the Inhabitants are Portugueſe, Pagans, and Mahometans. Baldæus ſays, there's little Trade here, tho the Danes have very good Opportunities for it, and wonders they don't improve it. The Gariſon makes frequent Excurſions upon the neighbouring Mahometans, with whom they are at conſtant Variance.

4. Fort St. David, on the Coaſt, twelve Leagues North from Trangobar. It belongs to the Engliſh; and Lockyer ſays, 'tis a Place of great Profit to the Company, becauſe of the Rents they have here, and the great Quantities of Calicoes and Muſlins carried hence to Europe.

5. Gingi, about fourteen Leagues Weſt of Fort St. David, the Seat of a Prince, and Capital of a Principality of the ſame Name, which abounds with Rice, Salt, and Fruits; but the Inhabitants are ſo numerous, that they are forc'd to have Proviſions from other Countries. The Prince is very rich, tho tributary to the King of Biſnagar. Baldæus ſays, he oblig'd the Dutch Deputies with a Sight of his coſtly Apparel, Silver, Gold, Jewels, Wives, Concubines, and Troops. The chief Manufactures are Linen and Woollen Stuffs, exported to other Places of the Indies. The Goods imported here are Spices, Sandal Wood, Chineſe Silks, Velvets, Sattins, embroider'd Carpets, Raw Silks, Patana Girdles, Muſk, Quick-Silver, Braſs, Tin, Lead, Copper. Gingi, the Capital, lies in a fine Valley, near a pleaſant River, and, according to Baldæus, is very large and populous, and extraordinary well fortified by Rocks, Walls, and ſtrong Caſtles on the tops of the Rocks, that are almoſt inacceſſible, becauſe ſteep and narrow, and there's no Paſſage to 'em but by Stairs cut out of the Rock. On the tops of ſome of the neighbouring Rocks are delicious Springs and Gardens. The Prince has two ſtately Palaces; and there are ſeveral Churches in the Town and Citadel. They have ſcarce any Cannon here, but what is made of long broad Iron Bars, join'd together with Iron Hoops, and their Bullets are Stones.

6. Pondicheri, on the Coaſt, eight Leagues North from Fort St. David. 'Tis a French Factory, and was taken by the Dutch, who were oblig'd to reſtore it by the Treaty of Reſwick. 'Tis about four Leagues round, has a Governor, Council, and Gariſon, and ſeveral other Factories ſubject to it. The chief Trade is in white and painted Cloths.

7. Sadraſtapatan, on the Coaſt, eight Leagues North of Pondicheri, is a Dutch Factory; the Town ſmall, but populous, and the Streets large, but the Houſes mean, and chiefly inhabited by Pagans.

8. Tegnapatan, or Tirepolier, is mention'd by Baldæus, Nieuhoff, and Schouten, who ſay, the Dutch have a Factory here built of Stone, and very well fortified. Baldæus places it three and thirty Leagues South of Paliacate, and eight and twenty South of Fort St. George: But 'tis not in our Maps. Schouten ſays, 'tis chiefly inhabited by Pagans and Moors, who drive a great Trade here.

9. Meliapour, or St. Thomas, about twelve Leagues North of Sadraſtapatan, and two South from Fort St. George. The Moors took it about 1661 from the Portugueſe, who had made it the See of a Biſhop, built ſeveral Churches with two Monaſteries, and a College of Jeſuits, where their own and the Malabar Children were inſtructed; and in ſhort, it was one of the fineſt, richeſt, and beſt fortified Cities in the Indies. The Dutch planted a Factory here, which was taken by the French during the War before the Peace of Reſwick, but retaken by the Dutch and Moors. 'Tis chiefly inhabited by Weavers and Dyers, and noted for the beſt colour'd Stuffs in India: The Excellence and Durableneſs of the Dye is aſcrib'd to the peculiar Quality of the Water. The Portugueſe built a Church in honour of St. Thomas the Apoſtle, who, they fancy, was buried here, pretend to ſhew his Sepulchre on the top of a neighbouring Mountain, and have built a Chappel over it, which is ſeen a great way at Sea. They tell many Legends about this Affair; particularly, that they have a Stone Croſs which fell from Heaven in that Apoſtle's Time; and that there's a Tribe of People deſcended from thoſe who murder'd St. Thomas, and, as a Judgment for it, have one of their Legs as big as that of an Elephant. They pretend alſo to have found St. Thomas's Bones on the Coaſt, and tranſfer'd them to Goa, where they erected a fine Church to his Memory; tho Socrates and Rufinus both affirm, that St. Thomas was martyr'd at Edeſſa in Meſopotamia, and that People uſed to go in Pilgrimage to his Tomb there. The Road here is very ſafe from April to September; but in the other Seaſon the Dutch Ships are oblig'd to ſhelter at Paliacate and Negapatan.

10. Fort St. George, or Madraſpatan, about two Leagues North from Meliapour, Lat. 8. Long. 89. It belongs to the Engliſh Eaſt-India Company, who were poſſeſs'd of it by one of the Gentile Princes above an hundred Years ago, and had it ratified by a Patent from Golconda, to whoſe King the Company pays 7000 Pagods, which are worth nine Shillings a-piece, per Annum, for the Royalties and Cuſtoms, ſays Dr. Fryer, but gain four times the Sum by them. He adds, that 'tis of the utmoſt Importance to the Company for its Strength, Wealth, and the great annual Returns it makes in Callicoes and Muſlins. The Governor lives in great Power and State, and has Judges who give Sentence of Death on any but the Subjects of Great Britain. Lockyer ſays, they had formerly Power to execute European Malefactors, but of late have exercis'd it only on Pirates; yet ſtill he has a power of ſending Priſoners to the Cockhouſe, where they are only allow'd Rice and Water, which, conſidering their Confinement, is as certain, tho not ſo ſudden a Death as a Halter. The Governor has 200 l. Salary per Ann. and 100 l. for a Gratuity. He has ſix Counſellors, the chief of whom has 100 l. per Annum; others from 70 to 50, and the reſt 40 l. per Ann. each, as ſenior Merchants. There are two Eſſay-Maſters, who have 100 l. per Ann. one Judge, 100 l. per Ann. two Miniſters, 100 l. per Ann. each. The Attorney-General 50 Pagods per Ann. the Scavenger 100; the Surgeon 36 l. per Ann. ſix ſenior Merchants 40 l. per Ann. two junior Merchants 30 l. five Factors 15 l. ten Writers 5 l. per Ann. each. The Secretary for extraordinary Services 10 Pagods per Ann. Married Men are allow'd for their Diet according to their Quality, from five to ten Pagods per Month. Inferior Servants, who dine at the general Table, have only Waſhing and Oil for their Lamps extraordinary. The Governor keeps a generous Table, with plenty of Wine: That for the Factors and Writers is alſo very well furniſh'd; for all Eatables are much cheaper here than in Europe. They have Punch enough in perfection, which is the common Drink of the Europeans; for Wine and Beer are ſold at high Rates. The Gariſon conſiſts of about 250 Europeans, at one Pound two Shillings and nine Pence per Month each; 200 mungrel Portugueſe, at fifty or fifty two Fanams, or Three-pences, per Month each; 20 Gunners, at an hundred Fanams per Month. The Captains have fourteen Pagods per Month, Enſigns ten, Serjeants five, Corporals an hundred Fanams. The chief Gunner of the inner Fort fourteen Pagods per Month, the Gunner of the outer Works twelve. There are likewiſe 200 Peons in conſtant Pay, who may be augmented to what Number the Company pleaſes. The Portugueſe, who retir'd hither for Sanctuary when the Moors drove them from St. Thomas, are oblig'd to raiſe a Company or two of Trained Bands at their own Charge on occaſion. The Governor has a conſtant Guard of three or four hundred Blacks, beſides a Band of 1500 Men ready on Summons; and when he goes abroad on extraordinary Occaſions, is attended with Fifes, Drums, Trumpets, and a Flag with two Balls in a red Field, accompanied with his Council and Factors on horſeback, and their Ladies in Palanquins. When he goes to Church, he is guarded by two hundred Soldiers, drawn up in a Line from the inner Fort to the Church-Door; and when he goes abroad on ordinary Occaſions, he has ſeldom leſs than ſixty or eighty Peons, beſides his Engliſh Guards, with two Union Flags carried before him, with loud Country Muſick. He is likewiſe attended by two Men with Fans to cool him, and drive away the Flies; ſo that he is as much reſpected by the Raja's or Princes of the Country, as any of their own Number.

The Town lies in a ſandy Plain ſo near to the Sea, that the Waves ſometimes endanger its Walls. The Black City, called Madraſs, joins it on the North, as Maqua, where the Boatmen live, does on the South. The Proſpect is very delightful by Sea, and magnificent by Land, becauſe of the fine Buildings which over-look the Walls. On the Land-ſide 'tis waſh'd by a River, which half a Mile lower falls into the Sea. Before the wet Seaſon they cut the Bar, to prevent its over-flowing the Country. It runs with a great Stream for two Months; after which the Bar cloſes of it ſelf, and forms a Peninſula three Miles round, which feeds ſome Sheep, Hogs, and Cows; but the Soil is ſo poor, notwithſtanding the Company's Charge to improve it, that the Cattel would ſtarve without other Food. The Walls, both of the Town and Forts, are built of Stone of a ruſſet Colour. The Streets are ſtreight, wide, and pav'd on each ſide with Brick; but in the middle are cover'd with Sand for the eaſy Paſſage of Carts, &c. Where there are no Houſes there are Cauſeways on each ſide, planted with Trees, which are always green, and afford a good Shade. The Town has five Gates, two of which are open'd any time of the Night for unſuſpected Paſſengers, but the other three never after Six a-clock. The Black City is encompaſs'd with a thick high Brick-Wall, fortified with Points and Baſtions, in the modern way. The Citadel or inner Fort is in the middle of the Engliſh Town, defended by four large Baſtions well mounted with Guns. It has two Gates; at one of which there's the main Guard of thirty Soldiers; and the other is kept by a Corporal and ſix. The Keys are deliver'd every Night to the Governor, and in his Abſence to the Chief of the Council. The outer Fort has Batteries, Half-Moons, and Flankers, at proper diſtances, planted with an hundred and fifty Guns, and three Mortars, beſides thirty two Guns and eight Field-Pieces on the Outworks. The publick Structures of Note are, 1. The Governor's Lodgings in the inner Fort, of which they take up two Thirds. His Houſe over-looks all the reſt, and is three Stories high, with many commodious Apartments for ſeveral of the Council, the Secretarys, Accomptants, and inferior Officers. In the ſecond Story there's a Conſultation-Room, adorn'd with Fire-Arms in ſeveral Figures, as in the Tower of London. This Fort has four Turrets mounted with Guns, and on the South-Eaſt Point the Standard is fix'd. From the outer Gate towards the Sea there's a Path of broad pav'd Stones, thro the ſecond Guard, and there's a ſtately Gate which fronts the high Street. 2. St. Mary's Church, a large arch'd Pile adorned with fine Carv'd Work, a ſtately Altar, Organs, and a fine Copper Branch, very large Windows, but only one Bell. The Church has a conſiderable Stock of Orphans Money, and Legacies left for the Poor. The Lord's Day is well obſerv'd here, when the Proteſtants of the Country Towns belonging to the Company are conſtantly catechized, and Divine Service perform'd according to the Church of England. Here's a Library, with Books of Divinity, valued at 500 l. and a Free-School under it, where Children are taught to read and write. 3. The College for ſeven or eight young Gentlemen, under an Overſeer appointed by the Governor. 'Tis an antient Building, two Stories high, with a pav'd Court, two large Piazzas, and Rooms where the Collegiates live merrily, and at eaſe. They have Peons to attend at the Gate, and clean the Houſe. Thoſe who enjoy this Privilege are recommended by the Company in England. 4. The new Houſe, which is appointed for the Soldiers, and the Scene of their drunken Frolicks. It fronts the main Guard, has a ſtrong Battery on the other ſide againſt the River, and a Company keeps guard here at a time, who ſend out a Corporal and two Soldiers every Hour in the Night, to prevent Diſorders, and take up ſuſpected Perſons. Each of theſe Soldiers is allow'd a Boy about ten Years old, with ſeven or eight Fanams per Month. The Marſhal puniſhes ſuch as offend by Whipping, tying them Neck and Heels, or running the Gauntlope. 5. The Hoſpital joins this Houſe: Is a long Structure, with a pav'd Court and a Piazza, with an Apothecary's Shop for Patients, who have Apartments and Proviſions here. If they be Soldiers, the Hoſpital receives their Pay; but Sailors pay for their Phyſick, and allow a Shilling a Day for Proviſions. 6. The Townhouſe, and a Chappel where the Portugueſe are allow'd Maſs. Dr. Fryer ſays, the Houſes in general are neat, with Terraſſes and Battlements at top. They have Italian Portico's, and Rows of Trees before their Doors.

In the Black Town the Pagans have ſome Courts of Juſtice, an Exchange, and a Temple with Chappels for every Tribe: They have no Light but from Lamps. The biggeſt Chappel is always ſhut up, becauſe the Riches of the Deceaſed are buried here by Advice of their Prieſts, to ſerve them as a Viaticum. Theſe Chappels have obſcene Pictures on the Walls within, and monſtrous Idols on the Out-ſide. They ſtink abominably of the Oil which they uſe in their Lamps, and for anointing their Idols. The Form of this Town is a ſort of Triangle. Without the Town are the Engliſh Sepulchres, built in Lines, and form'd, according to the Cuſtom of the Country, with Variety of Fancies, and make a very good Shew. The Company have their Fields of Rice, Kitchen and Flower-Gardens, without the Town. They have a pleaſant one at St. Thomas's Mount, with coſtly Gates, ſpacious Walks, a fine Bowling-Green, a Teal-Pond, and other Curioſities. They have Lemons and Grapes here; but they don't ripen. The Company has ſeveral Villages about three Miles in the Country, and farm them at about 1300 Pagods per Annum. The Powder us'd by the Gariſon is made in an Iſland about two Gun-ſhot from the Town; but not ſo good or well made as ours, tho they have the beſt Ingredients for it. The chief Revenues of the Company ariſe from Cuſtoms outward and inward, Anchorage, Coinage, &c. which all together are very conſiderable. The Government of the Town is by a Mayor and Aldermen, Quarrels, ſmall Debts, and Suits of little importance, are decided by ſix Aldermen, who meet twice a Week in the Town-Hall. The Black Merchants apply commonly to them; but Europeans to the Governor. There lies an Appeal from the Mayor's Court to one that is higher, where a Judge allow'd by the Company determines finally on the Report of a Jury; but moſt of their Lawyers are broken Tradeſmen. There are five other Juſtices, who are Members of the Council, or chief Citizens, who meet twice a Week to decide Controverſies, puniſh criminal Indians and Frauds, make People pay their Debts, and regiſter Slaves and Servants. Moſt of the current Money is coined by the Company, who have great Allowance from the Owners of the Bullion. Their chief Piece is the Pagod, of nine Shillings. The Orders of the Council here are more regarded than thoſe of the other Engliſh Factories in the Indies. They are ſummon'd at the Governor's Pleaſure, examine, paſs, and ſign all Orders, general Letters, and monthly Accounts, or order their Secretary to do it in their Name. Lockyer ſays, he has been credibly inform'd that there are 300000 People within the Company's Juriſdiction. The ſubordinate Factories are Acheen, Tonquin, Fettipole, and Comnimer, where they have Houſes and large Privileges, but no Servants; Fort St. David, Mecklapatan, Viſagapatan, and Madapoulan, where they have Factories for red Wood and Cotton Cloth. They trade from Fort St. George to all Parts Eaſt of the Cape of Good-Hope: But Lockyer ſays, the greateſt Ships trade of late to Mecca, Perſia, and Surat, with Bengal and China Commodities, and touch by the Way at ſeveral Ports of Malabar for the Product of that Coaſt. As there are Partners almoſt in every Ship and Stock, the Veſſels and Cargoes are ſold at their return either by Outcry or Auction at the Sea-Gate, where they put up Notes a Week before-hand of the Goods, Quantities, and Time of Sale. Merchants unacquainted with the Place, have their Goods diſpos'd of by the Inhabitants at two, or ſometimes one per Cent. for Trouble. Five per Cent. is allow'd to Supercargoes; and married Women trade as well as the Men. Land-Intereſt is ſettled by Order of Council at Ten per Cent. per Annum; but Money may be had of the Church at Eight or Nine per Cent. Money is alſo lent here on Bottomree from Sixteen to Forty five per Cent. according to the Length of the Voyage. The Inhabitants are healthful, and of ruddy Complexions, notwithſtanding the exceſſive Heats of Summer for about four or five Hours in a Day, after which they have cool Sea-Breezes. During theſe Heats the Governor and principal Men retire to the Company's new Gardens. The uſual Diverſions of the Engliſh are Riding, Shooting, Courſing, and Billiards, &c. at the Punch-Houſes. Lockyer ſays, the European Goods that ſell beſt here are Lead, Wine, Beer, Ale, Syder, Cheeſe, Cloth, Hats, fine Ribbands, Gold and Silver Lace, Thred and Worſted Hoſe, Flint-Ware, Looking-Glaſſes, Light-colour'd Wigs, Stuffs and Trimmings for Coats, Spirits, Cherry-Brandy, Caſe-Knives, Tin-Ware, Tobacco-Pipes, and all ſorts of Haberdaſhery. Returns are made to Europe in all the Product of the Indies, particularly Cotton Cloth and Muſlins, which are cheaper here than at Surat, but dearer than at Bengal. Dr. Fryer ſays, their Firing is Cow-Dung, which is brought by way of Toll from the Country Pagans; a Prerogative which the Dutch on this Coaſt could never obtain. He adds, that by this means the Pagans get Eſtates without being moleſted, as thoſe who are under the tyrannical Juriſdiction of the Moors; and that no leſs than 30000 of thoſe Pagans are employed in the ſaid Monopoly of Cow-Dung.

11. Paliacate, on the Coaſt, about nine Leagues North from Fort St. George. The Dutch Eaſt-India Company took it from the Portugueſe in 1619, have made it very ſtrong; and 'tis their chief Factory on this Coaſt. The Houſes are cloſe, and well built. The Inhabitants are Dutch and Pagans. The latter trade in painted and white Callicoes and Linen. The Market is well ſtor'd with Rice and other Grain from the neighbouring Country. The Banians and Jews are the chief Traders. The Dutch Fort is waſh'd by a River on one ſide, where the Merchants unload their Goods in the rainy Seaſon, when the Inhabitants catch and dry what Fiſh they can; for in Summer 'tis quite dry'd up. The North Monſon begins in October, and holds with ſuch Violence till the end of December, that Ships are ſcarce ſafe in the Road; but in January the fair Seaſon returns, and about half a League from the Shore there's ſafe Riding, in ſeven or eight Fathom Water. The neighbouring Soil is nitrous and ſandy; ſo that the Inhabitants dig Holes in the Sand as near the Sea as they can during the Ebb, and from hence have all the freſh Water they drink. The Dutch refine the Salt-Petre here which they bring from Bengal, and make Gunpowder with which they furniſh their other Factories. They have great Warehouſes for Cotton Cloth, and pay the Governor of the Fort an hundred Crowns per Month, beſides Preſents of Wine, Oil, and Cloth. The Gold Pagods coin'd here by the Dutch, paſs beſt at the Diamond Mines of Golconda. Martin ſays, the Variation of the Compaſs here is 1 Degree, $\frac{4}{4}$.

12. Fettipole is forty Leagues N. from Paliacate: it is the ſafeſt Harbour on the Coaſt during the North Wind; but the Sea is boiſterous during the South Wind; and the Bay has ſome Shallows, that are only paſſable by ſmall Veſſels. In an Iſland over-againſt the Town grows a Root which makes ſo deep a Colour, that they are oblig'd to mix it with others to make it more lively. This Colour is nam'd Tambreville; and the painted and dy'd Stuffs of this Place are highly valued. The Governor of the Town engroſſes the Dye and Manufacture, for which he pays the King a conſiderable Value, and employs the Weavers, who muſt not ſell the Stuffs without his Conſent. Here's good Indico, and Engliſh and Dutch Factories, which tranſport from hence Cotton, Yarn, white Stuffs, &c.

III. Golconda Kingdom extends along the Bay of Bengal, from Lat. 10. to 19 $\frac{1}{2}$. in form of a Creſcent, and is about two hundred Miles where broadeſt. It abounds with Black and White Cattel, Poultry, and all ſorts of Proviſions. Lewd Women are publickly licenſed here, and ſtand at their Doors in their beſt Geers to tempt Paſſengers; and the Wives of the common People are allow'd very great Liberties by their Marriage-Contracts. Yet Thieves are puniſh'd here by cutting off both their Hands. The King of this Country is ſo powerful, that, Dr. Fryer ſays, he kept a ſtanding Army of 100000 Horſe and Foot, and 200 Elephants; yet he became tributary to the Mogul; and a Grandſon of Aurengzebe's uſurp'd the Crown, but was expell'd by the Son of his Predeceſſor, who was an Arabian, as Mr. Ovington ſays in the Appendix of his Voyage to Surat, printed in 1696. He is Proprietor of all the Lands in the Kingdom, from which and the Impoſts on Goods and Proviſions, and the Diamond Mines, he has vaſt Revenues. He wears Jewels of an ineſtimable Value and curious Workmanſhip. He has Diamonds, &c. of great Value in his Treaſury; and none but himſelf muſt have any above five Carats, on pain of Death. The Sanſons ſay, he is little inferior to the Mogul in Riches or Magnificence; but his Dominions being much leſs, and his People not ſo warlike, he pays a Tribute of 400000 Pagods per Annum.

Moſt of the People are Mahometans, of the Sect of Huſſein, whoſe Feſtival they celebrate with more Fopperies than the Perſians, who have engroſs'd the Favour of the Court by means of their Traffick and Arms; ſo that all the Omrahs, or great Lords, are Perſians, or their Sons. The other Inhabitants are Moors, Pagans, Armenians, with ſome Engliſh, Dutch, Portugueſe, and a few French. The Pagans had formerly the chief Government; but are now us'd as Mechanicks or Servants, who can hold no Office. The Sanſons ſay, the Air is generally wholeſome, and their Fruits different from ours. They have only three Seaſons: In March, April, May, and June, which is their Summer, the Heat is exceſſive: In July, Auguſt, September, and October, which is their Autumn, they have great Rains: In November, December, January, and February, which is their Spring, the Air is cold. They have two Crops of Rice per Ann. and ſome other Grain; and have plenty of Grapes, of which they make White Wine. In ſhort, they have all Neceſſaries for Life; but in many Places are infeſted by Serpents, whoſe Poiſon they expel by the Cobra Stone, or by holding a burning Coal to the Part affected. They make all ſorts of Manufactures, but particularly of Cotton, ſo artificially, and in ſuch lively Colours, that they are preſer'd to Silk. They build large Ships, and trade to Arabia, and all Parts of the Indies. The Sanſons ſay, there are ſixty ſix Fortreſſes in this Kingdom, built upon inacceſſible Rocks. They have no Mines of Gold, Silver, or Copper, but abundance of Salt, Iron, and Steel, and many of Diamonds and other precious Stones.

Places

Places of Note are,

1. Golconda, Lat. 16. Long. 77. Mr. Fitch says, 'tis a fine Town. The Houses are of Brick and Timber: It has good fresh Water, and Variety of pleasant Fruits; but is liable to Inundations from the neighbouring River, by which it formerly suffer'd much. It lies in a good Air, and a fruitful Soil. The Sansons make it five or six Leagues round. The King resides here often in a large Palace well fortified, and has a Hill that rises pyramidically in the Centre of the Fortifications, which are well mounted with Cannon. One must pass twelve Gates before they come to the King's Apartments, which none must enter without his Leave. The outer Gates are guarded by Indians. The Palace is so large, that it resembles a City, and contains several good Bazars well furnish'd with all Necessaries for the Omrahs and Great Officers, who all have Apartments here. His Majesty keeps a great many curious Workmen, and maintains a considerable Number of Jewellers in the Palace; but commands them Secrecy, lest the Great Mogul should demand the Stones. They cut Saphires with a Bow of Wire and a Solution of the Powder of white Emrods, found in this Country, and sold for a Crown a Pound; and they likewise take Spots out of Diamonds. About two Musquets-shot from the Castle lie the Sepulchres of the Kings in the middle of large Gardens, with a Royal Chappel of fine Architecture, and richly adorn'd; but few are admitted to enter it, because they reckon it sacred. These Sepulchres are Sanctuaries for Criminals. They divide the natural Day here into two parts, beginning at Morning and Evening Twilight, each of which they subdivide into four Quarters, and each Quarter into eight parts, which they distinguish by beating on a large Copper-Plate held up in the Air, as we do by Clocks.

The Curious, who would know more of the Diamond Mines of this and the neighbouring Countries, may consult Lowthorp's Abridgment of our Philosophical Transactions, Vol. 2. p. 467, &c.

2. Bagnagor, eight Leagues N. E. from Golconda, near the same River. It is Capital of the Kingdom, lies in a Plain surrounded with Hillocks at some little distance, which make the Air wholesome. The Houses of the Citizens are generally mean, but have fine Gardens. Thevenot makes the City and Suburbs near seven Miles long; says, it has several Markets, but the fairest is that before the Palace, where the Nobility have fine Houses. At the East and West Ends there are two stately Divans for the Courts of Justice; and underneath are the Prisons, with Basins of Water before them. At the North-side is the Royal Palace, which is large and stately, has a Portico over-against it for the Musicians, and in the middle a Square for the fighting of Elephants. The Inside is very pleasant; but none must enter it without the King's Order. Here are handsome Caravanseras; but the noblest and largest stands in the great Street, opposite to the King's Garden. 'Tis a stately and sumptuous Structure, with Terrasses, Balconies, Balluster, Galleries, Decagon Towers, &c. and the Whole is adorned with Roses and Festons, neatly cut. Here are also many fair Gardens in the City and Suburbs, one of them reckon'd the pleasantest in the Kingdom, with a noble Structure at the End of it, a long Terrass-Walk on the Front, and Groves on the Sides, with a noble Pond. 'There's an Octogon Structure in the Middle, with a sumptuous Bridge to it, and fine Water-Works. Here are many rich Bankers, Merchants, Jewellers, and vast Numbers of skilful Artizans; and the King has an Army here of 40000 Horse of different Nations, to prevent his being surpriz'd, as was his Predecessor. The Omrahs frequently squeeze the Merchants here on pretence of Crimes. The English, Dutch, and Portuguese have Factories here, who trade in Chites and other Cloths, Spices, Silver, Copper, Tin, and Lead, of which they make great Profit. They make themselves welcome by large Presents to the Courtiers. Persons of Quality, with the Officers military and civil, live in the City; but Merchants and Tradesmen in the Suburbs. They are allow'd to trade in the City with foreign Merchants from Ten in the Morning till Five in the Evening, and then return home. When the King administers Justice, he comes to a Balcony that looks into a Square before the Palace, where all that have Business stand without a Barrier form'd by Poles and Ropes, and enter as they are call'd. A Secretary of State sits under the Balcony, receives Petitions, puts 'em into a Bag, which an Eunuch pulls up by a String, and presents to his Majesty. The chief Nobility mount the Guard by turns with the Troops under their Command, as at the Mogul's Court, attended by Elephants and Camels, which carry Guns and Men, with lighted Matches. Then follow the Coaches, Servants, and Led-Horses of the Omrahs, with Strumpets dancing before them till they come to the Piazza. The Foot Soldiers have no Clothes, but three or four Ells of Callico that cover half their Body before and behind. They tie their Hair up in a Knot on their Crowns, have broad Swords, and Musquets whose Barrels are stronger and neater than ours, because their Iron is better. The Cavalry has Bows, Bucklers, Battle-Axes, Head-Pieces, and Jackets of Mail. Here are 20000 common Strumpets set down in the Deroga's Book, without which they must not profess their Trade. They pay no Tribute to the King; but are oblig'd every Friday to send their Governess with a certain number to dance before his Balcony. In the Evening they ply before their Houses, where they sell a Liquor call'd Tari; which yields the King so much Tribute, that he thinks it his Interest to increase their Number.

3. Condopoly lies about thirty eight Leagues East from Golconda. The Sansons says, 'tis the principal Fortress of the Kingdom, contains six Forts one above another, with Wood, Fruit, and Arable Land, enough to maintain its several Garisons, which make almost 12000 Men.

4. Candavera, about forty eight League East from Golconda, is a very strong City, in which, with others already mention'd, the King keep his Diamonds and other Treasures.

5. Colour, or Gani, about thirty Leagues East from Golconda, was built for the sake of the Diamond Mine. Herbert says, the Mine is a large Rock, under part of a Mountain. The Soil for many Miles round is barren and sandy; but near the Mine is of a reddish Colour, and the Vein it self of a pale Yellow. No part of the World affords greater Plenty of Diamonds, and of a better Water. Here are also Topazes, Amethists, Spinels, Heliotropes, Agats, Garnet, Christals, &c. The digging of them is a kind of Lottery to the Adventurers; for if a Diamond exceed twenty Carats, or eighty Grains, it belongs to the King, tho they are oblig'd to maintain strong Guards to defend their Workmen and Caravans from the Mountaineers. Twas discover'd by a Countryman as digging Ground to sow Millet. He found a pointed Stone of above twenty five Carats; and perceiving it glitter, carried it to a Jeweller at Golconda, who admiring the Size, the rich Men of the Town fell to work the Mine, where they found greater Quantities and bigger Diamonds than any where else, and among the rest that large Stone of nine hundred Carats, which was presented to Aurengzebe the Great Mogul. Tavernier says, when he was there, above 60000 People were employ'd about this Mine. For the Particulars of trying their Fineness, &c. we refer to him.

6. Masulipatan, on the Coast, about four and twenty Leagues N. E. from Colour, near the Mouth of a River. 'Tis large, encompass'd with a Mud-Wall and a stinking Moras, sometimes over-flow'd by the Sea. The Houses of the poorer sort are very mean, made up like Bee-Hives with Mud-Wall and Thatch. The Houses of the better sort are lofty, with square Courts, stately Gates, vaulted Ponds in the middle, Terrass-Walks, with Places to wash in, and others to take the Air. Here are three Market-Places crowded with People and Commodities. On the N. E. and N. W. they have long Bridges over sandy Marshes, always crowded by Droves of People, and at the Ends next the Town have Gatehouses and strong Guards. The Inhabitants are Moors, Persians, Pagans, Armenians; and the Danes, Portuguese, English, Dutch, and French, have Factories here. Near the Bar the Waves have a rapid Motion, make a noise as loud as the Cataracts of the Nile, and have sometimes as great a Fall. Vessels of Burden are oblig'd to ride at half a League from the Bar, there being no good Anchorage nearer. Martin says, the Variation of the Compass is 12 Deg. 22 Min. The Heat is extreme from March to July, and from thence to November they have incessant Winds and Rains; and tho they have but four Months of moderate Weather, they have two Harvests. Nieuhoff says, 'tis the greatest Place of Trade in the Kingdom for Calicoes, Indico, Diamonds, and other precious Stones. Dr. Fryer says, they stain Callicoes here the best of any in the Indies; and that Pagan Children, &c. do it nicely with Pencils. He says, there are about 200000 People in the City; but so cowardly, that four and twenty Englishmen maintain'd the Custom-house-Key upon a Quarrel against the whole City. The Air does not agree with new Comers; but by removing three Miles up the Country, where the English Factory have a Garden, they soon recover. When the Season for Shipping is over, the English remove to Medapatan, forty Miles further North, where they have a wholesome Seat. The Governor of the Town lives nobly, has a great Train, and pays an annual Tribute to the King. Capital Crimes are punish'd in the common People by cutting them suddenly in pieces, or impaling them. People of Quality are punish'd thus: The King orders them to a Place call'd the Post, where the Master of it gives them an intoxicating Drink, made of Hemp and Night-Shade, which makes them foolishly mad. Then they are let into a Garden, where Dogs, Cats, and Monkeys, are their Attendants, with whom they maintain their Dialogues, and vent their Humours. Here they continue during the King's Pleasure; and if he don't order a Cure, they pine to death. The Diseases here are Empyema's and Fluxes; and during the hot Season they are infested with Swarms of Ants, Muskettoes, Flies, and stinking Chints, like our Bugs; so that there's no sleeping without fine Callico thrown over their Beds, with Mufflers on their Hands and Faces, and a Servant to keep off those Insects with a Fan; and the Bed-Posts are set in Pans of Water, to prevent the Ants from creeping up.

7. Bimilipatan, twenty five Leagues N. E. from Masulipatan. The Dutch have a Factory and a considerable Trade here, and at Palicole and Dacheron, betwixt this Place and Masulipatan, in the above mention'd Commodies, and import Copper, Tin, Lead, and Pepper. The Governors on this Coast are generally great Exactors; and when threaten'd with Complaints to the King, say he is King at Golconda, but they are Kings in their respective Governments.

Orixa Province lies N. E. from Golconda, along the Bay of Bengal. 'Twas formerly govern'd by a King of its own, but is now subject to the Mogul. The chief Place of Note here is a Town of the same Name, Lat. 21. Long. 85. The Commodities here are Rice, Cotton, Cloth, Bengals, white Cloth, Butter, Lacque, Pepper, Ginger, and Mirabolans; but their Trade is lessen'd by the Imposts which the Mogul lays on the Commodities.

Before we proceed to Bengal, we shall give a brief Description of some of the inland Provinces, as follows:

Chitor, which lies East from Guzuratte, on both sides the Tropick of Cancer. 'Twas antiently the chief Province of a flourishing Kingdom, but now subject to the Mogul. The Capital, of the same Name, was once so noble, that it was call'd the Umbrella of the World, but ruin'd by Aurengzebe, the late Mogul, who, Dr. Fryer says, treacherously impos'd upon the Princess that govern'd it. The only Place of Note now is Chitpour, North of the Tropick of Cancer, Long. 71. 'Tis inhabited by Banians, who make Cotton Yarn, and weave great quantities of those Callicoes call'd Chites. The Country abounds with Lions, which, Tavernier says, the Natives have a dextrous way of taming. It produces store of Assafatida, which the Banians mix in Sauces, and think no Dish good without it. The Country is infested by a sort of barbarous Mahometan Priests, who, Tavernier says, wear Tyger-Skins, go arm'd with their Attendants, and, among other Weapons, have Iron Circles fashion'd like the Brim of a Platter, which they throw with such force, that they'll go near to cut a Man through in the Middle. They always carry an Iron Grater or Rasp like a Trowel, to clear the Places where they intend to rest; and some of 'em scrape the Dust up in a Heap for their Pillow.

This Province is also called Raja Rana's Country, because a Prince of that Name governed it, and held it out against the Great Mogul; and here are several Rajas still who don't own that Prince, but live independent, and take all Opportunities to annoy their Neighbours, and rob Caravans, &c.

Gauleor Province, lies North East from Chitor, and South from Agra. Its Capital of the same Name, is a large City, Lat. 26. Long. 78. on the side of a Hill, which at top is inclosed and fortified, has Ground and Water enough to subsist the Garison, which makes it one of the best in the Indies. The Mogul has a Palace here, and imprisons priſons Princes and Noblemen he diſlikes in the Fortreſs, where the late Aurengzebe ordered a great many ſuch to be poiſoned. The Mogul keeps alſo a vaſt Treaſure under a ſtrong Guard in this Fortreſs.

Narvar Province lies East from Gualeor. This Country is inhabited by a ſort of Pythagoreans, ſays Covert, who are a cruel and deceitful People, force Women to burn themſelves at the Death of their Husbands, and if they refuſe, ſhave and clothe them with black, after which no body will converſe with them. It abounds with Wool and Cotton, and has ſuch abundance of Sugar-Canes and Mangoes, that they feed their Horſes with them. Here are alſo vaſt Flocks of Sheep, whoſe Wool is reckoned equal to Spaniſh. There are many Lions, Tygers, and Elephants in their Woods, and here are Inns where Travellers are entertained at the publick Charge.

Ogilby mentions ſeveral Towns here, which are not in our Maps; as, (1.) Sandage, noted for Manufactures of Wool, Cotton, and Arms, and much frequented by Merchants. (2.) Barandon, a Thorow-fare for Caravans, and noted for a great Trade in Arms and Elephants Teeth.

Candiſch Province, lies South from Chitor. Thevenot ſays, it has plenty of Rice and Indico; that their white and painted Callicoes are much eſteemed for their Stripes of Gold, Silver, and Silk intermixed with Flowers, which makes them very dear, being much uſed for Veils, Scarves, Handkerchiefs, and Coverlets, and tranſported, ſays Tavernier, to Perſia, Europe, and Egypt. The Capital is Brampour, near the Head of the River Tapti, Lat. 22. Long. 76. it lies in a ſpacious, but unhealthy Vale. Purchas ſays, it was much bigger than London in his time, and the richeſt City in the Mogul's Dominions. The Streets are many, but narrow. Here's a large Caſtle, in which lies the Palace; and the Walls next the River have Galleries at top, from whence the Mogul ſees the Elephants fight in the middle of the River which divides the Town. This Place has proved unfortunate to many of the Sons and Uncles of the Great Moguls, who have periſhed here by Debauches and Rebellion. The Princes of the Blood are uſually made Governours of it. Here's a large Caravanſera for lodging Strangers, and another for keeping the Mogul's Money. There's ſuch vaſt Quantities of Tobacco in the Neighbourhood, that the Natives let much of it rot. Fytch ſays, the Dutch barter Pepper for Opium here. Pelſart ſays, the Engliſh uſed to have a Factory in this Place, where they ſold Cloths, Lead, Quickſilver, Sabres, Sattins, Velvets, and Gold-Stuffs; for which they returned Money by Bills of Exchange to Agra and Surat. Fytch ſays, the Natives marry here at five or ſix years old, and bed at nine or ten. There are ſeveral other ſtrong Towns and Caſtles in this Country, mentioned by Sir Thomas Roe and others, which we can't inſiſt upon.

Balaguat, or Balgat Province, lies South from Candiſch. The Name is derived from the high Mountains, which run thro the whole Peninſula as far as Cape Comorin, and in many Places are unpaſſable. Nieuhoff ſays, they are 120 Leagues long, form a dreadful Ridge, and in many Places are covered with a red Sand as light as Duſt, which by the ſtrong Weſt-Winds, in October, November, and December, is blown as far as the Iſle of Ceylon, tho fifty Leagues diſtant. The Reflection of this Sand, when the Sun ſhines, makes Ships look as if they were on fire. He adds, that this Ridge occaſions ſurprizing Alterations in the Seaſon; for on the North-ſide of Cape Comorin, 'tis Winter during May, June, July, Auguſt, and September, when it is Summer on the South-ſide of the Cape; ſo that on one ſide there are continual Tempeſts, Thunder, and Lightning, while on the other there's an agreeable lovely Seaſon. The Winds gather black Clouds upon theſe Mountains, which break out into great and ſudden Rains, that overflow the Country, ſwell the Rivers, and ſo fill them with Sand, that they are not navigable for a conſiderable time after. Places of Note are,

1. Dultabad the Capital, Lat. 21. Long. 75. Thevenot ſays, 'tis one of the ſtrongeſt Places belonging to the Mogul, by reaſon of an oval Hill in the middle, on the top of which there's a good Citadel, with three other Forts; and the Palace and the Town it ſelf is walled with Free-Stone, and has Battlements and Towers mounted with Cannon.

2. Elora. Thevenot places it three Leagues from Dultabad, from whence there's a way to it cut out of a rocky Mountain, with a Wall on each ſide to hinder Waggons, &c. from falling. At the top of this Paſſage there's a ſpacious Plain well cultivated, with Towns, Villages, Gardens, Woods, and arable Land, many lofty Tombs, and the ſtatelieſt Pagods or Temples in the Indies. Here he found a Moſque in a large Court, with many burning Lamps, and old Men to look after the Tombs; and clambering down the Rock into a Plain, he ſaw very high Chappels; and entered a Porch cut out of the Rock, with Figures of Giants on each ſide, and many others in Relievo, all cut out of the Rock, with a large Court, &c. cut out in the ſame manner, as ſmooth as Plaiſter. In ſhort, according to his Deſcription, this Place is as remarkable as Perſepolis. He mentions two Stair-Caſes cut in the Rock, which go up to a Platform two Leagues in Circumference, full of ſtately Tombs, Chappels, and Temples, ſupported by Rows of Pillars, and adorned with Figures within and without, all cut out of the Rock, and for two Leagues along the Rock, vaſt numbers of Temples dedicated to Heathen Saints, and looked after by Santos, who were all naked except their Privities, and beſprinkled with Aſhes, and their Hair as long as it could grow. The Pagans, he ſays, aſcribe theſe wonderful Structures to Giants; he thinks they ſurpaſs human Art and Power, and that the Workmen have not been barbarous, tho the Architecture and Sculpture come far ſhort of ours: We refer to him for other wonderful Structures of the like nature.

3. Aurengabad, about fifteen Leagues South from Dultabad, is now reckoned the Capital of the Country, ſince the Mogul Aurengzebe removed the Trade hither, and built a noble Moſque for his firſt Wife who died here. Thevenot ſays, it is large, but not walled, and was the Reſidence of Aurengzebe during his Father's Life. The Houſes are chiefly of Free-Stone, and high; the Streets are planted with Trees, and they have fine Gardens, with ſeveral ſorts of Grapes and other Fruit. The Town is populous, has a great Trade, and the neighbouring Soil is fruitful. Thevenot ſays, the Road from hence to Surat, which our Map makes above 80 Leagues, is planted with Trees of different ſorts, and full of Buffaloes, Antelopes, Hares, and Partridges. Moſt of it is Arable Land, produces the beſt Rice in the Indies, abounds with Cotton and Sugar-Canes, is intermixed with Hills, Valleys, and Streams, has four Towns, and thirty four Villages well peopled. In the Roads there are Guards, who exact Money of Paſſengers, tho it be not their Due.

IV. Bengal Province lies in the South-Eaſt Corner of the Country, on both ſides the Tropick of Cancer, and the River Ganges. The Sanſons make it 750 miles Eaſt and Weſt, and 480 North and South. It was formerly divided into twelve Provinces or Kingdom, named by their principal Towns. Bernier, in his Anſwer to Thevenot's five Queſtions, ſays, 'tis the beſt and fruitfulleſt Country in the World, and the Air temperate, that it produces vaſt Quantities of Rice, Sugar, Spices, Cotton, Silks, Canes, &c. The Portugueſe drive a great Trade here in Confections, Pomcitrons, a delicate Root like Sarſaparilla, Ambas, Ananas, Mirobalans, Lemons, and Ginger. The other Commodities are Saltpetre; with which the Engliſh and Dutch load whole Ships; Lacque, Opium, Wax, Civet, Long Pepper, and Butter. Bernier adds, that the Country is well watered by Channels cut out of the Ganges, on the Banks of which grow their Pulſe, Muſtard-Seed, Seſamum for Oil, and low Mulberry-Trees to feed their Silk-Worms; but their Silk is nothing ſo good as that of Perſia. The Iſlands of the Ganges next the Sea are now for moſt part abandoned, and full of ravenous Tygers, which frequently leap into Boats, and devour Paſſengers. Bernier ſays, he ſaw a ſort of Fiſh among thoſe Iſles, with a Bladder hanging out of their Mouths full of Air, and reddiſh at the end, and here he alſo obſerved ſeveral Lunar Rainbows. The Province is governed by a Can and other ſubordinate Officers, who, in the name of the Emperor and the Governour-General, exerciſe an abſolute Power. They all affect Pomp, numerous Guards, Muſicians, Trains of Elephants, Horſes, Enſigns, Palanquins; are generally proud, voluptuous, covetous, and make profit of every thing. They particularly oppreſs the Gentiles, who live chiefly by Agriculture, and weaving Callicoes. The Governors have all the Tributes, Impoſts, and Fines, for which they are obliged to furniſh the Emperor with Horſe and Arms, by Thouſands or Hundreds, according to their Rank. The Mahometans here are of the Sect of Ali, and as whimſical in the Worſhip of their Saints as the Perſians. During the Feaſt of Ali's two Sons, the Gentiles muſt keep within Doors, and not ſo much as look out of their Windows on pain of Death. The Mahometans, in other reſpects, are grave in their Actions and Apparel, civil in Converſation; and, Schouten ſays, ridicule the Levity of the French among them. They allow Polygamy and Fornication, drink Wine, and other ſtrong Liquors in private. The better ſort teach their Children to read and write, make them ſtudy the Alcoran, and afterwards ſuch Sciences as they are deſigned for. Children are betrothed here at ſix or eight Years of Age, but don't conſummate the Marriage till Years of Maturity. The Rich are very extravagant and ſumptuous in their Marriages, and the neareſt a-kin on both ſides ſearch for the Tokens of Virginity; and if they don't appear the firſt night, both teſtify their Reſentments againſt the Bride. They are extreme jealous, and have liberty to kill their Wives in caſe of Adultery. The Merchants and other rich People diſpoſe of their Wives in ſeveral Places, as their Trade, or other Occaſions call them, which makes their Wives vie with one another which ſhall entertain them beſt, and have moſt of their Company. Their Wives and Daughters go naked within Doors from the Girdle upward; and when they go abroad, throw a looſe Garment about them, but ſo as their naked Breaſts and Arms are ſeen. The richer ſort wear Circles of Silver and Gold upon their Arms, as high as their Elbows, and the like about their Ancles, with Rings in their Ears and Noſtrils; Women with black Hair are moſt eſteemed. They plaſter the Inſides of the Houſes, which are of Earth and Clay dried in the Sun, with a mixture of Chalk, Cow-Dung, Milk, Sugar, and Gum, which makes them very ſhining and pleaſant, and prevents the breeding of Inſects. Their Furniture is rich Perſian and other Tapeſtries, and ſome of them have ſtore of Silver and Gold Plate. Their Bedding is for moſt part ſlight Quilts laid upon Couches. The Women have their particular Apartments, where they lie, eat, and manage their Affairs, and are in general very coſtly. They ſit croſs-legged on Mats, but ſome of the richer Merchants have a few ſorry Chairs for their European Friends. The Houſes of the ordinary People are Huts built of Mud-wall, covered with Reeds, and plaſtered with Cow-Dung, but have no Chimneys or different Rooms. They never ſhut Doors or Windows, nor are there any Complaints of Robberies among them. The Pagans here burn their Widows after a different faſhion from the other Provinces: She is waſhed with the Corps of her Husband in the Ganges, then dances up to the Funeral Pile with Muſick, Drums, &c. ſets her ſelf down as if on a Bed, has the Corps laid a-croſs her Knees; then her Friends give her Letters or Tokens for their Acquaintance in the other World. When they have all done, ſhe asks the Standers-by three times, whether they have any more Service; if they make no Anſwer, ſhe ties up all the Tokens in a piece of Taffety, and bids them ſet fire to the Pile. Then when the Bodies are half-burnt, they are thrown into the Ganges, and devour'd by Crocodiles, with which the Rivers here are ſo much infeſted, that ſometimes they overturn Fiſhing-Boats.

Tavernier ſays, the Pagans here, when a new-born Child does not ſuck, carry it out in a Linen-Cloth, tie it to the Bough of a Tree, where they leave it from Morning to Night, when they fetch it back; and if it refuſe the Breaſt again, they repeat this Treatment three days after; which if they ſtill refuſe, they believe it to be a Devil, and drown it. The Crows many times, during this Experiment, peck out one or both of the Infant's Eyes; which is the reaſon, ſays Tavernier, that many of the Pagans have but one Eye, and ſome none at all. Europeans ſometimes take down thoſe Children, and give them good Education.

Schouten ſays, they have almoſt continual Rains in this Country, accompanied with Tempeſts from April to September, which occaſions Inundations, and do a great deal of miſchief. During the other ſix Months the Weather is fair, and cooled by the North-Eaſt Wind; but in December, January, and February, the Mornings are miſty and cold: yet in December, when the Days are ſhorteſt, they have the

Sun

Sun from half an hour after ſix in the Morning to half an hour after five in the Evening. The Days are then fair and clear, but the Nights cold, and this Seaſon is their Harveſt. Bernier ſays, the common People feed chiefly on three or four kinds of Pulſe, Rice, and Butter. Fowls are ſo cheap, that twenty good Pullets may be bought for half a Crown, and Geeſe and Ducks in proportion. Here are abundance of Sheep, Kids, and Pork, which is the chief Food of the Europeans, and they victual their Ships with it. Here's alſo plenty of freſh and ſalt Fiſh. From this abundance, with the Beauty and Good-humour of the Women, it became a common Proverb among the Europeans, that there are an hundred Gates for entring this Kingdom, but none to come out again. Places of Note are,

(1.) Chatigan, which lies in the moſt Eaſterly Iſland of the Ganges, Lat. 22. Long. 88. which Luyts thinks to be the Place that Geographers name Bengal; for he doubts whether there be any ſuch Town, and accordingly 'tis left out in the lateſt Maps. Mr. Fytch ſays, this is the chief Harbour of the Country, but of no farther Note among Travellers.

(2.) Sandiva. Mr. Fytch ſays 'tis one of the moſt fruitful Iſlands in the World, lies 120 miles from Chatigan, and is divided into two Parts by a Channel navigable at High-water. He ſays it abounds with Rice, Pullets, wild Hogs, and fat Kine, and that he bought the latter for 6 s. 3 d. a-piece, four wild Hogs ready dreſſed for 12 s. 6 d. and fat Hens for a Penny a-piece, which the Sellers thought very good Rates.

(3.) Piple, or Pipely, at the Mouth of the Weſt Branch of the Ganges, Lat. 21. Long. 86. it lies in a fine Plain. 'Tis pretty large and populous, but unwalled. The chief Houſes and Pagods have Courts, Galleries, Gardens, and Orchards; but thoſe of the Banians are poor Huts of Clay, like thoſe deſcribed elſewhere, only they are erected higher upon Heaps of Clay, becauſe of the Inundations to which the Town and Country are ſubject in the rainy Months. The River here is ſhallow and full of Shelves, ſo that only ſmall Veſſels come up to the Town, and the Dutch Ships ride at two Leagues diſtance, ſafe enough during the North-Eaſt Wind, but are much expoſed to the South Winds. The Pagans here, as in other Places, think it a Crime to eat or touch any Beaſt that has been killed; for they believe the Metempſychoſis, and live for moſt part on Rice and boiled Fiſh. They waſh in the River Ganges before Meals, and as often as they happen to be touched by any Nation they reckon impure. They worſhip one whom they call The Goddeſs of War, paint her with ſeven Heads armed with Helmets, with fourteen Arms full of Weapons, adorn her, and make Preſents to her for a Month, after which they throw her into the Ganges, which they alſo worſhip, and ſay, ſhe goes to reſt with it. Since the Mahometans became Maſters of this Country, they hinder the Gentiles from burning their Wives with their Husbands. The French and Dutch have Factories here.

(4.) Balaſſor, on the South-ſide of the River Ganga, about eighteen Leagues South-Weſt from Pipely. Schouten ſays, the Engliſh have a good Factory, and moſt of their Ships unlade here, the Harbour being made ſafe by the Cape of Palmiers.

(5.) Hugly, or Ougly. It lies in an Iſland oppoſite to that of Sandiva, Lat. 22. Long. 86. 'Tis a large Town, lies along the ſide of the Weſt Bank of the Ganges. The Streets are wide, abound with rich Warehouſes and Shops, with Goods of all ſorts, eſpecially Silks, fine Cloths, and all the Stuffs of the Indies. The Dutch have a large magnificent Factory here, well fortified, and defended by Cannon and a deep Ditch. It has ſpacious Apartments for the Director and other Officers, Merchants and Servants, and great Warehouſes of Stone. The Engliſh have alſo a Factory here new built, the old one having ſuffered by Inundations. Here are abundance of rich Mahometan Merchants. Bernier ſays, there were 9000 Chriſtians here in his time, and about 25000 in the reſt of the Kingdom. The Portugueſe had a Factory here in Fytch's time, and another in the Neighbourhood, from whence they were expelled by the Moguls becauſe of their Piracy.

(6.) Daca, in an Iſland on the Eaſt-ſide of the Ganges, near the Tropick of Cancer, Lat. 23. Long. 88. 'Tis about a League and an half long on the Banks of the River. The Houſes of the Natives are for moſt part of Canes covered with Earth, but thoſe of the Engliſh and Dutch are more ſolid. Some make it the Capital of Bengal. 'Tis the Seat of a Governour, who has a wooden Palace here.

(7.) Caſembaſſar lies in an Iſland of the Ganges, about 20 Leagues Weſt from Daca. 'Tis the Seat of Engliſh and Dutch Factories. Tavernier ſays, the Dutch export 7000 Bales of Silk per annum from hence; that the Tartar and Mogul Merchants engroſs the reſt, which is 15000 Bales more. This Silk is naturally yellowiſh, but the Natives whiten it with the Aſhes of what they call Adam's Fig-Tree.

(8.) Tanda, on the Eaſt-ſide of the Ganges, a little above, where it divides into Branches under the Tropick of Cancer. Mr. Fytch ſays, 'tis a Place of great Trade in Cotton and Cotton-Cloth. The Neighbourhood abounds with Buffaloes, Tygers, and Wild-Fowl. It was Capital of a Kingdom, till ſubdued by the Moguls. The Natives are Pagans, and go naked all but their Privities.

(9.) Malda, fifteen Leagues North-Eaſt from Tanda. Luyts ſays, 'tis a large trading Town, and the Seat of an Engliſh Factory.

(10.) Patna, or Patenaw, on the Weſt-ſide of the Ganges, Lat. 26. Long. 84. is a large City, was Capital of a Kingdom, is rich, the Reſidence of a Governour, and of Engliſh and Dutch Factories. The latter trade chiefly in Saltpetre. The Natives deal moſt in Cotton, Cotton-Cloth, Sugar, and Opium. Gold is alſo found in the Neighbourhood, and the adjacent Country abounds with Corn, Rice, Sugar, Ginger, Long Pepper, Silk, Fruit, and particularly Ananas.

(11.) Benares, lies on the North-ſide of the Ganges, 25 Leagues North-Weſt from Patna. Tavernier ſays, 'tis a large handſome City. The Houſes are of Brick and Stone, and higher than any where elſe in India. It has a great Trade in Calicoes and Silks, which the Workmen dare not ſell till ſealed with the King's Seal. It has one of the fineſt Idol Temples in the Indies, and Mahometan Sepulchres of fine Architecture. Luyts ſays, 'tis the Seat of an Indian Univerſity for Mathematicks and other Sciences, and a Language peculiar to the Prieſts. At the Indian Temple here the Brahmans fill Pots with the Water of the Ganges, which their Chief Prieſt covers with a fine Piece of Callico of a flame Colour, ſeals them up, and then the Brahmans travel with them three or four hundred Leagues up the Country, where they ſell the Water at vaſt Prices, becauſe the Idolaters think they obtain Pardon by drinking it; ſo that at Weddings, and other Feſtivals, they commoly lay out 500 Crowns on this Water. For the ſumptuous Structure and immenſe Riches of this Idol-Temple, we refer to Tavernier, who is very particular in the Account of their Worſhip, and the rich Ornaments of Diamonds, and other Jewels with which they deck their Idols. He adds, that eighteen Days Journey further North, the Country is mountainous, but ſometimes opens into large Plains, that abound with Corn, and breed ſuch vaſt Numbers of Elephants, that they deſtroy their Harveſts, and are very troubleſome to Caravans, unleſs frighted away with Fire-Arms.

(12.) Halabas, at the Conflux of the Gemna and Ganges, 27 Leagues North-Weſt from Benares. 'Tis an antient City, ſuppoſed to be Pliny's Chryſopaclra.

It was ſubdued by Ecbar the Mogul, who built a Citadel in a Peninſula here, and employed 20000 Men about it for ſeveral years; ſo that Mr. Fytch ſays, 'tis one of the Wonders of the Eaſt. There's an antient Obelisk in it of hard red Stone, ſuppoſed to have been erected by Alexander the Great, or Bacchus. The Royal Palace here is a fair Structure, with Arches underneath, where they keep Pagods, which they aſcribe to Adam and Eve, whoſe Religion they pretend to follow. Here's a wild Fig-Tree, which they call The Tree of Life, and ſay, that it has always ſprung up again when deſtroyed. The Place is frequented on this account by incredible Numbers of Pilgrims, and Faquirs or Prieſts, who, by their ridiculous Penances, obtain great Preſents from the Rich, and, Thevenot ſays, reſemble our Gypſies, carry Arms, rob, and tho ſubſiſted by the Caravans, will ſcarce ſuffer them to reſt at Nights, by their hideous ſinging and preaching, till ſoundly drubbed for it. The Mogul Princes are well pleaſed, when ſuch of them as commit Violences are killed, for by the Orders of their Superiors they ſometimes lay whole Provinces under Contribution, on pretence of begging. Herbert ſays, 'tis incredible what ſevere Penances ſome of thoſe Faquirs patiently endure; ſuch as to hold their Arms a-croſs behind their Heads as long as they live, by which they loſe the uſe of them; ſometimes they will ſtand on a Stone for Weeks and Months together; others lie in Pits for a conſiderable time; ſome of them never ſleep, but as they lean a-croſs a Rope; and others beat their Heads with great Stones in each Hand, to extort Charity from the Idolaters, who think it meritorious to be liberal to them. The Town is about four Leagues round, and very populous.

The Peninſula beyond the GANGES.

'TIS reckoned the Eaſt Part of India, and from the moſt South Point of the Peninſula of Malacca, to the Frontiers of Tartary on the North is 1440 miles; and the greateſt Breadth, from the Bay of Bengal to the Frontiers of China, 750. It lies betwixt the Equinoctial and North Lat. 25. in the firſt, ſecond, and third Climates; ſo that the ſhorteſt Day in the South is twelve hours, and the longeſt in the North thirteen hours forty five minutes. Some include the Kingdom of Laſſa or Boutan in this Peninſula, but it rather belongs to Tartary; and, according to the Atlas Hiſtorique, is the Reſidence of the Grand Lama: but this Country is ſo little known, that we need ſay no more of it, than what has been already ſaid in our Deſcription of South Tartary. This Peninſula contains,

I. The Kingdom of Aſem or Acham, which has the Kingdom of Boutan on the North, the Mogul's Country on the Weſt, and the Dominions of Ava on the South. Tavernier ſays, 'tis one of the beſt Countries in Aſia, produces all Neceſſaries for Life, has Mines of Gold, Silver, Steel, Lead, and Iron, ſtore of coarſe Silk, and the beſt Gumlacque in Aſia. They ſuffer no Gold to be exported, but make it up in Ingots, which paſs in Trade. They coin their Silver into Pieces about two Shillings value. They have good Grapes, of which, when dry, they make Aquavitæ, but never any Wine. They make their Salt of that green Scum on the top of ſtanding Waters, which is eat by Ducks and Frogs, and likewiſe of the Aſhes of the Leaves of Adam's Fig-Tree, with which alſo they make a Ley, that ſcours the Silk as white as Snow. Places of Note are,

1. Kennerouf, or Guerguon, Lat. 28. Long. 94. 'Tis the Seat of their King, who is Proprietor of all the Mines, in which he employs Slaves, but requires no Subſidies of his other Subjects, who live at eaſe, every one having his Houſe and Ground, and an Elephant to carry his Wives, of whom they have four a-piece, and every one is appointed their Buſineſs to prevent Quarrels. Both Sexes have generally good Complexions, but thoſe in the South Parts are ſwarthy, and troubled with Wens in their Throats. The People go naked all but their Privities, and a Cap on their Heads; and when a Man dies, his Friends bury their Bracelets with him.

2. Azo; some place it in this Kingdom, and others in the Mogul's Dominions, Lat. 25. Long. 88. Here are the Tombs of the Kings, filled with Gold, Silver, and other rich Movables, for the use of their deceased Princes, with whom also they bury their chief Wives, Officers, Elephants, Camels, Hounds, &c. to serve them in the other World; it being their Principle, that those who live wickedly, suffer want in the next Life, unless they be supplied from hence, but that such as were good have all things given them in the other World. Tavernier says, the Invention of Pouder and Guns is claimed by the People of this Country and Boutan, who first communicated them to the Chinese; as to which, the Reader is left to his own Judgment.

3. The Lake of Chamay, Lat. 26. By a River which falls from it into the Ganges, the Moguls are said first to have discovered this Country.

II. The Empire or Kingdom of Ava. Authors differ about its Extent. Some include in it the Kingdoms of Pegu and Siam; others say, it contains only Pegu, Arracan, and Ava Proper; so that there being no Certainty as to its Boundaries, we shall only take notice of its remarkable Provinces and Towns, as we find them in our Map.

1. The Kingdom or Province of Tipra, or Tipoura, lies in the North Part of the Country. Ovington says, it is governed by a Viceroy, or at least by a Prince, who is Tributary to the King of Arracan. Tavernier says, the People are subject to Wens in their Throats, occasioned by their bad Water, and the Country has but sorry Accommodation for Strangers. They ride on Oxen as well as Horses, have coarse Gold and Silk, which all belongs to the King, who requires nothing else of his Subjects, but that all who are not of the prime Nobility should work a Week once per annum in his Mines or Silk-works. He sends his Gold and Silk to China, from whence he has Silver in return.

2. The Kingdom or Province of Arracan, lies South from Tipra, on the East-side of the Bay of Bengal. Some call it the Empire of Mogo, because of their King's late Conquest over the King of Pegu, whose Vassal he formerly was. Ovington says, the Inhabitants affect those Shapes and Features that other Nations despise, as broad and flat Foreheads, for which end they bind a Plate of Lead hard upon the Childrens Foreheads as soon as born, and don't remove it till the end be answered. Their Nostrils are large, their Eyes small but quick, and their Ears hang as low as their Shoulders. They love dark Purple for the Colour of their Habits, have plenty of Provisions, yet mix their best Dishes with Rats, Mice, and Serpents. They eat no Fish till rotten, beat the Back-Bones, with the rotten Fish upon them, into a Pap, dry, powder it, and spread it on their Victuals. At Feasts they affect multitudes of small Dishes, that every one may take what they please. They use Rice for Bread. They have Priests of three Orders, who wear yellow, shave their Heads, and go uncovered, except the highest Order, who have a yellow Mitre. They vow a single Life, and if they marry, are degraded. Some of them live in Cloisters, and here are also Hermits, much esteemed by the Mob; but tho they pretend to Virtue and Modesty, they commit Sodomy with the Youth, whom they keep about them as Scholars. When the Natives are sick, they send for those Priests, who blow upon them, say certain Prayers, and make them offer Sacrifices of Fowl, &c. according to their Ability, on which the Priests and their Relations feast with Musick, and all sorts of Jollitry. If the Patient recovers, 'tis ascribed to the effect of these Fooleries; and if not, the Priests tell the Relations, that their Sacrifices are accepted, but God designs the Patient a greater Favour in the other World, and they think it Charity to drown those who are thought incurable. They make dreadful Howlings at their Burials, burn the Corps, and believe Transmigration; and therefore adorn the Coffins with the Figures of such Creatures as they think noblest: Wood being scarce, the Poor throw their Corps into Rivers, which makes them very unwholesome. Every Family has a domestick Idol by whom they swear, and make his Mark with a burnt Iron on their Arms, Sides, or Shoulders. They offer him part of their Provisions before they eat. Besides these Family-Idols, they have multitudes of common ones in their Temples, that are built like Steeples. They send also Provisions to those Idols, and clothe them in Winter, to prevent their catching Cold, which they think meritorious. They have an annual Festival in remembrance of the Dead, when they carry one of their Idols in Procession in a heavy Chariot, attended by ninety Priests in yellow Sattin, and many of the poor Bigots throw themselves under the Chariot-Wheels, or tear their Flesh with Iron Hooks fastened to the Chariot on purpose, besprinkle the Idol with their Blood, and hang up those Hooks in their Temples as sacred Relicks. Schouten says, the Natives are so brutish, that they scorn to marry a Virgin; so that they expose their Daughters to lewd Seamen, and she that has a big Belly, is soonest married. All those of Note keep Concubines and dancing Wenches. He adds, that there are many populous Cities, Towns, and Villages in this Kingdom. Some of the Towns are so crouded, that one is scarce able to pass the Streets. He ascribes this to their Polygamy, and to their avoiding War and Sea-Voyages; for if they think their Enemies too strong, they retire to Fastnesses, and leave their Country to be plundered. Their longest Voyages are, when they make war with their Ships against their Neighbours of Bengal or Pegu. Their Houses are slight, made up of Palm-Tree Branches or Canes, and covered with Coco-Leaves. They stand upon Pillars, because every Night the Ground is covered with a Fog, which disperses at Sun-rising. Their Houses are seldom above five or six foot high, but those of Quality have numerous and convenient Apartments. Their Beds are Mats or Tapestry, and they use Cotton Cloths instead of Sheets and Coverlids. The Country is fruitful, abounds with Orchards and Gardens, with all the usual Fruit of the Indies. They have all sorts of Corn except Wheat and Rye. Their ordinary Drink is a Liquor tapped from Trees, that resemble our Palms. The Colour is like Whey, it is as sweet as Sugar, and being drank in a day's time is very good, but in three or four days turns sour as Vinegar. 'Tis sold both in publick and private Houses to Travellers, who have five or six Pints for Two Pence. Their Winter lasts from April to October, is very rainy, and sometimes so tempestuous, that there's no travelling the Streets or Roads, the Soil being of a deep Clay. Their Summer is very charming, and their Woods, Fields, and Gardens are verdant all the Year.

Ovington says, their King is as powerful as most of the East, and has made large Conquests in Bengal and Pegu. He has twelve Princes, that have noble Palaces in his chief Cities, and are allowed the Titles of Kings. His own Titles are, Emperor of Arracan, Possessor of the white Elephant, rightful Heir of Pegu and Brama, and Lord of the twelve Kings, who lay the Hair of their Heads under the Sole of his Feet. He resides commonly at Arracan, and makes a Progress in Summer by Water to Orietan, attended by his Nobility in Boats, so artfully contrived, that the whole resembles a floating Palace. Each of his Governours is obliged to keep him a Seraglio for twelve Girls, chosen every Year among those born in his Precinct. They are maintained at the King's Charge till twelve Years of Age, when they are brought to Court. The King chuses which he likes, and gives the rest to his Courtiers; but to preserve the Royal Blood unmixed, he is always obliged to marry his eldest Sister. Schouten says, he is more reverenced than any Prince in the World, and that when he gave Audience to the Deputies of the Dutch East-India Company, where Schouten was present, they were brought to Court in great State upon Elephants, and obliged to prostrate their Faces to the Ground, without daring to look directly upon him. He was clad in Scarlet, and had a Turbant, adorned with the richest Diamonds and other Jewels. He shews himself once every five years to his Subjects, when all between eighteen and sixty are summoned to Arracan, on penalty of ten Pence; but few go except for their Pleasure, the Fine is so small. All the Places about the Palace are filled with Scaffolds and Amphitheatres. Guards are placed to prevent Disorders. Then he comes out of the Palace, sitting in a rich Tent on the Back of a stately Elephant, in the most sumptuous Apparel that Asia can afford. The Courtiers follow him, according to their Ranks, on Elephants, whose Harness is embroidered with Diamonds, &c. and thus he makes a Procession thro the chief Streets of the City, and returns to the great Square, where the Subjects renew their Oaths of Fidelity, and the whole is concluded with Musick, Peals of Ordnance and Fire-works, in which they exceed all the other Indians. At other times none must dare to look upon him, but those who hold the chief Posts of State. Places of Note are,

(1.) Arracan the Capital, Lat. 21. Long. 92. Ovington says, it lies in a Valley on a River of the same Name, is fifteen miles round, encompassed with craggy Mountains, cut by Art into Fortifications. The Gates are hewn out of the Rocks, and defended by Bulwarks, so that 'tis impregnable. There's also a strong Castle within the City, which was besieged in vain by the King of Brama with 300000 Men and 40000 Elephants. The City is well watered by Streams from the River, which afterwards unite, and fall into the Bay of Bengal in Lat. 20. The common Houses are mean, built with Bamboo-Canes, but the Princes and Nobilitys are of a different Wood, richly carved, and gilt within. The Palace is very large, supported with great tall Pillars, and covered with Plates of Gold. The Apartments are built with the most odoriferous and precious Wood in the East, and those of the King and his Concubines distinguished by gilt Roofs and Turrets in form of Steeples. In the Centre of the Palace there's a large Hall, overlaid with Gold from top to bottom within, and there's a Canopy of massy Gold, with a hundred large Wedges of the same Metal round it in form of Sugar-Loaves, weighing forty Pounds each. Here are also seven Idols of massy Gold, as high as a Man; the Plate is two Inches thick, and they are adorned with the richest and largest Jewels. In the middle of the Hall there's a large Gold Stool, which supports a Cabinet of the same, overlaid with precious Stones. In this Cabinet are laid up the two Caneques, or famous Pendants of Rubies, in form of Pyramids, as long as one's little Finger, and the Circumference of the Base as large as Pullets Eggs. These are mentioned in the King's Titles, and by reason of them he founds a Claim of Dominion over the neighbouring Princes, which has occasioned a great deal of Bloodshed. In another Apartment there's a Statue of the King of Brama, who was murdered by his Subjects, is reputed a Saint, and miraculous Cures are ascribed to his Relicks. There are 600 Idol Temples, and 160000 Inhabitants, besides Foreigners, in this City; which, Schouten says, is almost as large as Amsterdam, but much more populous, and its Suburbs extend some Leagues in length. There are fine Stables about the Palace for the King's Elephants, Horses, Lions, Tygers, and Rhinoceroses. Near the Palace there's a great Lake, with many Islands, inhabited by Priests, and frequented by a great number of Boats. 'Tis encompassed with a Bank, by cutting which, the Court may in case of Necessity, overflow the City, and retire to the Islands. Schouten says, many of the Streets are full of Shops, with the richest Goods in Asia. The Dutch have a Factory in the Neighbourhood, and, Schouten says, that he and others sailed with their Pleasure-Boat into the neighbouring Country, which is admirably diversified with Mountains, Towns, Villages, Fields of Rice and Grass, intermixed with Ponds of good Water, and numerous Flocks of great and small Cattel. At Bandel, a neighbouring City, there are vast Stables for Elephants of all sizes, belonging to the King, some of them valued at several thousands of Roupies.

(2.) Orietan. 'Tis not in our Maps, but Ovington places it on a Branch of the River, North from Arracan; says, 'tis frequented by Merchants from most Parts of the East, and governed by a Viceroy, with the Title of a King, who receives a Crown from the King himself. The Banks of the River, betwixt the two Cities, are so shaded by tall Trees, that Travellers sail as if they were under an Arbour, and their Pleasure is much augmented by the great Numbers of Apes and Peacocks, which skip from Tree to Tree. In the Neighbourhood there's a fortified Mountain, called Maum, where Prisoners of State are kept under strong Guards, and have their Heels cut off to prevent their Escape. Here's also another Mountain, with the Image of their chief Idol placed on its top, and the King of Arracan comes hither once a year to worship. Ovington mentions Debazi, a City, with a good Harbour and Trade in this Country, but 'tis not in our Maps. He says it lies on a Stream, which runs South from Arracan.

III. The

III. The Kingdom of Ava Proper, lies almoſt Eaſt from Arracan. The Metropolis of the ſame Name lies on the Eaſt-ſide of the River Ava or Menamkiore, Lat. 21. Long. 96. is about five Leagues round, governed by a Deputy, and has a great Trade in Jewels and Musk, and the Country abounds with Mines of Silver, Copper, and Lead, and has ſtore of Elephants and Horſes.

IV. The Kingdom of Pegu, lies South from that of Ava, and was once ſo large, that 'twas reckoned equal to the Empire of China, and had many Tributary Kings under it. Vincent le Blanc's Account of its former Power and Riches looks like a Romance, and that of the Sanſons is not much better; for they ſay, that about an hundred years ago the King of Pegu raiſed an Army of a Million of Foot, 200000 Horſe, 5000 Elephants, and 3000 Camels againſt the King of Siam, to take two white Elephants from him, and for the like reaſon the Kings of Arracan and Tangu made war on Pegu. Ovington ſays, Pegu Proper lies along the Bay of Bengal, from Cape Negroilles in Lat. 17. to the City of Tavay in Lat. 13. but its Limits are uncertain, according as their Prince or his Neighbours extend or keep their Conqueſts. The Soil is watered with ſeveral Rivers, which come from the Lake Chamay, and its Neighbourhood, one of them runs above 600 miles, before it falls into the Bay of Bengal, and fructifies the Country by overflowing it, as the Nile does Egypt. It abounds with Rice, but the principal Wealth is from their Rubies, Topazes, Saphirs, and Amethiſts; in which Ovington is very particular, and gives an Account of their Sorts and Values, and of the Opinions of Authors as to their Virtues. He ſays, the People are tawny, and debauched to the higheſt degree. The Women have no Modeſty, go almoſt quite naked, and ſcarce cover their Privities. They pretend that they were enjoined to go ſo by one of their Queens, to excite the Deſires of their Men, and divert them from Sodomy. They turn off their Wives upon any Diſguſt, and expoſe them and their Daughters to Strangers for Hire. They live in naſty Huts, together with their Hogs and other Cattel. They worſhip the Devil, as the Author of all Evil, addreſs him, and make Vows to him in their Calamities, and upon Deliverance perform their Vows by the Aſſiſtance of a Prieſt, whom they call, The Devil's Father, and he enjoins them to make Feaſts with Muſick, &c. Some of them run about in a Morning, with a Torch in one hand, and Rice in the other, pretending to give the Devil his Breakfaſt, that he may not hurt them all day; and they throw part of their Victuals over their Shoulders to the Devil, before they eat any themſelves. At Tavay they repleniſh their Houſes with Victuals, and leave them to the Devils for three Months, that they may favour them all the reſt of the Year. Here's a ſort of Monks called Talapoins, who preach good moral Doctrine to the People upon the Law of Nature and ſocial Virtues, and endeavour to root out this Devil-Worſhip, but without effect. They live in Woods, and have Cages upon the Trees, becauſe of the wild Beaſts. When they come abroad, they call the People to their Lectures by the Sound of a Bell or a Baſon, and are ſo much reſpected, that the brutiſh Mob think it an Honour to drink the Water they waſh their Hands in. Tho theſe Monks be the Scum of the People, they affect great State, wear long Robes with Leather Girdles and Bags for their Alms, on which they ſubſiſt. They ſuffer no Hair to grow on their Bodies, hold an eternal Succeſſion of Worlds without Creation, and a Multiplicity of Gods to govern them; ſay that four, who governed this World, are already dead, the laſt of them about 2000 Years ago, and they ſuddenly expect the fifth, after whoſe Death, they ſay, this World will be burnt, and a new one riſe out of its Aſhes. They believe Tranſmigration of Souls into all ſorts of Creatures, and that then they go to a Place of Torment, next to one which abounds with ſenſual Pleaſures, and at laſt are annihilated, which they reckon the chief Happineſs. They look upon Apes and Crocodiles to be holy Creatures, and ſuch as are devoured by them to be happy. They have five ſolemn Feſtivals per annum to their Idols with different Ceremonies, ſome of which are very pompous, and attended by the King and Court. There's one called the Feaſt of Water, in which the King, Nobles, and People throw Water upon one another, and none can then paſs the Streets, without being wet to the Skin.

The Natives pluck out their Beards with Pincers, blacken their Teeth, and the Inhabitants of that part of the Country, called Brama, which lies next to Tavay, mark their Skins with black Spots, and make Inciſions in their Pudenda, into which they put little Balls of Silver, Braſs, or Lead; they are about the Size of a ſmall Wallnut. The King and Nobles have them of Silver gilt. The King beſtows ſome of thoſe he has worn himſelf upon his Nobles, which is reckon'd a great Favour. Mr. Fytch ſays, the Cuſtom was firſt introduced to reſtrain them from Sodomy, and they have an eaſy way of curing the Inciſions, and take out and put in thoſe Balls at pleaſure. Cauſes are determined here by the contending Parties going with the Judges to a River, where he that dives longeſt under Water carries the Suit. The Temples here are very ſplendid, built in form of a Sugar-Loaf, about the height of an ordinary Church, and ſome of them a quarter of a mile round. They gild them within and without, and fill them with Idols richly gilt. The King has many peculiar to himſelf, with rich Statues of maſſy Gold, Silver, and Braſs, all magnificently adorned. Their chief Temple, to which they go in Pilgrimage, is two days Journey from Pegu. There are four Roads which lead to it, planted with Fruit-Trees on every ſide, and during this ſolemn Feſtival the Roads and Rivers are ſo crouded, that there's ſcarce any travelling by Land or Water. Here are ſtately Apartments for the Prieſts, and Conveniencies for the Pilgrims, who maintain the Prieſts, and give them Preſents in the Pulpits while they preach. None are admitted to Orders till above twenty Years of Age, and they are examined by the Chief Prieſts as to their Proficiency in their way of Learning. When admitted, they are obliged to leave their Friends, and vow Chaſtity, are carried about the Streets on horſeback richly apparelled, with Muſick, &c. to take their leave of the Pomp of the World; and in a few days after are carried about in Litters on Mens Shoulders, attended by their Friends, and then put on the Habit, which is a thin brown Cloth next their Skin, a yellow Cloth doubled many times about their Shoulders, and both faſtened with a broad Girdle. They have a Skin hung by Strings about their Necks, which ſerves for a Cuſhion, and they have an Umbrella to skreen them from the Rain and Sun. The Natives, when the Sun is eclipſed, make a dreadful Noiſe, think it will be devoured by the Conſtellation called the Dragon, and faſt all day to prevent it.

Their Commodities are Wine, made of Rice and Sugar, Camblets, Tapeſtries, and Silk Stuffs. Their Silver and Gold are ſold, as other Commodities, at the Market Price, and the chief Goods imported here are Opium of Cambaya, the painted Cloth of Maſulipatan, the white Cloth of Bengal, red Cotton Yarn, Sandal, China Ware, Camphire, Pepper, Woollen Cloth, Scarlets, Velvets, &c. Linſchotten ſays, here are great Piſmires that fly up to Trees, where they ſuck the Gum, and then make Lack round the Branches as Bees do Wax, which the Owners cut down, and ſell. The King of this Country is by ſome reckon'd the moſt powerful Prince in the Eaſt, next to the Great Mogul, and the Emperor of China. Mr. Fytch ſays, in his time he had 5000 Elephants bred to War, beſides great Numbers of others. He had four white ones, counted ſuch a Rarity, that he waged War upon neighbouring Princes that had any ſuch, to take 'em from them; and gloried more in his Title of King of the White Elephants, than in all the reſt. They were lodg'd in gilded Houſes, fed in Silver Veſſels, carried to the River every day to be waſh'd, with rich Canopies held over them, and Muſick playing before them; and when they came back to the Stables, the Nobles thought it an Honour to waſh their Feet in great Silver Baſins. The King has them ſometimes brought before him, and all the Merchants in Pegu muſt preſent them with half a Ducat each. Thoſe for War have Wooden Caſtles, for holding Soldiers that fight with Guns, Bows, Arrows, and Darts; and the Elephants Upper-Teeth are tipp'd with Iron.

The King appears twice a day in publick, partly for State, and partly to adminiſter Juſtice. The Nobles ſit at a good diſtance on each ſide; and when the King ſpeaks to any one of them, they muſt kneel, lift up their Hands, and bow their Heads. There's a numerous Guard betwixt them and the Crowd; and when Petitioners come for Juſtice, they muſt not ſpeak, but give their Caſe in Writing with Preſents; and if the King does not like it, he returns both. When he goes abroad, he is carried in a ſtately Caſtle on an Elephant's Back, or in a Litter upon Mens Shoulders, with a rich Canopy over his Head, and always well attended by his Nobles and Guards. He maintains ſeveral hundred Concubines in great State. Mr. Frederick ſays, that when he goes to War, he has four ſquare Battels of Elephants, Horſemen, Harquebuſiers, and Pikemen; but their Arms are not good.

Places of Note are,

1. Pegu, on a River of the ſame Name, that falls into the Ava a little before it runs into the Bay of Bengal. The Town lies in Lat. 17. Long. 96. Mandelſloe ſays, 'tis divided into New and Old; the former inhabited by Merchants, and the latter by the King and Court. The Palace, he ſays, is as big as Venice, divided from the City by its Fortifications and a Moat, in which they keep Crocodiles for its farther Security. He keeps eight hundred Elephants within it. Herbert ſays, the City has Stone Walls with Turrets, four large Gates, twelve Poſterns, and a broad deep Ditch. The Streets are long and wide, and planted with Fruit-Trees. Fytch ſays, the Palace has twenty Stone Gates, and abundance of Watch-Towers richly gilt. The Town abounds with all ſorts of Indian Goods; and they have large Magazines, ſo built as to ſecure them from Fire.

Here are ſeveral other conſiderable Towns mention'd by the Sanſons and Bouſſingault; but as they don't appear in our Maps, we paſs them over.

V. The Empire of Siam is divided into Upper and Lower: The Upper or Proper Siam lies Eaſt from Pegu, and Weſt from Laos, and has that call'd the Peninſula of Malacca on the South. The Jeſuits, ſent hither by Lewis XIV. of France in 1685, extend this Country as far North as Lat. 22. They ſay, the Country is woody, and for moſt part untill'd. It abounds with Cotton-Trees, and others, from whence they extract Oils, which mix'd with Plaiſter makes their Walls white, and like poliſh'd Marble. Of the Bark of another Tree they make Paper, but not ſo good as ours. They write on it with China Ink; or ſometimes blacken it, and then write upon it with a kind of Chalk. Their Books conſiſt of one large long Leaf, plaited like a Fan, and they write from top to bottom. Here are alſo Aloes and Cinnamon-Trees, Dying Wood, and ſtore of good Timber for Ships and Houſes. Their chief Fruits are, 1. Large Figs call'd Elephants-Trunks, in Size and Shape like Sauſages. Their Taſte is ſtrong, with a Mixture of Sour and Sweet. 2. Jackes, ſhap'd like Melons, and of a delicate Taſte. 3. Sugar-Canes. 4. Pepper-Trees. 5. Ginſeng, a Plant, ſome of which are in the ſhape of a Man. They are very ſtrengthning, cleanſe the Blood, are cut into Bits, infus'd like Tea, and drank in a Morning faſting. We refer the Curious to the further Account given of theſe Things by the above-mention'd Jeſuits. Here are Mines of Gold, Lead, Tin, Iron, Loadſtone, Agats, Saphires, Chryſtal, Antimony, Emralds, and Tamback, which is a Mixture of Gold and Silver. A Diamond Mine was diſcover'd here; but neglected for want for Encouragement. Here are Elephants, with all the other tame and wild Beaſts of the Indies. The Natives have ſuch an Eſteem for Elephants, that they think them animated by the Souls of Kings and other great Men, becauſe they love Grandeur. The King trains ſome Hundreds of 'em up to War, and has a ſort call'd Elephants of Name, becauſe he gives 'em honourable Titles. Their Teeth are beautiful, and ſo long, that ſome of 'em ſtand about four foot out of their Mouths, and are tipp'd with Silver, Gold, and Copper. They have ſome of a white Fleſh Colour, which they call the King's of Elephants, and the Prince keeps one in his Palace, ſaid to be three hundred Years old, and attended by ſeveral Mandarins. The Jeſuits ſay all ſorts of Birds multiply here exceedingly, becauſe of the Heat of the Climate, and are for moſt part very beautiful. Rice is their principal Grain, which they cultivate in a peculiar manner. Their Wheat is kept for the King's Uſe. The Country is fructified by the Inundations of the River Menam; but the Rice which grows in the Lands that are not over-flow'd is beſt reliſh'd, and moſt durable. The Country abounds with all the Fruits of the Indies; but they moſt value the Arack-Tree, whoſe Fruit is like a great Acorn, of a ſavoury bitter bitter Taſte, and is much chew'd by the Natives, wrapp'd up with Lime of Cockle-Shells in a Betel-Leaf. The Country is much infeſted by Piſmires and Gnats, which ſting People thro their Clothes, Palmer-Worms and Locuſts with ſhining Wings, ſo that by Night they look like ſo many Candles among the Trees. Their Rivers abound alſo with Crocodiles and dangerous Inſects. The French Jeſuits give the following Account of the People:

Their Language and Cuſtoms ſhew them to be a Mixture of different Nations from the Eaſt. They are of a ſmall Stature, and well-proportion'd; but the Women's Breaſts hang as low as their Navel. The Faces of both Sexes are longiſh, broad, and high at the Cheek-Bones, and their Foreheads terminate in a point almoſt as much as their Chins. Their Eyes are ſmall, ſlit a little upward, and the Whites of them generally yelloviſh. They have large Mouths, thick pale Lips, black Teeth, and their Complexion is a coarſe Mixture of Brown and Red. Their Noſes are ſhort, and round at the End; their Ears made long by Art; their Hair thick, black, and lank; and both Sexes commonly cut it at the top of their Ears. They think long Nails an Ornament; and their Dancers have artificial Nails of Copper, which makes them look like Harpies. Unmarried Women cut their Hair cloſe on their Crowns, pull out a ſmall Circle, and let the reſt grow down to their Shoulders. They uſe Perfumes, and bathe often, eſpecially when they viſit; and then mark their Breaſts with a piece of Chalk, to ſignify that they are juſt come from the Bath. The Men pluck out the Hair of their Beards, tho naturally they have but little. They are very plain in their Furniture and Diet, live very well on Rice and Fiſh for a Half-penny a Day. Their Arack is about three Pence a Pint. Their chief Sauce is a little Water and Spices, Garlick and Herbs, or rotten Crayfiſh. They uſe the Oil of Cocoa-Nuts; and moſt of their Milk is that of She-Buffaloes: But their Climate is too hot for Butter or Cheeſe. They rarely eat any Fleſh, except the Guts of Birds and Beaſts; roaſt no Meat but Inſects and Pigs-Fleſh, which they give to their Sick: But Strangers are allow'd to eat what they pleaſe. Their ordinary Diſeaſes are Coughs, Quinſies, and Rheumatiſms, occaſion'd by their great and long Rains. They have alſo Cankers, Impoſthumes, Fiſtula's, and Eriſypela's are ſo common, as ſcarce one in twenty eſcapes 'em. The Small Pox makes the greateſt havock; and they bury thoſe who die of that Diſtemper three Years before they burn them, and alledge, if they open the Graves ſooner, the Contagion would ſpread. They have likewiſe dangerous Burning Fevers and Dyſenteries, which prove moſt fatal to Europeans. Their Females are marriageable at Twelve, and ſeldom bear after Forty. They don't ſuffer Converſe betwixt the young Men and Maids. The Matches are made by Parents or other Relations; and they conſult Soothſayers, to know whether the Match will be happy, and if the Man be rich; for every one conceals their Wealth, becauſe of the Oppreſſion of their Magiſtrates. If the Anſwer be favourable, the Match is ſoon made; and after the third Viſit they may bed when they pleaſe. Some Days after the Prieſt ſprinkles them with Holy Water, ſays Prayers, and the Solemnity is concluded with Feaſting, Dancing, and Preſents from their Relations. The greateſt Portion here is about 1200 l. Sterling, and the Bridegroom's Eſtate muſt equal it. They have generally but one Wife; but the Rich are allow'd more. A Man may marry two Siſters, either together or ſucceſſively. The King is allow'd to marry his own Daughter, as well as his Siſter; becauſe they think he can't have a ſuitable Match out of the Family. Husbands may ſell all their Wives and Children, except the chief Wife; and her he may divorce, but muſt reſtore her Portion, divide the Children with her, and allow her the odd one, if there be any. They may then marry again, and ſell their Children. But this is ſeldom practiſed, except by the meaner ſort. Widows may alſo ſell their Children, but not the even Number without the Conſent of their Husband's Relations. We cannot inſiſt on their Cuſtums, on which the Jeſuits are very large. Their Houſes are ſmall, made up of Hurdles of Cleft-Bamboos, ſet upon Piles thirteen Foot high, becauſe of Inundations, with Ladders of Bamboo to aſcend them. Their Stables and Cow-Houſes are of the ſame Height, and the Cattel go up to them by Hurdles. Their Hearths are Baskets full of Earth before the Houſes, ſupported by Pillars. The great Courtiers have Houſes of Timber, where none lodge but themſelves, and their principal Wives and Children, the reſt having Apartments of Bamboo in the ſame Incloſure. Some of the King's Palaces and their Temples are of Brick, but mean. Their chief Splendor conſiſts in the Degrees of the Roofs, and the Number of Stairs from one Apartment to another, all in a Line. The Palace has ſeven Stairs and Roofs, one above another, and the Houſes of the Nobility have three, the higheſt being always reckon'd moſt honourable. Their Tables are like the Head of a Drum, with a Ledge, but no Feet; and being varniſh'd, are eaſily clean'd with hot Water. Their Meat is ſent up ready cut in Morſels; and they uſe no Linen, Knives, Forks, or Spoons. Their Veſſels are of China, common Earthen Ware, or Copper; for none muſt have Plate without the King's Leave, and as a Badge of their Offices. Their Bed and Seats are Mats of Bulruſhes; but the richer ſort have them of Cotton-Wool. Their Sleeping-Rooms are diſtinguiſh'd by Curtains; and thoſe of the Palace have Rods of Gold, and the Bedſted-Poſts and Bottom of the ſame Metal. They have ſmall bitter Grapes, but no Wine. Their ordinary Drink is Water, and their principal Treat, Tea; but they are greedy of Wine, tho prohibited, and fond of Aquavitæ and Punch made by the Europeans.

They diſtinguiſh the Year into three Seaſons, and begin at the firſt Day of the Moon in November or December. Their Months conſiſt of thirty Days, and they call them by the Name of the Firſt, Second, &c. The two firſt Months, which anſwer for moſt part to our December and January, are their Winter; the three next their little Summer; and the ſeven others their great one. Their Winter is as hot and dry as our Summer. Their Summer is rainy; and the Sun drawing the Clouds after it, and the Wind perpetually blowing from one of the Poles, when the Sun is toward the other, makes their Country habitable, which muſt otherwiſe be a Deſart. They know nothing of the Syſtem of the World; think Eclipſes to be Dragons attempting to devour the Sun and Moon, and make a great noiſe with Kettles, &c. to prevent it. They think the Earth to be ſquare, divided into four habitable Parts, ſeparated by the Sea; that the Arch of the Heavens reſts on its Extremities; and that the Sun, Moon, and Stars, turn round a pyramidal Mountain, which occaſion Day and Night. We refer to the Jeſuits for the Diviſions, Revenues, Forces, Religion, and Government of the Kingdom, in which they are very large. Their Talapoins, or Prieſts, teach much the ſame Doctrine with thoſe of Pegu or Ava. They are groſs Idolaters. Their chief Idol is Sommonacoddom their Legiſlator; and next to him they worſhip the King, whom they fancy to be as great as God: And when he goes abroad, all Doors and Windows muſt be ſhut, and the People keep in their Ground-Rooms, that none may be higher than he.

Places of Note are,

1. Siam, alias Judia, India, or Odia, Lat. 14. Long. 100. on the River Menam, about twenty Leagues North from the Bay of Siam. Tavernier ſays, 'tis three Leagues round, encompaſs'd with a Wall, and the Seat of their King, who is Vaſſal to the Emperor of China. Canals are drawn from the River thro moſt of the Streets, many of which are over-flow'd during the rainy Seaſon, ſo that they go from Houſe to Houſe in Boats; and in the dry Seaſon have Bridges of Brick or Hurdles over their Canals. The River here is about two Musket-ſhot broad, and deep enough for Veſſels of four hundred Tun; but is infeſted with Crocodiles. The Suburbs lie on both Sides the River, and abounds with Palaces and Temples, of which latter there are three hundred in the City, with gilt Steeples or Pyramids. Mr. Frederick ſays, the King's Palace lies on the Bank of the River, is as big as a large City, and impregnable when the River over-flows. Here are kept the Courts of Juſtice. The Dutch Eaſt-India Company have a noble Factory here, built of Stone, with convenient Apartments and Magazines, all moated round. They have a profitable Trade with reſpect to the Iſles of Java and Sumatra. Capt. Saris ſays, here's plenty of the beſt Benjamin, and of the glorious Gems of Pegu, with a vaſt quantity of Silver Bullion imported from Japan; but Reals of Eight are in moſt requeſt, and yield a Fourth profit in Bullion. Broad Stammel-Cloth, Iron Ware, and Looking-Glaſſes, are good Commodities here; and all ſorts of China Ware are much cheaper than at Bantam. Veſſels come hither from Guzuratte in June and July, and the Inhabitants of Coromandel and the Chineſe trade hither with Sattins and Porcellane. Nothing can be more magnificent than the King when he appears in publick, which is generally in November, when the Inundations begin to decreaſe, which they aſcribe to his Influence. He comes out with all his Court in their Riches and Grandeur. His Galley ſhines all over with Gold and precious Stones. He ſits in it upon a Throne of Gold under a Canopy embroider'd with Diamonds. He is follow'd by two hundred Galleys of a prodigious Length, moſt of 'em painted and gilt, with two hundred Rowers a-piece. About ſix Leagues below the City, he and the Chief-Prieſt go alone into a ſmall Boat, where the latter, after ſome Prayers over a Gold Scimiter, preſents it to the King, who ſtrikes the River with it three times, and commands it by his Authority to retire to the Sea. The People lie proſtrate on the Banks during the Ceremony; for the Prieſt makes them believe that 'tis by his Power the Inundation ſtops.

2. Pourcelone, on the ſame River, two hundred and ſeventy Miles North from Siam. The French Jeſuits ſay 'tis a ſtrong and conſiderable City, of great Trade, and had formerly Princes of its own, in whoſe Palace Juſtice is ſtill adminiſter'd.

3. Martaban, on the Bay of Bengal, Lat. 16. Long. 96. Some place it in the Kingdom of Pegu; but 'tis now Capital of a Kingdom ſubject to Siam, which abounds with Corn, Fruit, Oils, Medicinal Herbs, Mines of Gold, Silver, Iron, Lead, and Copper. They have alſo Rubies, Lacque, Benzoin, and make a ſort of black Porcellane Veſſels, much eſteem'd for keeping Liquor. Father Pimenta ſays, it formerly yielded three Harveſts per Ann. But much of it was laid waſte by the Conqueſt of the Siameſe. Ships trade to this Town from Malacca with Pepper, China, Camphora, &c. and make their Returns in Rice. 'Tis well built, populous, and has one of the beſt Havens in the Country, with a free Entrance at all Seaſons.

4. Tenacerim, at the Mouth of a River of the ſame Name, which falls into the Bay of Bengal where there's a vaſt Number of little Iſlands on the Coaſt. 'Tis in Lat. 12. Long. 97. And in the neighbouring Iſland there's another call'd Mergui, which Mr. Frederick ſays is a Place of great Trade in Verzina, Benjamin, Cloves, Nutmegs, Mace, and an excellent Wine called Nypa, diſtill'd from the Flower of a Tree call'd Nypar. 'Tis clear, good for the Stomach, and a certain Remedy for the Venereal Diſeaſe. He ſays, the Tides here carry Boats as ſwift as an Arrow. This Place and Tenacerim is the Road where Ships from Guzuratte arrive in June and July, and Merchants tranſport their Goods from hence over Land to Siam.

5. Ligor, near the Bay of Siam, Lat. 8. Long. 99. noted for a Dutch Factory, which trades hither in Tin and Pepper.

VI. The Peninſula of Malacca, ſuppos'd to be Ptolemy's Cherſoneſus Aurea, lies betwixt Lat. 2, & 8. has the Streights of its own Name on the Weſt, the Bay of Siam on the Eaſt, the Kingdom of Siam on the North, and the Sea on the South; is about three hundred and thirty Miles long, and an hundred and eighty where broadeſt, and divided into ſeveral Kingdoms or Provinces, of which the King of Siam claims the Sovereignty. 'Tis the Staple for all the rich Commodities of Coromandel, Siam, Pegu, Banda, the Malacca's, and other neighbouring Countries and Iſlands, and is frequented by a vaſt Concourſe of foreign Merchants; for all Ships paſſing betwixt Japan, China, Tonquin, Cambodia, Manilho, Siam, and the Coaſt of Coromandel, are oblig'd to paſs the Streights of Malacca, where the Portugueſe formerly exacted Ten per Cent. for every Ship till the Dutch aboliſh'd it. Vaſt Quantities of Tin are brought hither from Ligor, Pera, Queda, Oudjang, and Salang, and tranſported to Coromandel, Bengal, Surat, and Perſia. The Chineſe import hither ſtore of Silk Damasks, Brocado's, Sattins, Porcellane, Musk, Rhubarb, Iron, Salt-Petre, fine Silver, Pearls, Ivory, and Fans, which they exchange for Pepper, Frankincenſe, Stuffs of Camboya, Coral, the Calicoes of Paleacate and Bengal, Cinnabar, Quickſilver, and other Drugs from Camboya; and thoſe of Java import Rice, Oxen, Sheep, Stags Fleſh and Pork. Nieuhoff ſays, the Merchants here were ſo rich in his Time, that they us'd to compute by Bars of Gold, great quantities of which are found near the Rivers and Mountains to the Weſt. The Mahometans who inhabit the Coaſt formerly traded much in

Linen

Linen and Pepper till the Dutch ſettled on the Coaſt of Sumatra. The Coin here was formerly of Tin, and they exchang'd Commodities for Gold and Silver by Weight: But now they have Silver and Gold Coins of about four Shillings and ſix Pence Value. Ships are ſometimes detain'd a great while on this Coaſt, becauſe of the Monſons. The Portugueſe diſcover'd and ſeiz'd it about 1511; but the Dutch drove 'em out in 1641.

The Malayans, or Natives, are tawny. The Men go naked, except a piece of Stuff which they wrap about their Middle, and adorn themſelves with Gold Bracelets and Ear-Rings ſet with precious Stones. The Women wear Silk Clothes, and ſhort Skirts embroider'd with Gold and precious Stones; have long Hair, which they twiſt with Jewels, and anoint with the Oil of Cocoa. They are extravagantly proud, and look for more Reſpect than any other Indian Women. There's a ſort of People here who can ſee nothing by Day, which they ſleep away for moſt part, and do all their Buſineſs in the Night. They are like Europeans in Shape and Complexion: Their Hair inclines to a Yellow, and their Feet turn inwards. Moſt of the Inhabitants are Chriſtians or Mahometans, except a few Pagans and Jews ſettled here for Trade. Moſt of the Natives are Mahometans; and they are in general brave, and Lovers of Poetry.

Schouten ſays, the Coaſts are flat, marſhy, and unwholeſome; that the Inland is full of high Hills and Wilderneſſes, ſo that it produces few Neceſſaries for Life, except what is planted in their Gardens, and ſome Rice and Peaſe among the Mountains; but they are ſupply'd every day with Proviſions from Sumatra and Bengal. They have no European Fruits, but enough of the common Fruits of the Indies, whole Woods of Cocoa, and one call'd the Mourning-Tree, becauſe its Flowers cloſe in the Night: They reſemble Orange-Trees, but are larger, and more fragant. Here's plenty of Aloes-Wood and Benzoin, and a few Cinnamon-Trees, but not ſo good as thoſe of Ceylon. The Country was formerly peſter'd with Tygers and Elephants, which broke into their Houſes by Night, ſo that the Inhabitants were forc'd to ſleep upon Trees; but the Dutch have deſtroy'd moſt of the Beaſts of Prey. The Cattel bred here are few, and lean; but they are ſupply'd from other Countries.

Places of Note are,

1. Queda, in the North part of the Country, Lat. 7. Long. 99. 'Tis Capital of a Kingdom, formerly very populous, and much frequented by Merchants till about 1618, when their King, being a cruel perfidious Tyrant, was taken and carried off with moſt of his People by the King of Achem; ſo that it is only remarkable now for ſome Pulo's or Iſlands on the neighbouring Coaſt. (1.) Lada, Lat. 6. 15. Long. 98. 'Tis about twenty Leagues round, mountainous in ſome Places; and Beaulieu ſays, it produces annually 500000 l. weight of the beſt Pepper in the Indies. We refer to him and Nieuhoff for the manner of cultivating theſe Plants. The Natives when it is green uſe it for Sallads, Confections, and Pickles. Some of it continues white, and yields double the Price of the other; ſo that the Natives waſh off the Skin of the black Pepper, and impoſe it upon Strangers for the other. This Iſland alſo produces Rice, Drugs, Fruits, and Cattel; has excellent Paſturage, is well water'd, and has good Anchorage all round, particularly in a Bay on the Eaſt-ſide, where Ships of two hundred Tun ride ſafely in all Weathers. The Wind here is Weſt, and the Seaſon rainy from the beginning of July to the End of October; and the Needle varies two Degrees and a half North-Weſt. There are three other Iſlands call'd Bouton, five Leagues to the Weſt, encompaſs'd with many ſmall ones, which afford good Maſts and Anchorage all round them.

(2.) Pera, or Perach, on the ſame Coaſt, Lat. 5. Long. 100. It lies at the bottom of a Bay, is Capital of a Kingdom that abounds with Tin, has very high Mountains, thick Woods, and frightful Deſarts with Rhinoceroſſes, wild Elephants, Buffaloes, Tygers, Serpents, and other Monſters. The Rivers here are alſo infeſted by Crocodiles.

(3.) Dingding. Nieuhoff ſays, it lies thirty Leagues North from the Town of Malacca, is mountainous, and cover'd with tall Trees, which have a red Pith, valued for its Beauty by the Indians, who make curious Works of it. This Iſland has ſeveral good Bays, excellent Water, plenty of Fowl and Fiſh, particularly Tortoiſes and Oyſters, which are very good, but ſmall. Here are alſo many wild Boars; but the Coaſt is infeſted with poiſonous Fiſh call'd Sea-Apples and Sea-Qualms, which are dangerous to thoſe who waſh themſelves in the Sea, and cauſe Inflammations wherever they touch. The Dutch have a ſtrong Fort here, with a Governor and a ſmall Gariſon. In the Peninſula are,

2. Malacca Town, which gives Name to it, and lies in Lat. 3. Long. 100. on the Weſt-ſide of a River which divides the Caſtle from the City, and falls with a rapid Stream into the Sea. The Portugueſe took this Place after a ſtout Reſiſtance in 1610. The King fled into the Wilderneſs, and left a great Booty. The Portugueſe built the Caſtle, with five parochial Churches, a great number of Monaſteries, and a noble College for Jeſuits. Xavier is ſaid to have perform'd Miracles here; and the Town was made a Biſhop's See under the Archbiſhop of Goa. The Dutch attack'd it in 1605, and burnt the Portugueſe Fleet with 3000 Men on board, but could not take the Town. The King of Jahor beſieg'd it in vain the next Year with 60000 Men; but the Dutch took it after ſix Months Siege in 1640 with a vaſt Booty, and have ſince fortify'd and ſtock'd the Town with Inhabitants and all other Neceſſaries. The City is large and populous, the Houſes built cloſe, ſeveral of the Streets handſome and ſpacious, and planted on both ſides with Trees. Some of the Houſes are of Stone, and the reſt of Bamboos. The Harbour is one of the beſt in the Indies, and ſafe in all Seaſons. There's a Fort on the Hill near the Church, which commands the Town and Road; and there's a great Fort in an Iſland, gariſon'd commonly by 200 Europeans. The Inhabitants are Dutch, Portugueſe, Chineſe, Moors, and a few Armenians. The Chineſe have the beſt Shops, well ſtock'd with the Produce of their own Country. The Natives live in the Suburbs and Out-parts. The Air is healthful, and the Town well furniſh'd with Fowl, Fiſh, Fruits, Roots, &c. but they have little Fleſh, becauſe Paſturage is ſcarce in the adjacent Country. It lies conveniently for the Dutch Trade to Japan and Batavia, and ſeveral Ships come hither annually from the Engliſh Settlements on the Bay of Bengal with Callicoes, ſlight Silks, Opium, &c. and make profitable Returns in Sugar, Sugar-Candy, Japan-Wood, Canes, Rattans, Benjamin, Long Pepper, and Gold, which is to be had here at reaſonable Rates. The Language of this Place is famous throughout the Eaſt Indies. Nieuhoff ſays, 'tis compos'd of ſelect Words from all the Indian Nations, becauſe the Country is frequented by vaſt Numbers of Foreigners; for which reaſon all that trade hither covet to learn it, it being eaſy to pronounce; and the Dutch have publiſh'd a Dictionary of it for the Uſe of their Factory.

3. Jor, or Ihor, lies about one and twenty Leagues South-eaſt from Malacca on a River, Lat. 2. Long. 102. 'Tis Capital of a Kingdom, and was antiently very magnificent till deſtroy'd by the Portugueſe in 1603. The King built another ſomewhat higher in 1609, towards which the Dutch contributed out of the Spoils they took from the Portugueſe. At the Entrance of the River there are two Iſlands, form'd like Sugar-Loaves, and the Water is ten Fathom deep. The Town is divided into two, is about a League and a half round, and contains about 4000 fighting Men. The Houſes along the River are of Free-Stone, rais'd on Piles eight or ten Foot high, and make a very fine Proſpect. The King is abſolute Proprietor of the Country, and has ſeveral leſſer Princes under him. The Land abounds with Lemons, very large Citrons, and other uſual Fruits of the Indies, ſtore of Pepper, Cinnamon, Buffaloes, Black Cattel, Deer, Wild Boars, and has ſome Sea-Monſters. Nieuhoff ſays, the Inhabitants are naturally brave, but laſcivious; Diſſemblers, and exceſſive proud. They have broad Faces of a light bluiſh Complexion, crooked Noſes, and reckon black Teeth an Ornament. The common People wear only a piece of Stuff before their Privities. The better ſort have Callico Shifts, with a Girdle and Headband of Silk. They paint their Nails yellow, and thoſe of the greateſt Quality wear them longeſt. They wear Poniards at their Sides adorn'd with precious Stones. Half the People are Mahometans, and the other Pagans.

4. Sincapour. It lies on the Southermoſt Point of the Peninſula. Nieuhoff makes it twenty Leagues from Malacca; before the building of which it had a King of its own, and was the chief trading Town on the Coaſt. It gives Name to the neighbouring Straits, which are narrow, rocky, and dangerous. There's a Mountain of the ſame Name, which produces excellent Diamonds; and in the Neighbourhood there's a People call'd Saletes, who live upon fiſhing, keep for the moſt part at Sea with their Families, and are ſubject to the King of Jor.

5. Paha, or Pahang, on the Eaſt-ſide of the Peninſula. 'Tis Capital of a Kingdom, and lies on a River about a League from the Sea. The Town is inhabited only by Nobility, and the Suburbs by the common People. 'Tis fortified with Walls and Baſtions made up of the Trunks of Trees. The Streets are inclos'd on both ſides with Hedges of Reeds, and planted with Cocoes and other Trees; ſo that it reſembles Gardens join'd together. The Houſes are generally of Reed and Straw; but the King's Palace is of Timber. The River is broad, but not navigable, except at high Water. The adjacent Country is low, produces Pepper, Eagle, Sapan, and Kallamback-Wood, coarſe Gold, Camphire, Nutmegs, Mace, Diamonds, and Hogs-Stones, reckon'd greater Antidotes than Bezoar. In the upper Parts of the Country are Elephants. The Inhabitants are Pagans and Mahometans, and reckon'd the erranteſt Cheats in the World. This King, and others of the neighbouring Princes, make frequent Applications to the Dutch for Protection againſt their Enemies.

6. Patana, on the ſame Coaſt, Lat. 6. Long. 100. is Capital of a Kingdom, lies near the Sea, is encompaſs'd on the Land-ſide by Bogs about half a League long, and fortified with high Paliſadoes. The Houſes are pleaſant, and artfully built of Cane and Wood. The Suburbs are long, and have a pleaſant Stream that runs by 'em. The King has a Palace here inclos'd with Paliſadoes. Mandelſloe ſays, the Town contains 10000 fighting Men. They are of a brown Complexion, well ſhap'd, proud, but obliging enough to their Friends. They have an Averſion to ſtrong Drink; have four or five Wives apiece, and as many Concubines as they can maintain; reckon Fornication no Crime, but puniſh Adultery ſeverely. The Mahometans have a ſtately Moſque, and the Pagans ſeveral Temples with monſtrous Idols. Nieuhoff ſays, the richer Inhabitants affect great Trains of Servants, are lazy, luſtful, and wear Bells in their Privities to check their Inclinations to Sodomy. They hire out their Daughters and female Slaves to Strangers for ſo much per Month, and the Nobility make great Profit of this infamous Commerce. Nieuhoff ſays, the Climate is temperate and wholeſome. The King is able to bring 18000 Men into the Field. The Summer begins in February, continues till the end of October; and during this Seaſon they have a Sea-Wind by Day, and a Land-Wind by Night. Their Winter is in November, December, and January, when it rains and blows ſo violently from the North-eaſt, that no Ships can ſtir till February. The Country abounds with all the Grain and Fruits of the Indies, beſides ſome tranſplanted from China; and each Month has its peculiar Fruit. Here's ſtore of Pepper, wild and tame Beaſts, and Fowl, Ducks that lay twice a day, and Turtle-Doves with as fine Colours as the beſt Parrots. The wild Hogs do incredible Miſchief to their Fields. They kill as many as they can, but eat none themſelves, nor ſuffer others to do it.

VII. Cambodia, or Camboya Kingdom, lies Eaſt from the Kingdom of Siam, and part of the Bay of that Name; has Laos on the North, Cochinchina on the Eaſt, and the Sea on the South. The greateſt Extent from South to North is about 310 Miles, and the greateſt Breadth Eaſt and Weſt about 211; but 'tis very narrow towards the North. It is water'd by the River Monamcon, which overflows and fructifies the Country, as the Nile does Egypt, riſes in Independent Tartary, and after a Courſe of 960 Miles falls into the Sea by two Mouths. It begins to ſwell the Firſt of June, increaſes by degrees ten or twelve Foot, and in July and Auguſt overflows, ſo that 'tis not navigable. The King is Vaſſal to him of Siam, and can raiſe about 35000 Men. This Country is little known to any Europeans but the Portugueſe, who have the chief Trade here, and exchange Malacca Stuffs for Benzoin, Lacque, Wax, Rice, Braſs, China Veſſels, and Iron. The Country is for the moſt part low and woody, but well furniſh'd with Proviſions, which are very cheap. Camboya, the Capital, lies on a Branch of the River, Lat. 13. Long. 104. It ſtands on a riſing Ground, and conſiſts chiefly of one Street.

VIII. The Kingdom of Laos has Ava and Siam on the Weſt, Tonquin and Cochin-China on the Eaſt, China on the North, and Camboya on the South. 'Tis four hundred and twenty Miles South and North, and an hundred and twenty where broadeſt Eaſt and Weſt. We have no Deſcription of it that can be depended upon.

IX. The Kingdom of Tonquin lies Eaſt of it, has China on the North and Eaſt, and Cochin-China on the South. 'Tis four hundred and twenty Miles South and North, and three hundred where broadeſt Eaſt and Weſt; but is narrow in the South parts. This Kingdom, with thoſe of Laos and Cochin-China, revolted from the Chineſe ſome hundred Years ago; but ſtill retain much of their Language and Cuſtoms. Tavernier having travell'd this Country, and had the Papers of his Brother, who reſided long here at Court, we ſhall chiefly make uſe of his Deſcriptions as what is moſt to be depended on. They ſay the Climate is ſo temperate, that all the Year looks like a continued Spring. They have never any Froſt or Snow, Peſtilence, Gout, Stone, or ſuch other Diſeaſes as are frequent in Europe. The Winds blow from North and South ſix Months ſucceſſively. The firſt refreſhes the Earth: The other blows from January to the end of July. Their two laſt Months are the Seaſons of Rain; and once in ſeven Years, as in other Parts of the Indies, they have terrible Hurricanes, which make dreadful Ravages, but ſeldom laſt above twenty four Hours. They ſay this Kingdom is almoſt as big as France. But the Inhabitants know not Geography or Hiſtory; and affect home ſo much, that little of them was known; and they had no Commerce till found out by the Europeans. They have multitudes of Cities and Towns, and great numbers of their People live upon their Rivers in Boats with their Families. The Country is for the moſt part level, or interſpers'd with little Hills, except on the North, where 'tis mountainous. Here are ſeveral navigable Rivers, the chief of which are Laucan and Chiale, which riſe in Tartary, and after a Courſe of five hundred and forty Miles fall into the Bay of Cochin-China. Here's no Corn nor Wine, but plenty of Rice, which makes their chief Food and Drink. They have good Strong-waters. Their Fruits are excellent, eſpecially that of their Palm-Trees, which is the largeſt in Aſia. They have two ſorts of a Tree call'd Gogaviar, which reſemble Laurels; and both bear excellent Fruit, which are aſtringent before ripe, and the contrary after. The Papager bears a delicious Fruit like a ſmall Melon. The Arager grows as ſtreight as a Maſt, has no Branches, but at top, and bears a Fruit like a Nutmeg. They have Figs like ours; and another call'd Adam's-Figs, as long as one's Finger. Here's one call a Powder-Tree, which they firſt make into Charcoal, and then into Gunpowder. Here are abundance of War or Banian Trees planted in the Roads; ſome of them ſo big, as three thouſand Men may ſtand under them. They bear a Fruit as big as our large Nuts, on which the Rere-Mice feed. They build their Neſts on thoſe Trees, are as big as Pullets, faſten their Claws on the Branches, and have ſeven Claws in each Wing, which are a Foot and a half long; ſo that when ſhot they ſtill hang to the Branches. The Portugueſe prefer them to Pullets. The eatable Birds-Neſts are one of the greateſt Rarities in this Country. They are found only in four Iſlands in the Gulph of Cochin-China. The Birds are as big as Swallows, compoſe their Neſts of a certain Gum or Froth in form of an Onion, with ſeveral Tunicles one upon another. The Natives ſteep them in warm Water, and mix them in all Sauces, to which they give an excellent Reliſh, as if it were a Compound of all the Spices in the Eaſt. Near theſe Iſlands there are five others, which abound with ſuch excellent Tortoiſes, that the Natives uſe them in their chief Treats, make great Profit by pickling and exporting them, and likewiſe of their Shells. The Claim to theſe Iſlands has occaſion'd frequent Wars betwixt thoſe of Tonquin and Cochin-China. Here are all the uſual Fruits of the Indies, particularly Citrons, whoſe Juice is ſo ſour, that they uſe it inſtead of Aquafortis, and likewiſe for dying and whitening Callicoes, and export much to the Mogul's Country. Here are ſuch vaſt Quantities of Silk, that all People wear it; and 'tis one of the chief Commodities which the Dutch carry to Japan. Here's abundance of Sugar; but they eat moſt of the Canes, becauſe they know not how to refine it. Here are no Lions, Aſſes, or Sheep, but abundance of Black Cattel, and Hogs, Tygers, Deer, Apes, and Fowl of moſt ſorts. Their Horſes are well ſhap'd, and their Elephants the nimbleſt and talleſt in Aſia. Here are no Cats, but a ſort of Dogs which hunt and kill the Rats and Mice, which are large and troubleſome. Here are very few Birds of the Air; but they are mightily infeſted by Swarms of Gnats Evening and Morning, ſo that they cover their Beds with thin Cloth, and burn Chaff of Rice in a Fire-Shovel a little before they go to Bed, which kills or drives away the Gnats. They are likewiſe infeſted with Swarms of white Emmets, which eat thro their Bales of Silk; and if they touch one's Skin, immediately raiſe Bliſters, which fall again when waſh'd in cold Water. They have a way of preſerving Eggs for two or three Years by making a Paſte of Aſhes and ſtrong Salt-Pickle, in which they wrap them up. Here are no Mines of Gold or Silver; nor do they coin any Money. The chief Riches of the Country is in their Silk and Lignum-Aloes, of which the beſt ſort is worth 1000 Crowns per Pound. The reſt is worth three Crowns, of which they make Cabinets and Beads. The Bigneſs of a Pea of the beſt ſort, thrown into a Chaffin-Diſh of Coals, makes one of the beſt Perfumes in the World.

Tavernier ſays, the Natives are more fair in dealing than the Chineſe. Inſtead of Money they uſe Ingots of Gold from China, from three hundred to ſix hundred Livres apiece, and Bars of Silver from Japan. For ſmall Payments they cut the Bars into little pieces, and weigh them, or uſe Spaniſh Reals. The King is very powerful. When he made War againſt Cochin-China in 1649, Tavernier's Brother, who was preſent, ſays, he raiſed 94000 Foot, 8000 Horſe, 722 Elephants, and had 319 Galleys; but his Soldiers live very miſerably, and are tied to the Employment all their Days. His Captains and Lords of the Court are called Mandarins, and diſpens'd with four Days in a Month to divert themſelves. Here have been ſeveral Revolutions; and they are govern'd by two Kings ſince the laſt Rebellion. The firſt, or King by Succeſſion, call'd Boua, has only the Title, and muſt not ſtir from his Palace but on certain Days, when he is carried through the Streets of his Capital with a Royal Attendance: But the other, who is the General, and called Choua, has all the Power and Authority. The King gives Audience almoſt every day, to judge Appeals; but his Deciſion muſt be ratified by the Choua. The Eunuchs have the moſt Intereſt at Court; and with the Choua appoint which of the King's Sons ſhall ſucceed. The reſt are ſhut up in the Palace, and muſt not ſtir abroad, but when and with ſuch Guards as the Choua pleaſes. He endeavours always to be ſucceeded by his Son; but he is frequently murder'd by his Tutor, who ſets up himſelf. The Kingdom is divided into eight large Provinces, under Governors and other Magiſtrates, from whom there lies an Appeal to Court. Nobility here is attained by War or Learning. The Tonquineſe were formerly Tributaries to the Emperor of China; but now ſend only an Ambaſſador once a Year to do him Homage. They are ſo exact and regular in Juſtice, that, Tavernier ſays, few Nations exceed them. When a Murderer is carried before a Judge, they make him hold a Whiſp of Graſs in his Mouth, to ſhew that he is turn'd a Beaſt. Our Author is very particular in the Coronation and Funeral Pomp of their Kings; for which we refer to him, and ſhall only take notice, That after the Funeral Pomp is done, the Corps is put into a Galley, tranſported to a Deſart, and buried privately by ſix of the chief Eunuchs, who are ſworn never to reveal the Place, leſt the vaſt Treaſures buried with him ſhould be dug up. Several Lords and Ladies of the Court are interr'd with him alive, to ſerve him in the other World.

Our Author ſays, the Tonquineſe are naturally mild and peaceable, have a ſoft pleaſing Tone of Speech, good Memories, and a florid Language, grac'd with ſeveral apt Compariſons. Both Sexes are well-proportion'd, and have an Olive Complexion. Their Faces and Noſes are not ſo flat as the Chineſe. Their Hair is black, and never cut. The Nobility, Men of Law, and Soldiers, tie their Locks about their Necks. The common People tie it in a great Roll a-top of their Heads. They all affect black Teeth and long Nails. The Habit of both Sexes is a long Robe down to the Heels, tied round the Waſte with a Silk Girdle embroider'd with Gold and Silver. The upper Garments of the Soldiers reach to their Knees, and the Breeches to the middle of their Legs; but they have no Shoes or Hoſe. All Handicrafts-Men, except ſuch as are Burghers of the Capital, muſt work three Months in a Year in the King's Palace, and two Months for the great Lords; and ſometimes are oblig'd to lop Trees for the Elephants.

None muſt marry without conſent of the Parents or neareſt of Kin, and a Preſent to the Judge or Governor, before whom they are married, according to their Riches; and they that are not worth an hundred Crowns, pay none. The Men may divorce the Women at pleaſure; but the Husband can't be divorc'd, unleſs upon very notorious Occaſions. As they eat here with two little Sticks, about ſix Inches long, gilt and varniſh'd; when the Man divorces his Wife, he takes one of his own Sticks, and one of hers, and breaks them; after which they take each one half, and ſew it up in a piece of Silk, and then he is oblig'd to reſtore her Portion, and to keep the Children. If a Woman be convicted of Adultery, ſhe is trampled to death by Elephants. None being ſhav'd here but Criminals, they are known preſently if they eſcape, and nail'd to a Croſs.

The common People feed on boil'd Rice, dried Fiſh, or ſalted Eggs, and have no Fleſh but at Feſtivals. Thoſe of Quality have Fiſh and Fleſh every day, cut in pieces as ſmall as a Hazel-Nut, which they take up with their Sticks, and are generally ſilent at Table. They are ſerv'd in little Plates of Lacker'd Wood, brought up in a Voider of the ſame. They waſh their Hands and Faces before, but never after Meals; and their chief Compliment to their Gueſts, is to ask if they have eat their Rice with a good Appetite.

Their Learning conſiſts in Law, Mathematicks, and Aſtronomy; in all which they have good Proficients. They paſs three Degrees before they can acquire Nobility, viz. the Synde, Doucan, and Tanſi. To be a Synde they ſtudy Rhetorick eight Years, when they are ſtrictly examin'd: If found deficient, they are declar'd uncapable of any Office; if approv'd, they are preſented to the King, allow'd the Title of Synde, and may be Notaries, Proctors, and Advocates. To be a Doucan they ſtudy Muſick, Poeſy, and Aſtrology, and undergo the like Tryal. To be a Tanſi they ſtudy Mathematicks five Years, and muſt make their own Inſtruments. They are examined once a Year; and if they fail, are excus'd four Times; but if they be defective the fifth, they are degraded, or admitted only to be Doucans. If they be approv'd, they ſtudy the Characters, Laws, and Cuſtoms of the Chineſe four Years more, when they are examin'd before the King, Court, and the Tanſi's; and ſome of thoſe who perform beſt are, as the King pleaſes, admitted among the latter; for the Candidates are generally three thouſand. Thoſe whom the King chuſes are honour'd with Veſts of Violet Sattin, rank'd among the Nobility, have Villages and Towns aſſign'd them for Maintenance, where they are receiv'd with great Pomp, ſtay three Months, and then retire to Court, to inſtruct themſelves in the Affairs of the Kingdom, and other Things requiſite to qualify them for being Mandarins. Ambaſſadors are choſen from among the Tanſi's.

Their Phyſicians don't ſtudy Books much, but the Qualities of Simples, and how to apply them; and judge of Diſtempers by feeling the Pulſe in ſeveral Places: By that of the right Wriſt they judge of the Lungs; by that of the left, of the Heart; by the Blood-Vein in the right Arm, of the Stomach and Kidneys; by that of the left, of the Liver; by the Pulſes of the right and left Temples, they pretend to judge beſt of the Kidneys; and by the Number of Pulſes in one Reſpiration, they judge of the Cauſe, Seat, and Quality of Diſtempers. The Phyſicians make their own Medicines, which are chiefly Decoctions of Herbs and Roots, ſometimes mix'd with Ginger. The moſt dangerous Diſtemper here is a ſudden Deprivation of Speech, which proves mortal without a ſpeedy Application of Aquavitæ, and ſome Counterpoiſon, as hot as the Patient can drink it. At the ſame time they rub the Patient with a Cloth dipp'd in Aquavitæ boil'd with Ginger, or lay the Patient on a Bed of Girths, four Inches diſtant from one another, and ſweat him with a Chaffin-Diſh fill'd with Frankincenſe till the Pain be gone. They never let blood: And in a Purple-Fever ſometimes apply Fire to the Spots, till they give a Whiff, which they think infallibly evaporates the Poiſon.

Their Religion conſiſts of three Sects: The firſt is that of the Chi-

neſe Philoſopher Confucius. His Followers think the Soul at Death goes into the Air. They worſhip the ſeven Planets, with many other Idols, and offer Sacrifice: But the King and Mandarins worſhip the Heavens. The ſecond is that of Chacabout, who taught them the Doctrine of Tranſmigration, and ten Precepts, much the ſame with the Moral Law, except that which ſets apart a Day for Worſhip. He taught them alſo to renounce the Delights of the World, to ſtudy Knowledge, ſubdue their Paſſions, and follow Meditation. He held ten diſtinct Places of endleſs Joy and Torment after Death, in proportion to their Merits; that thoſe who fail in any Point of the Law, tho they uſe their Endeavours to fulfil it, wander three thouſand Years in different Bodies before they be happy; but thoſe who give perfect Obedience, enter into immediate Bliſs at Death. He was one of the greateſt Impoſtors that ever Aſia beheld, and ſpread his Opinions thro Japan, Siam, and this Country. The third is that of Lanthu, a Chineſe Magician, who they pretend was born of a Virgin that was ſeventy Years with Child of him. He taught the ſame Doctrine as Chacabout; and the better to delude the People, perſuaded the Grandees to build Hoſpitals for the Sick. Their Prieſts are divided into Bonzi's and Says, who are perfect Vagabonds. For the other Particulars of their Idolatry, we refer to Tavernier. They have likewiſe a He and She-Magician, whom they conſult. They pretend the latter correſponds with the Devil, and gives him her own Daughter, the more to oblige him.

The Capital is Kecho, upon the River Chale, Lat. 22. Long. 105. 'Tis ſaid to be twenty Miles round, and contains a Million of People. 'Tis divided by the River, and not fortified. The King has three Palaces of Timber; one three Leagues round, encompaſs'd with high broad Walls, fac'd on both ſides with Brick. Moſt of the Inhabitants have a Brick Oven ſix Foot high in their Yards, to ſave their Goods in caſe of Fire. The Banks of the River, which Dampier ſays is as broad here as the Thames at Lambeth, but fordable in the dry Seaſon, is lin'd with a maſſy Frame of Timber ſeventeen Foot above Water, to prevent Inundations, becauſe the River overflows in June and November. The Engliſh and Dutch have Factories here, which front the River at the North-end of the City. The Vulgar go bare-headed and bare-footed. Their Houſes are of Mud-Wall, divided into two or three Rooms by Canes, and their Furniture mean; but they have always a little Altar and Incenſe-Pot. The richer ſort wear Engliſh Cloth, and affect red and green moſt. The Traders are very civil; but the Mandarins exceſſive proud, the Soldiers inſolent, and the Poor thieviſh. They allow Polygamy, and let out their Daughters for Strumpets. They have no publick Burying-Places, but every one is buried in his own Ground. Perſons of Note have a Wooden Tower erected over their Graves, from whence the Prieſt makes a Speech, and then they burn the Tower. The King maintains about 80000 ſtanding Men, of whom he has always 30000 about him. Moſt of them are Foot, armed with Swords and Hand-Guns four Foot in the Barrel, and no longer in the Bore than a Horſe-Piſtol. The Barrels of the Field-Pieces are ſix or ſeven Foot long, and don't carry above a four-ounce Ball. When they march, one Man carries the Barrel, and another the Carriage. They fight no pitch'd Battels, but only ſkirmiſh with their Enemies. Their Naval Force conſiſts of flat-bottom'd Galleys, from fifty to ſeventy Foot long, and ten or twelve broad. They bear a ſmall Sail, have from ſixteen to twenty four Rowers, and are ſerviceable in Rivers, or near the Coaſt. Juſtice is adminiſter'd here by ſingle Magiſtrates, who try Cauſes without Appeal, and execute Criminals on the Spot. The Streets of the Town are ill pav'd with ſmall Stones. The River falls into the Sea by ſeveral Branches. The Bay is twenty Leagues wide, and forty ſix Fathom where deepeſt. Dampier enter'd the chief Branch of the River at half Flood, when the Water was fourteen Foot and a half at the Bar. The Tide flows up forty ſeven Leagues. The Dutch always anchor at Domea, a Village ſix Leagues up the River. The French have a Factory and a Biſhop at Hean, twenty Miles below the Capital. 'Tis inhabited by ſome Soldiers and Chineſe Merchants; and no Boat is allow'd to paſs without the Governor's Licence. The River is as broad here as the Thames at Graveſend. We have no Deſcription of any other Towns in this Country.

X. Cochin-China has Tonquin on the North, Cambaya on the Weſt, the Bay of Cochin-China on the Eaſt, and the Sea on the South. 'Tis three hundred Miles from North to South, and about an hundred and eighty, where broadeſt, Eaſt and Weſt. The Inhabitants call it Anam, which ſignifies Weſt, becauſe it lies S.W. from China. The Portugueſe gave it the preſent Name. Borri the Jeſuit ſays, the Country is plain, and ſhut up by Mountains on the Weſt, which are inhabited by Savages nam'd Kemois, of the ſame Lineage with the reſt; but live independent, becauſe their Hills are inacceſſible. The Country, tho in the ſame Latitude with India, is not ſo hot. Here are four Seaſons, tho not ſo diſtinct as in Europe. Their Summer is in May, June, and July, and violent hot, the Sun being then in their Zenith. Their Autumn is in September, October, and November, when the Heat ceaſes; and the Air is temperate, becauſe of the continual Rains which fall on the Mountains of the Kemois, and ſo overflows the Country once a Fortnight for three Days at a time, that it looks like a Sea. When theſe Inundations happen, the People rejoice; tho ſometimes they come ſo unexpectedly in the Night, that they drown abundance of Cattel; but their own Houſes are built ſo high, that they themſelves are ſafe, and retire into the upper Rooms. In the Morning they go out in Boats, and take up the drowned Cattel, with which they treat one another. During theſe Inundations they have their greateſt Fairs and Markets, becauſe they can eaſily tranſport Goods from one Town to another: And they have alſo this Advantage by them, that moſt of the Rats which peſter the Rice-Fields are drowned, and ſuch of them as climb up Trees for ſhelter, are ſhook down by the Youth who go out in Boats for that end. Theſe Inundations do ſo much fructify the Soil, that they have three Harveſts of Rice in a Year; ſo that no body works here for Gain, every one having enough to ſubſiſt on. Their Winter is in December, January, and February, when they have cold North Winds and Rains; and their Spring is in March, April, and May. They have the ſame Fruits as in India all the Year round, and abound with Sugar-Canes. They have no European Fruit, but moſt of our Pot-Herbs; of which they have the Seed from Europe, for their own turns all to Leaf. They abound with wild and tame Cattel, and Fowl; and have more plenty of Fiſh, ſays Borri, than ever he ſaw any where elſe. They make a Sauce of Salt-Fiſh ſteep'd in Water, which they barrel up in great Quantities. It taſtes like Muſtard, and whets their Appetite; ſo that they never eat Rice without it. Here are alſo great Quantities of the eatable Birds-Neſts, mention'd in Tonquin, which the King reſerves to himſelf, and ſells many of them to China at great Rates. They reckon it a Sin to eat Milk, becauſe it's the Food of the Young; but eat Cameleons, and other things which we abhor. They have ſuch plenty of Silk, that every body wears it about their ordinary Labour. They have vaſt Woods of Mulberry-Trees, which run up as faſt as our Hemp. Their Silk is ſtronger than that of China, but not ſo fine. They have the fineſt Timber in the World; and among others the Incorruptible Tree, ſo call'd becauſe it never rots under Earth or Water; and is ſo ſolid, that it ſerves them for Anchors. One ſort is black, and another red. They abound in the Mountains, are exceeding high, ſtreight, and ſo big, that two Men can ſcarce fathom 'em. They have alſo Calamba-Trees, reckon'd the beſt Product of the Country, which are engroſs'd by the King. 'Tis ſo fragrant, that one may ſmell it tho buried a Yard and a half under ground. 'Tis ſold here from five to ſixteen Ducats a pound, and in Japan at two hundred, becauſe the King and Nobility there uſe Logs of it for Pillows. The young Trees of this ſort are call'd Eagle-Wood, and every one's Property; which makes the old, nam'd Calamba, ſo ſcarce and dear. Here are ſeveral Mines of precious Metals, eſpecially Gold. The Elephants here are numerous, and much bigger than thoſe of India. The Feet of the Males is half a Yard in diameter, and their Teeth, ſays Borri, four Yards and a half long. He ſays, they are ſo ſtrong, that the Natives faſten a ſort of Scythe to the Front of the Wooden Towers on the Elephants Backs, by which thoſe Animals cut down Trees, and make their way thro the thickeſt Woods.

Borri ſays, the People who live on the Coaſt are of an Olive-colour, but thoſe within Land as white as we. They have flat Noſes, little Eyes, are of a middling Stature, ſtrong, active, naturally courteous, and have a great Command of their Paſſions; are very liberal, never deny Alms or any thing, almoſt, that is ask'd them; but are as apt to ask what they have a mind to, and take it as an Affront to be denied. They permit Strangers the Uſe of their own Laws, Cuſtoms, and Doctrines; do very much reſemble the Chineſe; and have three Degrees of Seats in their Houſes: The firſt is a Mat on the Floor, for common People; the ſecond a low Stool, cover'd with a fine Mat, for the better ſort; and the third a Couch, for thoſe of Quality and their Clergy. The Men, inſtead of Breeches, wrap themſelves in a whole Piece of Stuff, and over it five or ſix long Silk Gowns of ſeveral Colours, curiouſly ſlaſh'd from the Waiſt downward, ſo as all the Colours appear at once. They let their Hair grow to their Heels, wear broad Caps embroider'd with Silk and Gold, and never cut their Hair, Beards, or Nails, becauſe they think Nature deſign'd them for Ornament; only their Mechanicks cut their Nails for conveniency. Men of Learning don't ſlaſh their Gowns ſo much as the reſt: The uppermoſt are of black Damask, with a Stole about their Necks, a blue Silk Handkerchief about their Arms, and they have Caps like Mitres. The Womens Habits are the modeſteſt of any in the Indies: They uncover no part of the Body, even in the hotteſt Weather. Their Hair hangs over their Shoulders down to the Ground. Their Caps are like the Mens. They have five or ſix Petticoats of various Colours: That next their Bodies trails on the Ground, and the reſt are cut half a ſpan ſhorter one than another. Neither Sex wear Shoes or Stockins, but Leather Sandals, which they leave at the Door, where there's always a Pan of Water to waſh their Feet. Both Sexes wear Fans, and never uncover their Heads by way of Salutation, only the Women lift up their Caps ſo as to ſhew their Faces.

They eat croſs-legg'd on the Ground at a ſmall round Table breaſt-high, adorn'd with Silver and Gold, according to their Quality. They often invite their Friends and Neighbours, when every Gueſt has a Table with great Numbers of Diſhes, which they place in Frames made of Sugar-Canes upon the Tables. Inſtead of Wine, they uſe a Liquor diſtill'd from Rice, which the richer ſort mix with Water diſtill'd from Calamba, that gives it a delicate Flavour; and for Digeſtion, they infuſe Tea-Roots in hot Water, which they alſo reckon a Cordial.

Borri ſays, they have ſeveral European Phyſicians; but their own cure many Diſtempers which ours think incurable. They feel the Patient's Pulſe, and immediately pronounce them curable, or not: If the latter, they apply nothing; but if the former, they bargain with the Patient to cure him in ſuch a time; and if they fail, ask nothing. They let Blood with a bit of Porcellane fix'd in a Gooſe-Quill, ſhap'd like the Teeth of a Saw; and when they have done, preſs the Orifice with their Thumb wet in Spittle, which ſoon cloſes it. The Surgeons, he ſays, are Maſters of wonderful Secrets.

They hold the Immortality of the Soul, and future Rewards and Puniſhments; but call the Souls of Men and Devils by the ſame Name, and think they both hurt the Living. They believe Tranſmigration from one Body to another, more or leſs, to be part of the future Reward; and make plentiful Entertainments for the Deceas'd, who they think feed on the immaterial Subſtance of the Proviſions, which they diſtinguiſh from the Accidents of Quantity, &c. They worſhip the Souls of Men reputed holy, and place their Images among the other Idols in their Temples according to their Ranks. Their high Altar is kept empty, with a dark vacant Space behind for the Supreme God, whoſe chief Attribute they reckon Inviſibility; and they only pray the reſt to intercede with him. Borri ſays, he was at Pulucambi here when one of their Governors died; and as he lay on his Death-Bed, a Multitude of arm'd Men made Thruſts in the Air with Scimiters, threw Darts, and fir'd Muſquets in the Palace, and two that were on each ſide of him continually ſtruck the Air about his Mouth with their Scimiters, to hinder the Devils from hurting his departing Soul. This Father adds, that he and his Brethren the Jeſuits made the greateſt Harveſt of Proſelytes in this Country, and confounded the native Aſtrologers, by foretelling an Eclipſe, which they had not done; for which the King, according to Cuſtom, depriv'd them of their Allowance, and made them kneel a whole Day in the Palace with their bare Heads expos'd to the Sun. He tells very odd Stories of their Sorcerers and Prieſts; for which we refer to him, and likewiſe for his

Account

Account of their Incubi and Succubi, and the Devil's walking about in human Shape, and that the rich People are glad their Wives have such Familiars.

He says, the chief Learning is Ethicks, OEconomy, and Politicks, which are taught in their Universities. Their Language is much the same with the Chinese, but softer, more copious in Tones and Accents, and is easy to be learn'd by those who have a musical Ear. The King rewards the Military Men for their Performances with a proportionable Number of Vassals, who are oblig'd to serve them as they do his Majesty; so that instead of Dukes, Marquisses, &c. they are distinguish'd by their Titles of being Masters of an Hundred or Fifty Men, &c. Here are no Judges or Lawyers, but Governors of Provinces or Towns, who hear Causes twice a day, and pronounce Sentence according to the Advice of the Standers-by, which is executed immediately without Appeal. False Witnesses are punish'd according to the Crime of which they accuse others; so that if it be capital, they lose their Lives. Thieves have a Finger cut off for the first and second Offence, an Ear for the third, and their Head for the fourth; and Adulterers are trod to death by Elephants, to whom they read the Sentence. A Man is only allow'd one Wife at a time; but they keep many Concubines out of Grandeur; and a Man is thought covetous, if he don't keep as many as his Estate will maintain. They are chosen by the Wife, and must wait on her. Divorces are not obtain'd here without convicting the accused Party of many Offences. The King is able to raise 80000 Men, and is generally at war with his Neighbours, tho he be tributary to the King of Tonquin. He has always an hundred Galleys neatly gilt, and mounted with Cannon, and speedily mann'd by impressing. Those who serve on board them are well us'd, and their Families provided for in their absence. The Soldiers are arm'd with Musquets, Darts, Scimiters, and light Targets which cover their whole Bodies; but when an Enemy comes with a superior Force, the People set fire to their Houses, and fly to the Mountains with their Effects, till the Enemy retire for want of Subsistence.

The Inhabitants are but sorry Mariners, and only coast along their own Shore: But foreign Merchants come hither with Plate, which they exchange for the Commodities of the Country. They have an annual Fair for about four Months at one of their Ports, where those of China and Japan come with vast Quantites of Plate and Silks, and others sell Trifles here at great Rates, such as Combs, Needles, Bracelets, Glass Pendants, &c. They out-bid one another for such Novelties, are fond of European Clothes, Hats, and Caps, and value Coral above all things else. Here are many Inlets of the Sea, and above sixty convenient Landing-places; but that of most Note, where they hold their Fair, is Faifo, on a Bay, Lat. 16. Long. 106. It has two Inlets by Sea. The King gave leave to the Merchants of China and Japan to build a City here, which is divided into two Parts, each under its own Governor and Laws. There are no other Places of considerable Note. The Portuguese are most favour'd of any Europeans, and the Dutch pass this Way to China and Japan.

CHINA.

THIS Empire has West and East Tartary on the North; Laos, Tonquin, Part of Ava, and Tartary on the West; and the Sea on the South and East. It lies betwixt Lat. 20 & 43. So that the greatest Extent South and North is about 1380 Miles. It extends East and West from Long. 98. to near 123. and the Breadth is about 900 Miles. 'Tis under the second, third, fourth, fifth, and part of the sixth Climates; so that the shortest Day is thirteen Hours and a quarter, and the longest fourteen Hours, and forty five Minutes. The first modern Discoverers of this Country nam'd it Cathay. Their Neighbours called it Chin. The Name, in the Language of the antient Inhabitants, signifies the Middle, because they fancied it lay in the Centre of the World. Father Le Comte, one of the French King's Missionaries, who was here in 1687, takes notice that some Geographers, as Mandelsloe, Heylin, &c. have plac'd it five hundred Leagues too far East. He makes it of a circular Figure, and about four hundred and fifty common Leagues from North to South, and almost as much from East to West; but this does not agree with any of our Maps. He gives the following Accounts of its natural History: The Mountains, which they manure, are for the most part as fruitful as their Plains, and have a light deep Mold. The most barren have all sorts of Trees fit for building; some of which the Emperor reserves for himself, and the Inhabitants have the rest, which they drag to their Rivers, form into Floats, and build Huts upon 'em till all be sold. Others of their Mountains produce Iron, Tin, Brass, Mercury, Gold, and Silver. The Mines of the latter are dangerous and hard to dig, and the Natives having enough of it otherwise, neglect them. Their Gold is so pure, that it needs no refining; and great Quantities of it are found in the Sand and Mud, wash'd down from the Mountains by Torrents. The Natives ascribe miraculous Qualities to many of their Mountains, and tell such Fables of 'em as are not worth insisting on. The Plains are all till'd, without Hedge, Ditch, or scarce a Tree, because they are unwilling to lose an Inch of Ground. Most Provinces have two Harvests in a Year, and betwixt them they have a Crop of Herbs and Pulse. The North and West Provinces bear Wheat, Barley, several Kinds of Millet, and Tobacco, with black and yellow Pease, which they give their Horses. The South Parts are generally low and watery, but fruitful in Rice, which the Natives transplant when two foot high in small Parcels, chequerwise, that the Ears may support one another against the Wind. They have several sorts of excellent Melons. Their Olives are not so good as ours. They have several sorts of a curious Fruit call'd Seze, which tastes like Sugar, and makes good Conserves. There are also several sorts of Oranges; but the sort most valued is no larger than a Billiard-Ball. They are commonly given to sick Persons, being first soften'd by the Fire, and then till'd with Sugar. They make an excellent Syrup for the Lungs, and are sent for Presents to the Indies and elsewhere. Here are Lemons of the size of Walnuts, excellent for Ragoos, and often planted in Boxes to adorn their Courts and Halls. Here's one call'd the Tallow-Tree, whose Rind is divided into three Segments, which open when ripe, and produce white Kernels like Tallow, of which they make Candles; but not having Cotton-Wicks, nor knowing how to refine it, the Smell is noisom, and the Light dim. Here's also a Pepper-Tree different from all others. The Berry is as big as a Pea, grey, streak'd with red, and so offensive to the Head, that they gather but few at a time: When ripe, there's a little black Stone, which they throw away, because too strong and hot. No Place in the World produces more Roots and Pulse, which is the chief Food of the Inhabitants. Here are many remarkable Herbs: The chief of which are, 1. That call'd Petsi; 'tis woolly, and grows under Water. It bears several Heads, which taste like Nuts; and 'tis said to soften Brass, and render it eatable, if put into the Mouth with a piece of the Plant. 2. Tea of several sorts; in the Description of which Le Comte is very particular. But Mr. Cunningham, Fellow of the Royal Society, and Physician to the English at Chusan in this Country, in his Account transmitted to the Royal Society, says, the several sorts mention'd by Le Comte, proceed from one and the same Plant, and only differ in the Soil, and Season of gathering. The Bohea, so call'd from Mountains in Fokien, where it chiefly grows, is the first Bud, gather'd in the beginning of March, and dried in the Shade. The Bing, or Imperial, is the second Growth in April; and the Singlee, or Green Tea, the last in May and June; both dried in Pans over the Fire. That which Le Comte calls Slimy Pease, is the young Buds of the Flowers before they open. The Shrub is an Ever-green, flowers from October to January, and the Seed ripens in September and October; but scarce one in a hundred comes to be fresh and full. Lockyer says, Bohea is not much esteemed by the Natives. The best, he says, smells and tastes well, looks all of a Colour, is very crisp, and opens soonest when infus'd. Small black Leaves, and Dirt among it, are Signs of the worst sort. The best sort of the Green has a fresh and strong Flavour. Our Author advises the Buyer to chew it, and says, the greener the better; or to put the like Quantity of several sorts into different Pots of Water, and that which holds longest of a pale amber Colour is better than that which turns brownish. If fresh Water be put to it till it has quite lost its Strength, and none of the Leaves turn brown, 'tis a sign that 'tis right Imperial. The Leaf is large and loose, makes the Water pale, yields a pleasant Smell; but if it loses its Crispness, will never recover. Nieuhoff says, the Inhabitants plant it upon little Hills three foot asunder; that it grows as high as Rose-Trees, with Leaves of five different Sizes; that the least grow on the top Sprigs, and so bigger and bigger to the lowermost; but the least are most valued. He says, it thrives in spi of Rain or Snow, and has many spreading Roots, which are good fo nothing, tho the Chinese ascribe great Virtues to 'em. 3. Gemsem, or Ginseng, i. e. Man-Plant. The Learned Chinese, says Le Comte, call it the Panacea, and the Medicine that dispenses Immortality. The Root is as thick as half one's little Finger, and twice as long. 'Tis divided into two Branches resembling the Legs of a Man, which occasion'd the Name. It grows in the Shade in a moist Soil, and comes not to perfection in many Years. It's commonly found under a Tree resembling a Sycamore. The Chinese think it the best Cordial in the World. Their Physicians have several Volumes of its Uses and Virtues. Le Comte says, the Taste is a bitter Sweet. It purges the Blood, fortifies the Stomach, quickens the Pulse, excites natural Heat, and augments radical Moisture. They use it in Fainting Fits, and make it into Broths, Electuaries, Lozenges, and Syrups. Nieuhoff thinks it a kind of Mandrake, because it has the same Shape and Virtues, tho 'tis much less in size. 4. The China Root. Nieuhoff says, there's a counterfeit sort, which is commonly brought to Europe, and is not so large nor efficacious as the true; which, they say, is produc'd by Juice that drops from the Pine-Trees, and brings forth an Herb that shoots under ground with knotty Roots like Cocoa-Nuts, but is thinner and softer. 'Tis a sovereign Remedy against the French Pox, Itch, Tremblings, Aches, Gout, weak Stomachs, and the Stone in the Bladder. Lockyer says, the best sort is large, heavy, and sound, without Wormholes. 5. Huchun. Mr. Cunningham says, the Chinese believe it prolongs Life, and turns grey Hairs black, by drinking its Infusion for some time.

The same Author says, they make Salt here by paring off the superficial Earth of the muddy Shores, drying it in the Sun, rubbing it small, throwing it into a Pit, covering it with Salt-Water, draining the same into Jars, and afterwards boiling it. Magaillans says, they have the clearest cleareſt and whiteſt Wax, made on the Branches of certain Trees by Inſects no bigger than Fleas, which lay Eggs on the Trees that turn in the Spring to little Worms. The Owners of the Trees gather this Wax, and make it into Cakes, which are tranſparent. The Inhabitants of Xantung put theſe Worms into large Canes, and ſell them to the adjacent Provinces; where at the beginning of Spring they lay them at the bottom of Trees, from whence they run up to the Boughs, where they penetrate to the Pith, which they purify, and turn into white Wax. They thruſt it up thro the Holes they have made, to the Surface, where it congeals, and is gather'd by the Owners. Here are all the Beaſts and Fowls common to other Parts of the Indies, and a ſort of Bears which the Chineſe and Tartars think a Dainty. Le Comte ſays, here are many Canals and Rivers. There's a Canal in moſt of the Provinces, which glides between Banks built of coarſe Marble with a deep clear Stream. They have many Bridges over 'em, and the middle Arch always ſo high, that Veſſels may paſs under it with their Maſts. In the South Provinces there's one call'd the Great Canal, dug with vaſt Charge, two hundred and forty five Leagues long, and has ſeventy two Sluices, which are ſhut by Night, and open'd by Day. There's another call'd the Royal Canal, which has no Sluices, becauſe the Emperor's Barges are too large to paſs them. Veſſels paſs from one Canal to another by Water-Falls; and where there's none ſuch, they draw their Boats from one to another along ſloaping Banks made on purpoſe. By theſe Canals Goods are brought out of the South Provinces to Pekin; and they ſay, that above a thouſand Barks, from eighty to an hundred Tun, make a Voyage once a Year on the Emperor's Account, beſides a vaſt Number of others belonging to the Subjects. They alſo dig other Canals for Rain, with which they water their Fields in time of Drought; and wherever they find a Spring, keep the Water up with Banks, and turn it into different Streams, as occaſion requires.

Their chief Rivers are, 1. Kiam, i.e. the Son of the Sea. It riſes in the South-weſt Parts, Lat. 26. runs South, and then Eaſt, through the whole Country, till it fall into the Sea, Eaſt of Nankin, Lat. 32. which is ſeven hundred and eighty Miles, beſides Turnings and Windings, or, as Le Comte ſays, in the whole four hundred Leagues. This River divides the Empire into South and North, and is ſo deep, that the Chineſe ſay for a Proverb, The Sea has no Bounds, and Kiam no Bottom. It's half a League wide about Nankin, but its Streams are exceeding rapid and dangerous. It has many Iſles, which yield a great Revenue to the Emperor, and produce Multitudes of Bulruſhes, that ſupply the want of Wood for Fuel. It ſometimes ſwells ſo much, that it carries away ſome of the Iſlands, and forms new ones; ſo that they are meaſur'd every three Years, that the Duties may be augmented or diminiſh'd in proportion. 2. The Hoambo, or Yellow River, ſo call'd, becauſe in great Rains the Water is of that Colour, and always muddy. It riſes in Tartary near the Mogul's Frontiers, runs twice thro the great Wall in the North-weſt Corner of China into Weſt Tartary, returns South again thro the Wall, and then runs Eaſt into the Sea, in Lat. 34. after a Courſe of above eighteen hundred Miles. It us'd to overflow the Country, till great Banks were rais'd to keep it in. The Stream is ſo ſtrong, that Veſſels are tow'd up againſt it by great Numbers of Men. 'Tis not much above half a League over, where broadeſt. The Sailors purge the Water by throwing Allum into it, which ſinks the Mud to the bottom, and makes it drinkable. Le Comte ſays, there's great Numbers of Cataracts in the Rivers of China, ſome of a vaſt Height, which make a noiſe like Thunder. He tells us of one River that is always red like Blood; another in the Province of Sucheu which glitters by Night, as if full of precious Stones, and therefore is call'd the Pearl-River. Near Foming there's one whoſe Water turns blue in Harveſt, when the Inhabitants uſe it to dye that Colour. Near Pangan there's one which will bear no Timber. Near Chingtien there's one whoſe Waters are ſweet-ſcented. The River Kinxa is call'd the Gold River, becauſe Gold is found in its Sands. The River Xo cures ſeveral Diſeaſes; and on the eighteenth Day of the eighth Month there's one riſes with ſuch a high Tide before the City of Hangcheu, that the People repair in Multitudes to ſee this ſtrange Phænomenon, of which their Philoſophers can give no account. In Fokien there's a River whoſe Water is green, and turns Iron into Copper.

Le Comte ſays, they have great Lakes and Ponds in moſt of the Provinces that abound with Fiſh and Salt, which yield a conſiderable Revenue to the Emperor. They have all the Fiſh we have, and ſome peculiar, particularly thoſe call'd Gold and Silver Fiſh, becauſe of their Colour. The great Men keep them for Ornament in their Ponds. They are about the length of one's Finger, and thick in proportion. The Male is of a delicate Red from the Head to the Middle, and from thence to the end of the Tail of a Gold Colour, which exceeds our fineſt Gilding. The Female is white: The Tail like a Noſegay, and with part of its Body ſhines like the fineſt Silver. They are very tender, ſoon kill'd by Heat or Cold, ſtrong Smells, and the Noiſe of Cannon and Thunder. They multiply much, provided Care be taken to ſecure their Eggs, which ſwim on the Water, and are preſerv'd by the Inhabitants in ſmall Veſſels, till hatch'd by the Heat of the Sun; ſo that they are reckon'd Wonders of Nature.

Le Comte adds, that moſt of their Spring-Water is brackiſh, but they purge it with Tea. They have ſeveral Fountains which ebb and flow regularly. Nieuhoff ſays, there are others which riſe hot and cold at a very ſmall diſtance from one another; particularly two near the City Jungchan, which proceed from a Stone reſembling a Man's Noſe, one of whoſe Noſtrils iſſues cold, and the other hot Water. In Xantung there's a Spring which iſſues hot and cold Water alſo at the ſame time, that ſeparate from one another; and therefore is reckon'd a Miracle in Nature. In the City of Lincheng, in the Province of Xenſi, there's a Fountain about five Foot deep, the top of it very cold, and the bottom ſo hot, that one can't touch it. In the Province of Quanſi there's a Spring one half clear, and the other muddy; and if the Waters be mix'd, they preſently ſeparate.

Nieuhoff ſays, that none muſt dig here for Silver or Gold, tho every one has liberty to ſeek for them on the Sides and Banks of Rivers, where they are found in great quantities. Here are excellent Quarries of Stone, and ſome of Marble, with natural Landskips, as if they were drawn by a Pencil. There are ſeveral other ſorts of Stone much valued for Hardneſs and Colour, and ſome like Diamonds in Luſtre. Some, when burnt, yield a Metal fit for Swords and other Arms. Here are ſome precious Stones ſhap'd like Swallows. Here are likewiſe Stone and Earth of admirable Efficacies in many Diſeaſes, and particularly yellow Earth in the Province of Quangſi, which is an excellent Antidote againſt Poiſon. Here's another ſort of Earth as red as Vermilion, and another white as Snow, which the Women uſe for Paint. In ſeveral Places of the Empire they preſs a ſort of Lime from the Bark of a Tree, which is tough like Pitch. They paint their Ships, Houſes, and Utenſils with it, ſo that they ſhine like Glaſs, and Spots are eaſily waſh'd off their Veſſels ſo painted without any damage to the Paint or Colour.

Their Hiſtory, Chronology, Government, Religion, and Cuſtoms.

NO Nation in the World is more vain and fabulous in Pretenſions to Antiquity. In this they out-do the Egyptians; for ſome of their Authors fix the Origin of their Government ſome hundred thouſand Years before the Creation, which the Vulgar ſtill believe; but 'tis rejected by the Learned, ſince it was condemn'd by Confucius. Others carry the Origin of their Government as high as 2952 Years before Chriſt. This all their Learned hold to be probable, and ſome of 'em unqueſtionable. But Father Magaillans, who wrote in 1668, ſays, the moſt prevailing Opinion is, That their Government was founded by a Prince call'd Yao, about 4025 Years ago. This they make an Article of Faith, puniſh thoſe who diſbelieve it as Heretieks, and would put to death any Chriſtian Preacher that ſhould oppoſe it. For this Reaſon the Church of Rome gives her Miſſionaries leave to adhere to the Verſion of the Septuagint, becauſe it agrees better with the Chineſe Computation than the Hebrew. This Opinion of their Antiquity makes the Chineſe inſupportably proud, ſo that they deſpiſe all other People, and repreſent their Country, Statures, and Manners, in ſuch a monſtrous way, as is ſcarce credible. Thus they repreſent one of their neighbouring Nations as ſuch contemptible Dwarfs, that they are forc'd to tie themſelves together in Bundles, for fear of being carried away by Eagles and Kites. Another they repreſent to be all Women, who conceive by looking in a Well, and bring forth none but Girls. They fancy that beſides China there are ſeventy two other Kingdoms, which they paint in the middle of the Sea, like ſo many Nut ſhells, and all their Inhabitants deform'd and ridiculous. Magaillans ſays, that even ſo low as 1668 the Viceroy of Quantum repreſented Europe to his Emperor only as two little Iſlands in the middle of the Sea, and ſo they added it to their Maps. They divide the Heaven into twenty eight Conſtellations, and China into ſo many Quarters, allowing one Conſtellation to each of them, but none to the reſt of the World; and they think no other Nation has any Learning or Hiſtory but themſelves. The firſt of the Emperors they ſpeak of with any Certainty is Foki, who they ſay was born of a Virgin, a good Legiſlator, Aſtrologer, and Inſtitutor of Marriage. Magaillans ſuppoſes, abating for the fabulous Circumſtances, that this might be their firſt Prince, ſince according to their Chronology he began to reign about two hundred Years after the Deluge, if we take the Computation of the Septuagint; and in that ſpace of time Noah's Deſcendants might very well extend themſelves to the North-weſt Part of China, where this Prince is ſaid to have fix'd his Seat.

Nieuhoff, who attended the Dutch Embaſſy hither, ſays, they begin their Hiſtory about A. M. 2207; and ſay that their ſucceeding Kings or Emperors always employ'd ſome of the moſt learned Philoſophers to write the Life of his immediate Predeceſſor without Flattery; and out of theſe Volumes they have made an Extract of their Hiſtory, but are very doubtful themſelves as to what paſs'd before the firſt eight elective Kings, becauſe of the ridiculous Stories relating to the Age of their People, and the Years of their Governments. Nieuhoff gives a very handſome Abſtract of their Hiſtory, and of the different reigning Families, which they ſay laſted till 1278, when the Tartars after ſeventy three Years War ſubdu'd the Empire, and ſet up a new Family, which continued till 1368; when a Prieſt call'd Chen influenc'd the People to rebel, drove out the Tartars, and ſet up himſelf. His Race continued till 1644. Then the Tartars again conquer'd the Country, and ſet up their Great Cham Xunchius, from whom the preſent Emperor is deſcended. We refer to Nieuhoff for a further Account of their Hiſtory, and the laſt Conqueſt of 'em by the Tartars, in which there are many ſurprizing Events. And for the Emperor's State when he gives Audience to Ambaſſadors, we refer to Le Comte and Yſbrant Yles, who are very particular as to the Magnificence of his Palace, Retinue, and Entertainments. They ſay, in ſhort, that it exceeds all the Grandeur to be ſeen in Chriſtendom, tho the Retinues and Apartments of European Princes are much more decent. The Chineſe call their Empire Tien-Hia, i. e. All that is under Heaven; and their Emperor the Holy Son of Heaven, and other flattering Titles. He deifies whom he pleaſes; and out-vies all Heathen Potentates in making Idols, which he and his Subjects adore. When a new Emperor is advanc'd upon the Death of his Predeceſſor, he is carried in a Sedan upon the Shoulders of ſixteen Eunuchs to a great Hall, where being ſeated on a coſtly Throne, an Eunuch cries out, Let the Heavens let fly their Thunder. Then they ſtrike on a great Bell, beat the Palace-Drum, which makes a very loud Noiſe, and ſet all their Muſick playing. During which the Mandarins and other great Men take their Places. Then the Maſter of the Ceremonies, being upon his Knees, tells the Emperor with a loud Voice, That all the Princes of the Blood, &c. are come to pay their Homage. Then all the Company proſtrate themſelves, knock their Foreheads againſt the Ground, and cry out aloud, Ten thouſand Years, ten Millions of Millions of Years. On this occaſion the King wears a yellow Velvet Robe; for the Chineſe ſay, that as Gold is the Queen of Metals, Yellow is the Queen of Colours, and none but the Emperor muſt wear it on pain of Death. Whenever the Emperor appears in publick, it is with all the Splendor that may attract the Reſpect of the People, who adore him as a Deity. He never goes any where without an Army; ſo that there's nothing but Pomp and Riches to be ſeen in his Retinue. His Predeceſſors rarely ſhew'd themſelves to the People; but the preſent Family obſerve a Medium, to pleaſe both the Chineſe and Tartars. When he viſits the Provinces, he commonly rides poſt with ſome truſty Officers, and a few Guards; but Troops are ſo laid every where, that he rides thro an Army. When he goes annually a Tyger-hunting to the Frontiers of Tartary, he is attended by 40000 Horſe, and 3000 of the beſt Tartar Archers, and a Party of Lancers. Thirty or forty Tartar Princes come then to pay him their Homage and Tribute; and tho ſome of them bear the Name of Chams and Emperors, they are always Penſioners, and little more than Mandarins of the firſt Order. Their Attendance makes his Court very ſplendid; and to keep them firm in his Intereſt he matches them to his Daughters, and protects them againſt the Weſt Tartars. But his greateſt Pomp is when he goes to the chief Temple to ſacrifice to Heaven. He appears in his moſt glorious Apparel on horſe-back, his Harneſs cover'd with Gold and precious Stones, and the Umbrella that ſhades him on his Horſe does ſo glitter with Diamonds, that it dazzles one's Eyes. His Guards are numerous; and Hundreds of fine gilt Lanthorns and Flambeaus are carried before him. He is follow'd by the Princes of the Blood, all his Viceroys, 2000 Mandarin Officers, 2000 Commanders of the Army, 500 Youth of Quality, attended by 1000 Footmen in Carnation Silk, richly embroider'd with Stars of Silver and Gold, Triumphant Chariots, &c. He has one ſelect Conſort, call'd his Lawful Wife and Empreſs, and nine others inferior, and thirty more who are call'd his Wives, beſides others that have the Title of Queens. He reſpects thoſe moſt who bring him moſt Children, but eſpecially the Mother of his firſt Son; yet none but the Empreſs ſits with him at Table, and the reſt attend her.

Nieuhoff ſays, the Lives and Fortunes of his Subjects are at his diſpoſal, yet there's ſomething of an Ariſtocracy in the Government; for tho he ratifies every thing, he cannot do it till deſir'd by his Council, nor confer any Poſt till firſt requeſted by one in ſpecial Authority. Nor are his Revenues ſubject to his Diſpoſal, but deliver'd into the Treaſury, from whence he has a Sum paid for his Family Expences; and he is oblig'd by Law to uſe his Power moderately. He diſpoſes of Places for Merit, not for Money, and continues or turns out the Men according to their Behaviour. He taxes his Subjects when he pleaſes, but ſeldom exceeds the ordinary Duties; and tho he has the ſole Right of Peace, War, and Treaties, it is always with a Proviſo that they be not diſhonourable to the Empire. He nominates his Succeſſor; but may afterwards exclude him for good Reaſons, and appoint another with conſent of the Sovereign Court of Pekin. He extends his Authority likewiſe over the Dead, whom he honours or diſgraces, to reward or puniſh their Families, by ordering Temples, or forbidding them to the Anceſtors of Families, as he ſees Cauſe. 'Tis a ſtanding Maxim of their Government, That Kings are properly Fathers of their People, and not Maſters of Slaves. This has been ſo inculcated by their Philoſophers, that if he neglects this Maxim he incurs the Hatred of the Subjects; beſides, every Mandarin has liberty to tell him of his Faults with due Submiſſion: ſo that he finds it his Intereſt to obſerve the Laws, otherwiſe all would run into Confuſion; for in ſuch Caſes every Mandarin thinks himſelf a petty Sovereign. They have another Method that obliges their Emperor to keep a Decorum, which is, That a certain Number of the moſt learned and impartial Men of the Empire are choſen to write an exact Account of the Emperor's Actions as they happen. Theſe they put into an Office, kept on purpoſe, thro a Chink. This Office is never open'd during the Emperor's Life-time, nor while any of his Family are poſſeſs'd of the Throne. But when the Crown goes to another Line, as frequently happens, theſe Memoirs are compar'd and digeſted into a Hiſtory.

He has two Sovereign Councils: The one call'd extraordinary, which conſiſts of Princes of the Blood; the other is compos'd of them and other Miniſters, who examine all Affairs of State, and report to the Emperor, who gives a final Deciſion. There are ſix Sovereign Courts at Pekin, whoſe Authority extends over all the Empire, and they have different Matters aſſign'd them; but the Concurrence of all muſt be had in Matters of importance. The firſt preſides over the Mandarins, and diſpoſes of their Offices; the ſecond ſuperintends the Treaſury; the third takes care of their Laws, Religion, Arts, Sciences, and foreign Affairs; the fourth of their Militia; the fifth of criminal Affairs; and the ſixth of their Palaces, and other publick Buildings. Each of theſe Courts is divided into ſeveral Offices manag'd by Preſidents and Aſſiſtants, who are ſubject to the Preſident of the chief Office, from whom there is no Appeal. The Emperor has a Spy in each of thoſe Courts, to obſerve the Conduct of the Mandarins and Princes of the Blood, of which they are compos'd. There are Courts of the ſame ſort in the Provinces and Towns, which are ſubject to theſe. There are alſo Viceroys in the Provinces, who inſpect the Conduct of the Mandarins, as they do theirs, and have a Liberty to impeach one another. And all Perſons may petition the Emperor, who viſits every Province in Perſon to hear the Complaints of the Subjects, which keeps every thing in good Order; for he has ſo many Spies, that the Faults of Governors can ſcarce be conceal'd. We refer to our Author for a full Account of the moral and political Principles by which this Empire is govern'd. The firſt of which relates to private Families, and enjoins Children ſuch Love and Obedience ro their Parents, that every Father is like a Prince in his Family; and if he accuſe his Children of a Crime, there needs no other Proof, but immediate Puniſhment is inflicted. If a Son mock or lay violent Hands on his Parents, the whole Empire is allarm'd, the Emperor himſelf judges the Criminal, the Mandarins of the Town are turn'd out, the Neighbours are reprov'd for their Neglect of timely Reproof, the Criminal is chopp'd to pieces, his Houſe is burnt, and all about it laid waſte. Nor dare the Emperors themſelves uſe their Parents ill, without incurring the ſame Danger. Some of their political Maxims are, 1. To imploy no Man as a great Officer in his own Province, leſt if of mean Parentage he be deſpis'd, and if otherwiſe he may be prompted to Partiality, Injuſtice, or Rebellion. 2. To educate their Children at Court, as Pledges of their Father's Loyalty. 3. To beſtow Poſts on Merit, not for Money, on Men of good Lives, and skill'd in the Laws, who have ſufficient Salaries, but muſt take no Fees. 4. They allow no hereditary Nobility, nor Diſtinction of Quality but what ariſes from Offices; ſo that the whole Empire, except the Family of Confucius, is divided into Magiſtracy and Commonalty. 5. All Lands here are held in Socage, and oblig'd to pay Contributions, which increaſes Trade; and the Emperor's Revenues, hinder any Family from engroſſing Popularity, and keeps all in ſubjection; and every Man's Eſtate and Family is equitably rated on a Board fix'd over the Door, there being an Officer appointed over every ten Houſes to ſee that it be true. 'Tis not eaſy to compute his Revenue, much of it being paid in Goods, as well as Money; but according to Nieuhoff it amounts to about thirty ſeven Millions Sterling. He ſays, that by the Chineſe Regiſter the Families of the Empire were in his Time 10,090,792, and fighting Men 55,416,476; that the Revenue of Rice from all the Provinces was 32,207,447 Bags, each Bag holding enough to ſerve an hundred Men a day; 4,009,949 Pounds of raw Silk; 7,102,436 Rolls of Hempen Cloth, 36,770 Bales of Cotton; 191,730 Rolls of wrought Silk; 187,688,364 Pounds of Salt; and 32,518,627 Truſſes of Hay and Straw for the Emperor's Stables. Magaillans adds, that beſides theſe Taxes, all ſorts of Fleſh, Fiſh, Fowl, Fruit, Herbs, Oil, Butter, Vinegar, Spice, rich Wines, Strong-waters, Meal, Loaves, and Biskets, are brought to Court as the particular Duties of Tenants and Proprietors of Lands.

We muſt refer to theſe Authors for the Orders, Power, and Habits of the Mandarins, and the Grandeur of the Governors of Provinces and Cities, who live in Palaces, and have Attendants fit for Kings.

As to their antient Religion there's little of it to be known, moſt of their old Writings being deſtroy'd by the laſt Tartar Invaſion. But Nieuhoff ſays, that no Heathen Sect ever maintain'd fewer Errors than the Chineſe, that it appears by their Books they worſhipp'd one God from the firſt, whom they look'd upon to be the Soul of the Heaven and Earth; and they fancied there were ſubordinate Gods under him: But they never broach'd ſuch licentious Doctrines concerning their ſupreme and ſubordinate Gods, as the Greeks, Romans, and Egyptians. Le Comte thinks they deriv'd their Knowledge of God from ſome of Noah's Children, becauſe the firſt Emperors appointed Sacrifices to the Supreme Spirit of Heaven and Earth, and Prieſts to offer them. But they were afterwards corrupted by Idolatry; yet ſtill they retained many good Principles of Morality which ſeem to be deriv'd from thoſe call'd the Noachical Precepts. But there's a vile ſort of Prieſts here call'd Bonzes, that are errant Cheats, delude the People, and get Money and Preſents from them by enduring ſevere Penances; ſuch as dragging long Iron Chains hung to their Necks or Legs, beating their Heads with Brickbats till the Blood trickle down, and at the ſame time commit Murders and other Crimes: But the Mob is ſo much prepoſſeſs'd in their favour, that for moſt part they eſcape the Diligence of the Magiſtrates, who puniſh them ſeverely when their Crimes are prov'd. The Tartars have alſo brought in their Prieſts call'd Lama's among them, who worſhip the ſame Idols, but with different Ceremonies. Here are alſo ſome Mahometans who live peaceably, and content themſelves to propagate their Sect among their own Relations only.

There's a Sect call'd the Learned, which Name began about the Year of Chriſt 1400; when one of their Emperors appointed eighty of their Doctors to conſult their antient Writers, and compoſe a Syſtem, becauſe he found all Learning deſtroy'd by the Civil Wars, Magick, and Idolatry: But they were ſo full of their own idolatrous Notions, that they perverted the Senſe of the Antients, confounded God with Nature, allow'd a licentious Abſtinence from Worſhip, and perſecuted all but Mahometans, which occaſion'd Rebellions, and oblig'd 'em to forbear their Severities; ſo that now they content themſelves to brand others as Hereticks. Their Doctrines are ſo obſcure, that they themſelves don't underſtand them: But they are lik'd by moſt, becauſe they deſtroy all ſorts of Religion; ſo that the Country is now ſwallow'd up in Superſtition, Magick, and Atheiſm.

Nieuhoff ſays, this is the oldeſt Sect here, and the Foundation of it is aſcrib'd to Confucius, who, according to him and Le Comte, ſeems to have been a good-natur'd, prudent, ſubtile Man, much inclin'd to Virtue, and a great Lover of his Country. He was born about 483 Years before our Saviour, ſtudied Antiquity, made a Collection of the beſt Maxims of thoſe Times, taught Men to contemn Riches and Pleaſures, to eſteem Virtue, and improve Reaſon, which he back'd with his own illuſtrious Example. By the Account Le Comte gives of him, he ſeems to have exceeded all other Heathen Philoſophers, and to have had ſome Acquaintance with the Divine Records. Tho he was very much eſteem'd, he met with great Oppoſition, and died of Sorrow when he ſaw that he could not reform the World. His Followers are very much degenerated, differ highly among themſelves; and tho they generally believe there is but one God, they have no Temple, ſettled Form of Worſhip, or Prieſts appointed for him. Some of them think the World ſprung from it ſelf; and that there are no future Rewards or Puniſhments. Others ſay, the Souls of good Men are immortal; and that thoſe of the Wicked vaniſh like Smoke. For the reſt we refer to our Authors.

Here's another Sect call'd the Followers of Laockun, who, they ſay, liv'd before Confucius, wrote ſome good Books about Contempt of the World, &c. and ſeem'd to have ſome dark Notion of the Trinity: but his Followers are brutiſh Magicians. Their Prieſts pretend to caſt the Devil out of Houſes and People, and to cauſe fair Weather and Rain when they pleaſe. They are highly eſteem'd, live in the Royal Temples dedicated to Heaven and Earth, aſſiſt at the Offerings in coſtly Habits, at the Funerals of Grandees, &c. and are ſubject to an hereditary Prelate, who lives at Court, is much honour'd by the Emperor, has a large Revenue, and is carried about in as much Grandeur as the chief Mandarins. Another Sect worſhip an Idol call'd Fo, who, they ſay, was the Son of a King, and blaſphemouſly call him the Saviour of the World. They ſay he gave 'em ten Precepts, which are much the ſame with the moral Law: But at his Death told them all he ſaid was enigmatical; and that the ſole Principle from whence all Things came, and to which they muſt return, is nothing. This produc'd a Sect of Atheiſts: But the Bonzes ſtill keep to his original Errors, viz. That he was born to expiate the Sins of the World, &c. From theſe Sects ſo many others have riſen, that they have overſpread the Country with Idolatry; ſo that every Man has an Idol in his Houſe, beſides what are publick in the Temples and Streets.

Magaillans ſays, their chief Feſtival is on the 15th Day of the firſt Moon of their Year, when they kindle ſo many Bonfires, ſet up ſo many Lanthorns, and play ſuch Multitudes of Fireworks repreſenting Towers, Boats, Fiſh, Dragons, Tygers, Elephants, &c. that the whole Country seems to be in a flame. They are very dextrous in placing their Lanthorns, and Figures within them; so as they represent Horses running, Vessels sailing, Princes with large Trains, Armies marching, &c. And during this Solemnity there are Consorts of Musick every where.

Country

Ysbrand Ides, who saw one of them, says, it lasted three Weeks, and began late at Night with ringing the great Bell in the Royal Palace, beating large Drums, and Volleys of Cannon; upon which People of all Ranks express'd their Joy by Fireworks, and beating of Drums. The idolatrous Priests sounded their Trumpets from innumerable Temples. The Noise was as great till next Day at Noon in the City of Pekin, as if two Armies of 100000 each had been engaged. In the Day-time the Streets were crouded with Processions of numberless Idols, attended by their Priests with Incense-Pots, Strings of Beads, Drums beating, Trumpets sounding, and vast Multitudes of People following; all Shops being shut, and Trade forbid on severe Penalties. The ordinary Women rode about on Asses, the Ladies in Chaises, with their Maids behind singing and piping, tho at other Times they never appear in publick. Le Comte says, the Number of Lanthorns with Illuminations on this Occasion is at least two hundred Millions.

He thinks the Gospel was preach'd here by the Apostle St. Thomas, and some of his Followers; and that it is the more probable, because the Chinese History says, That about those Times there came a Man into the Country, who preach'd Heavenly Doctrine, and confirm'd it by Miracles; and in the Office for St. Thomas's Day, in an antient Chaldee Breviary of the Church of Malabar, the Conversion of China is ascribed to him. There's also an Inscription on an antient Marble Pillar in the Province of Xensi, signifying that a Man from Judea came thither A.C. 636. and planted a Church, and tho the Bonzes raised a great Persecution against the Christians, yet their Religion continued many Years; but when the Jesuits came, they found it quite extinguished. We refer to our Author for the Account of the Conversions by Xavier and other Missionaries, and the Obstacles they have since met with; but his Stories of Miracles derogate much from the Truth of what he says. There was a Book printed at Cologn in 1700. intitled Historia Cultus Sinensium, &c. which gives an Account of the Controversy betwixt the French Apostolical Vicars and the Jesuits, because the latter comply'd with the Pagan Rites and Idolatry in many Instances; and there have been frequent Accounts of the Persecution which those Fathers raised against the late Cardinal Tournon, and other Missionaries, for opposing their Compliance with the Chinese, in worshipping the Pictures of their Ancestors, and making use of their idolatrous Terms in their Devotions.

Nieuhoff says, that notwithstanding all the Chinese Boasts of their Learning, they have very little Insight into the noble Arts and Sciences we have in Europe. They have some Smatterings of Philosophy, but have more obscured the Knowledge of natural things by their Errors, than any ways enlightened it. Their chief Improvement is in Astrology, and that must be very indifferent, since they mark lucky and unlucky Days in their Almanacks. Le Comte says, that they were so ignorant, that they knew nothing of Latitude or Longitude; they thought the Earth was only a vast Superficies extended, and that the Sun and Moon entered into a deep Cave in the West, from whence they rose in the East. He says they have no penetration for the search of Nature, are ignorant of Logick and Geometry, and know little of Anatomy; and tho they pretend to be the Inventors of Musick, their Musicians don't deserve the Name. He adds, that the Multiplicity of their Letters, which are 54409, is one of the chief Causes of their Ignorance, because no Man can understand them all; and he is reckoned very learned that can read 15000 of them. We refer to those Authors for a farther Account of their Language and Way of Writing, which is mostly Hieroglyphical, and represents things to the Imagination very ingeniously.

Le Comte, Nieuhoff, and Lockyer give the following Account of their Shipping, Arts, and Manufactures. They pretend to have had Ships from the remotest Antiquity, and that long before our Saviour's time they sailed over all the Indian Seas, and discovered the Cape of Good Hope; and yet knew nothing of the Variation of the Compass, till taught it by the Europeans. They have Ships of all Rates, but of a different building from ours, which are fit for Rivers, but not so good for Sea. They have multitudes of large flat-bottomed Barks. Those of the Emperor and Governors of Provinces resemble Castles, are divided into Apartments for all Uses of State and Convenience. Their Windows and Doors are made like Grates, have thin Oyster-Shells or fine Linen and Silk, spread with clear Wax instead of Glass. Their Galleries and Insides are finely painted. The Emperor has three hundred sixty five, which carry his Fish and Silks. They are painted red, and finely gilt, and all others must strike to them. The Qualities of their Ships are writ in great Letters upon the Stern, and they salute one another accordingly when they meet at Sea. In short, Nieuhoff says, they have so many navigable Rivers and Canals in the South Provinces, and there are such Numbers of Ships plying every where, that the Country resembles so many Venices. They dug these Canals betwixt River and River, to avoid the Hills and Desarts that obstruct their travelling by Land; and the better sort have fine Pleasure-Boats, more like Houses than Ships, in which they spend their Estates.

They boast that they had Printing long before us; but Athanasius Kircher says, they know not how to found Letters, but cut what they print upon Wood, as we do for the Rolling-Press; so that they are forced to have a standing Form for every Page. Nieuhoff says, that one Man is able to cut a Board as soon as our Compositors can prepare a Form, and one Person is able to work off 5000 Sheets a day. Some of them understand painting Birds and Herbs to the Life, but they don't make their Shadows nor temper their Colours well. They are dextrous at casting Copper into the Forms of Birds, &c. with which they adorn their Temples and Cielings. Most of their Bells are of Brass with wooden Clappers, nothing so tunable as ours. Magaillans says, the great Bell of Pekin is the largest in the World. Their musical Instruments and Clockwork are but very indifferent. They have Coats of Arms, but their Seals are only graved with the Name and Quality of the Person, and instead of Wax they use a red Paint. One of their chief Trades is making of China Ware. The Materials are dug out of Mountains in several Provinces. 'Tis a sort of dry Sand mixed with Water, made up of square Pieces stamped with the Emperor's Arms. They first dry them well in the Sun, then bake them in Ovens close stopped fifteen days, after which they lie fifteen more without Fire, till they be quite cold, otherwise they would break and lose their Gloss. The Oven is opened before one of the Emperor's Officers, set to receive the Duty, which is a fifth Piece of every sort. They paint their blue Figures with Indico, and conceal the Art from all but their nearest Relations. Magaillans says, their Mechanicks perform their Work with fewer Tools and more Ease than ours, and that every Person has some way to live, so that no body here is idle. They distinguish the Hours of the Night by striking on Drums and Bells, for which they have Towers in every City, and instead of Larum-Watches, have Pastils of powdered Wood made in Moulds, divided according to the Hours. They hang a Weight at what Hour they design to awake, and setting fire to the lower end, the Weight falls into a Basin when the Fire comes to it, and so awakes them. One of these Machines will last twenty four hours, and costs about three Pence. One of their chief Manufactures is Silk, reckoned the best in the World; therefore the Antients called this Country Serica, or the Country of Silk. The best is in the Province of Chekiam, but the chief Workmen in that of Nanking, from whence the Emperor furnishes his Court. Strangers prefer that of Quantung, which resembles ours except in Workmanship. The Natives value that most which is spun by wild Worms in the Woods. 'Tis of a grey Colour, has no Gloss, but looks like Linen or coarse Drugget, does not fret, washes often, lasts long, and takes no Spots. Their other Silks they work up into Plush, Velvet, Gold, Tissue, Sattin, Taffeta, Crapes, and other Stuffs unknown to us. They have plenty of Wool, but make no Cloth of it, because they prefer English Cloth, and would buy much more if it were not dearer than their finest Silks; yet the Mandarins have coarse Russet studying Gowns for Winter, and the Bonzes Wives make good Druggets, Serges, and Tammies of their own Wool, and drive a great Trade in them. They have much Cotton-Linen, so fine and light, that Persons of Quality wear it in the hot Season.

Besides our Instruments for Fishing, they nail varnished Boards to their Boats, which the Fish mistaking for Water in the Moon-light Nights, jerk upon them, and are easily caught. They also breed Cormorants for fishing, tie their Throats that they may not swallow the Fish which they bring to their Masters in their Bills; and when they have enough, they untie their Bills, and fill their Bellies.

The same Authors give the following Account of their Buildings, Houses, Furniture, &c. Their Architecture, tho not equal to ours, is not contemptible, for in all their publick Buildings there's something great and beautiful. They dig no Foundations, but lay the first Stones on the Surface of the Ground, so that their Towers, &c. built of Stone soon decay. Most of the Dwelling-Houses are of Wood, raised on Pillars covered with Tiles, and tho not beautiful without, are commodiously form'd within, and kept very neat. Few of them exceed one Story, but they are very long and broad, which makes their Cities of vast Extent. They have no Windows to the Streets, and their Gates and principal Apartments always front to the South. Their Magnificence consists chiefly in varnished Cabinets, Tables, Skreens, Pictures, and Pieces of white Sattin with moral Sentences, and large Characters upon them. These they hang in their Chambers, with their Figures and Vessels of Porcellane. They value those of yellow, grey, and white Colours most. Their Beds are very fine in Summer, they have Taffeta, Curtains embroidered, and others have them of thin Gause to hamper the Flies and Gnats. In Winter they have them of coarse Sattin embroidered, have thick Cotton Quilts instead of Feather-Beds, and their Bedsteads are of fine Joiners Work.

They are most curious in their Temples, which are very chargeable in building. They are filled with Images and Lamps continually burning, and some of them have monstrous Images of the Devil, as if he were ready to devour all that came near him. Adjoining to the Temples there's commonly a Tower, with a very costly and artificial Edifice. From these Towers Notice is given by Bells and Drums when any Fire happens; and if it be found to proceed from the Carelesness of the Master of the House, he is put to death for occasioning such a Fright to his Neighbours. In most of their Cities they have triumphal Arches, Towers, or Pyramids built with Stone or Marble, to the Memory of those who have done their Country eminent Service. They have three Roofs one above another, have three Stories, and are uniform on all sides. The Gates are adorned with the Statues of Lions, &c. and there are Inscriptions with the History of the Persons for whom they were erected. Dionysius Kao, a Christian Native, whose Account was published by Ysbrand Ides, gives an Account of their Manners and Customs, in substance as follows: They are very civil in Words and Actions, and always give Strangers the upper hand, which in the South Province is the right, and in the North the left. They use Chairs and Stools, contrary to the Custom of other Eastern Nations. The Master of the House advances half way in the outer Court to meet his Guests, who don't put off their Hats, but bow very low three or four times, lifting up their Hands, and letting them fall again very gravely. Persons of equal Rank are very ceremonious about refusing the upper Hand, but 'tis generally given to the eldest. Persons of Quality pay and receive Visits in Robes of State, and send a Message beforehand. If they have not seen one another in a long time, both fall on their Knees, and bow their Heads thrice to the Ground, which is the Custom when Servants speak to their Masters, and of all when they speak to their Princes and Governors. They use no Napkins, Knives, or Spoons at Meals, but have Ivory or Wooden Skrews tipped with Gold or Silver, the Meat being cut small before it comes to the Table. The first Dish is commonly a Hash and a Glass of Wine; the rest are piled up pyramidically. They drink little at a time, and their Wine being not strong, are seldom drunk. They affect Gravity at their Meals, but the richer sort love to be diverted by Tumblers and Farces. They are splendid in their Nuptials, and rejoice for several Days. The Parents make the Match without Consent of the Parties: People of Quality always marry thoſe of equal Degree, and muſt have the Emperor's Conſent. They buy as many Concubines as they pleaſe of the meaner ſort, among whom it is the Cuſtom to purchaſe their Wives, and pay for them in proportion to their Character. Moſt of them affect tall ſtrait Women. Noblemen's Widows muſt not marry again, and thoſe of the lower Rank, who do it, loſe their Reputation. The Wives are allowed to ſee no Males but Children, nor do they appear in the Streets except at Pekin, where they go abroad in cloſe Coaches or Sedans. They rub their Faces with white Meal every Morning, which ſpoils their Complexion. They have all little Eyes and ſhort Noſes, paint their Lips red, cover their Necks with little Collars of white Sattin, their Hands with long Sleeves, caſt their Eyes to the Ground, hold their Heads on one ſide, and look like Nuns; yet they are not free from Vanity, but dreſs as richly as if they were to appear in publick. They tie their Hair up in Locks, interlac'd with Flowers of Gold and Silver, wear long Veſts of Sattin or Cloth of Gold, with a great many Jewels, and are remarkable for the ſmallneſs of their Feet, which their Mothers tie hard on purpoſe from their Birth till they have done growing, ſo that they don't walk well. They wear Sattin Shoes embroidered with Gold, Silver, or Silk. They are generally ſprightly and loving, and employed in Embroideries. The poorer ſort, who trudge about without Shoes or Stockings, have feet large enough. Here are Ruffians who travel the Country to purchaſe young handſome Girls, ſpare no Money to debauch them, teach them to dance and ſing, and ſell them to the Grandees, or hire them out, and lead them on an Aſs to their Cullies, with a Veil over their Faces.

But notwithſtanding all theſe Precautions, Le Comte ſays, moſt of their Husbands are very jealous, and ſometimes their Wives make it an Article of their Marriage to be tolerated in Adultery. The common ſort frequently divorce, ſell them, and buy others; but if the Cauſe be not thought juſt, both Buyer and Seller are liable to Puniſhment. Lockyer ſays, they are ſluttiſh in their Houſes, never mind whether their Meat was killed by a Butcher, or died in a Ditch; that they eat Dogs, Cats, Rats, Snakes, and Frogs. The latter they reckon a Dainty, eſpecially the largeſt, blackeſt, and uglieſt, and give double the Price of other Meat for them. They are great Smoakers of Tobacco, uſe Braſs Pipes of a foot long, which they hang at their Girdles with a Purſe of Tobacco, and uſe them a quarter of a year without waſhing. Nieuhoff ſays, that many of the Chineſe ſell themſelves for Slaves to the Rich, that they may marry ſome of their Maids. Thoſe who are not able to maintain their Children, ſell them for two or three Crowns a-piece to the Spaniards and Portugueſe to tranſport them. In ſome Provinces they drown Infants, eſpecially Females, when they can't maintain them; and in the North Provinces they geld their Children, or the Mothers bite off one Stone, that they may be the nimbler in hunting. He adds, that many of the Grandees ruin themſelves by ſtudying Alchymy, and ſeeking after Drugs to make them immortal; and they have printed ſeveral Books on both Subjects.

Nieuhoff ſays, their mourning Ceremonies are numerous and ſevere; they mourn three years in white for Parents and Husbands, but the Men not above one for their Wives. Children are obliged, at the Death of their Parents, to lie an hundred Days on the bare Ground, nor muſt they uſe the Marriage-Bed till three Years be expired; for if the Women prove with Child in that time, they are puniſhed. When the Corps lies in State, a wooden Image, with the Deceaſed's Name, is placed on a Table, with Candles and Perfumes, and the Company make frequent Proſtrations: thoſe of Quality feaſt every ſix Months, in honour of the Deceaſed. Once a year they viſit the Tombs; thoſe of the Grandees being fair Houſes erected on Mountains or Plains, with Trees planted about them, and a large Altar of white poliſhed Marble before the Grave, with Candleſticks on each ſide, and the Figures of ſuch Attendants, Horſes, &c. as they had when alive; and on this occaſion they burn Paſtboard Money, which they fancy turns to real Coin in the other World, to bribe the King of Hell, that he mayn't be ſevere in their Torments, but haſten their Metempſychoſis. The Prieſts ſing and pray at the Tombs, for which they are well paid and feaſted.

Le Comte ſays, the Chineſe formerly valued themſelves above other Men, fancied they were produced from Heaven, and planted in the Center of the Univerſe, to give Laws to Mankind; but now they own the Europeans have at leaſt one Eye, tho they dont ſee ſo clearly as themſelves. Thoſe of Quality wear long Nails to diſtinguiſh them from the Vulgar, who muſt cut them, or elſe they can't work. Their Nails are commonly an Inch longer than their Fingers, clear as Horn, and round like a Scoop, and they put hollow Canes upon them at night, that they mayn't ſpoil them by ſcratching.

Lockyer gives a large Account of their Trade, and of the Cheats that Brokers and Traders put upon Europeans, for which we refer to him. The Goods for Export are Tea, Quickſilver, Vermilion, China Root, Rhubarb, Musk, Raw and Wrought Silks, Damasks, Sattins, Taffetas, Velvets, Palampores, Copper, Allum, Camphire, Sugar, and Sugar-candy, Fans, Pictures, Lacquered Ware, Porcellane, Clockwork, Toys, Drugs of ſeveral ſorts, Silver and Gold; but the Exportation of the latter being prohibited by Law, it is only to be had privately of the Mandarins.

The Goods uſually imported here from Europe are Bullion, Cloths, Cloth-raſh, Perpetuanas, Scarlet Camlets, Black, Blue, Sad, and Violet Colours; Lead, which is the beſt ready Money Commodity; Branches of Coral, clear Amber Beads, thin Flint Ware, ordinary Horſe-Piſtols with gilt Barrels, Sword-Blades of 14 s. per Dozen, Spectacles in Horn of about 2 s. 6 d. a Dozen, Teleſcopes, Perſpectives, Magnifying-Glaſſes, Looking-Glaſſes, and large Glaſs Bowls with Clocks and Watches of the neweſt Faſhion, which, if got aſhore without paying Duty, turn to better account than ready Money.

Magalhan ſums up the remarkable things in the Empire as follows, viz. 331 famous Bridges, 2099 Mountains, 1472 Lakes and navigable Rivers, 1099 Pieces of Antiquity, 1159 Towers, Triumphal Arches, and Monuments erected on extraordinary Occaſions; 272 great Libraries; 709 Temples erected to the Memory of their Anceſtors, and a great number of Halls to the ſame purpoſe; 480 great Temples of Idols; 35000 licenſed Bonzees, which, with others of that Order, make above a Million; 685 Mauſoleums; 3036 Statues and triumphal Arches of Men famed for their Virtues, Knowledge, and Valour, and of Virgins, renowned for Chaſtity, and Courage; and the Palaces of thirty two petty Kings.

Nieuhoff gives the following Account in general of their Cities, Towns, and Fortreſſes. There are 145 Capitals, and 1331 ſmall Cities, of which 148 are as ſplendid and populous as the chief Cities. There are 32 other great Cities, which tho they command over 36 ſmall Cities a-piece, and are not ſubject to any other, yet are not Capitals. The Commanders of the Militia have 3 Cities, 159 Forts, 17 great Caſtles and Towns, and 66 ſmall ones, with their Quotas of Soldiers: ſome of theſe, called ſmall ones, exceed ſeveral of the great ones in Largeneſs, Wealth, and People, but are called ſmall, becauſe their Governors are not equal in Dignity or Privilege. No Place is called a City that is not walled in. Moſt of them are quadrangular, with broad high Walls, fortified with Towers and Moats. Each City has a large Square, where they train their Militia, and great Watch-Towers on their Gates. The Suburbs are generally large and populous, and without the Walls of each Metropolis there's commonly a delightful Plain, beautified with Towers, Trees, &c. Magaillans ſays, there are ſeveral Cities ſtrong by Nature, governed by abſolute Princes, who pay no Tribute to the Emperor, and are called Mandarins; and tho the Inhabitants uſe the Chineſe Language, they have another of their own, differ from the other Chineſe in Manners and Cuſtoms, and far exceed them in Courage; ſo that after many fruitleſs Attempts to reduce them, they are left at liberty, and enjoy a free Trade.

They have a printed Itinerary, with all the Roads and Paſſages by Land and Water, and the Diſtance of Places throughout the Empire. Their Royal Highways are divided into 1145 Days Journey, and at the end of each there's a Place where the Mandarins are entertain'd at the King's Charge, and have Guards to attend them, when ſent on their Employments, and Couriers always go before to prepare things for their Reception. He reckons 2057 large Fortreſſes, divided into ſeven Orders, ſome of them appointed for the Refuge of People and Cattel in caſe of Invaſions, and others to ſave them from the Diſorders of their own Army when they march. Some of them are on inacceſſible Mountains and Rocks, to which there's no Paſſage but by Ladders or narrow Stairs cut out of the Rocks. He computes the whole of thoſe fortified Places, Civil and Military, at 4402, beſides 3000 Towers and Caſtles without the great Wall, where the Watches erect Banners to give notice of an Enemy's Approach, by Day, and Flambeaux by Night. The Guards on the Frontiers are 902054; and the Auxiliaries, always ready againſt the Tartars, are 989167 Horſe. In the other Gariſons there are 766970 Men, which in time of Peace attend upon the Mandarins and Ambaſſadors; and the Emperor keeps always on foot 564900 Horſe for his Troops, Meſſengers, and Poſts.

The Empire is by Travellers divided into fifteen or ſixteen Provinces, beſides Leaotung, part of Weſtern Tartary, Eaſtern Tartary, and Corea, without the Great Wall. We ſhall begin at the North, and deſcribe them as follows:

I. Bogdoi, or Niuche, called by the general Name of Eaſtern Tartary, and but little known to Europeans. It has, according to Yſbrand Ides, the River Argun and ſandy Deſarts, which divide it from the Muſcovite Dominions on the Weſt; the River Amour, which divides it from the ſame Dominions on the North; the Eaſtern Sea, or that of Corea on the Eaſt, which divide it from Japan, and the Land of Yeſſo and the great Wall, with Leaotung and the Province of Corea on the South. 'Tis about 120 Leagues from South to North, and about 540 miles Eaſt and Weſt, according to our Maps; but if we may believe the Author of three Journeys of the Emperor of China into Eaſt and Weſtern Tartary in 1682, 1683, and 1692. printed by Authority at Paris in 1695. and dedicated to Lewis XIV. this Country muſt be of a much greater Extent, and both that and Weſtern Tartary ſubject to the Chineſe. But we chuſe rather to follow Yſbrand Ides, who travelled this Country in 1693. and makes Argun the Frontier of the Czar's Dominions on this ſide; ſo that the Chineſe have little or no footing in Weſtern Tartary. The Country thro which he paſſed, from the River Argun to the City of Naunkoton, the firſt he met with in the Chineſe Dominions, which he places in Lat. 48. is partly ſandy Deſarts or uninhabited Land; and generally about Noon there's a high Wind, which continues about two hours, but otherwiſe the Sky is ſeldom clouded, and the Sun ſhines ſo hot, which, together with the Winds, ſo dry the Earth, that a ſmall white Duſt makes travelling here almoſt inſupportable, till the Wind ceaſes. He calls this Province Xixigar, ſays the City of Naunkoton is lately built, pretty well fortified, and the Conntry inhabited by Tartars, who have rich manured Lands, all ſorts of Garden-Fruit, and ſeveral Plantations of Tobacco; but are ſo impious, that they own themſelves to be Invokers of the Devil and Conjurers, which they practiſe with ſuch Diabolical Ceremonies and Noiſe, that he was diſturbed every Night by their frightful Howlings. They live in Huts of Clay, covered with Reeds or ſmall Bamboos, and in the middle of their Houſes they have a Pillar, hung round with the Entrails of Beaſts, Bows, and other Arms, which they worſhip. One half of their Houſe is taken up with a Bench of one Ell high, and two broad, covered with red Mats, upon which they ſit by Day, and lie by Night. Under this Bench is their Chimney, where the Fire is kindled by the Air of the Door, and their Smoke blown out at t'other ſide. Their chief Utenſils are a Tea-Kettle, and another for Victuals. Their Windows are covered with Paper inſtead of Glaſs. The Men and Women are generally well-ſhaped, and the handſome young Women many times carried off by the Mandarins, who alſo make bold with the Wives of the Natives, which becauſe they dare not reſent, they ſeem to reckon an Honour. The Tartars here are a ſort of Mongalians, and the River Nanda, on which the City ſtands, is very broad and deep, abounds with Sturgeon and other Fiſh, and has Mother of Pearl Shells on the Shore. He travelled afterwards four days without ſeeing a Houſe, till he came to an old deſolate City, about four miles round, which had been well fortified, and had Towers, &c. with the Hiſtory of ſome Kings and other great great Persons carved to the Life. The Natives say, 'twas the Seat of a Tartar King, drove out by the Chinese. There are scarce any People in the Town, so that 'twas over-grown with Grass, in which lodg'd Multitudes of Hares. In his further Journey he found abundance of Brick Turrets, that seem'd to be antient Sepulchres of the Tartars, met with many known and unknown Plants, and the Hills for several Miles were cover'd with Thyme and Marjoram. After four Days Journey he came to another City, which was utterly waste, and in the middle of it an Octangular Stone Tower, built after the Chinese manner, and hung with some Hundreds of small iron Bells, which when the Wind blows chime very agreeably. This Steeple was cramm'd with Chinese Idols, of several Shapes. Half a League from hence he came to a Village, mostly inhabited by Lama's, or Priests, who teach the People Idolatry, and worship a neighbouring Hillock, to which every one offers something of what he has about him, in order to obtain a good Journey. Next, he came to Karakaton, a City without the Wall, Lat. 42. The adjacent Country abounds with Oaks and Grass, among which harbour Tygers and Leopards; so that no Persons travel this way by Night. The Town was encompass'd with Palisadoes to keep out those Beasts; and all their Cattel have Iron Bells fasten'd about their Necks to scare the Tygers, &c. The Emperor of China comes hither every August, attended by Archers, to hunt Tygers, Wild Boars, Wolves, Foxes, Deer, &c. Among the Trees and Fields he saw a Bird, of the size of a Heron, of wonderful Beauty: The Neck and Breast white, the Wings and Tail of a bright scarlet, and the Flesh very good Meat. Here were also beautiful Partridges, and others that resembled Parrots. The Tails were an Ell long, and chequer'd with all sorts of fine Colours. Near this Place he travell'd by a crooked Way, cut out of a steep Rock, two hundred Fathom long, and seven broad. In the neighbouring Valleys there were abundance of wild Chesnut-Trees and Vines; and on a steep Rock he saw an Idol-Temple, hewn out on one side, with Statues of Idols: tho one would think it impossible, considering the Steepness and Smoothness of the Rock, for Men to get up and perform such Work there.

He came next to some Watch-Towers on the Pinnacles of Rocks, from whence he saw the great Wall, which, he says, is one of the Wonders of the World. About five hundred Fathom North from it there's a Valley, and on each side of it a Battery of hewn Stone, and betwixt them a Wall of three Fathom high, with a Gate. Then he came to the Entry of the great Wall thro a Watch-Tower, about eight Fathom high, arch'd over with hewn Stone, which had massy Gates strengthen'd with Iron. The Wall runs from East to West across the Valley up extraordinary high Rocks; and about five hundred Fathom from the outer Wall, upon the Rocks, on each side there's a high Tower. The Foot of the Wall here was of large hewn Stone about a Foot high, the upper part compos'd of Brick and Lime; but as far as he could see, 'twas all built of the same Stone. After he pass'd this first Gate, he came to another thro a Plain an hundred Fathom broad; and this Gate had a Wall on each side quite a-cross the Vale, like the other, and each Gate was guarded by fifty Men. On the first or great Wall there's an Idol-Temple, with the Ensigns of the Idols and the Emperor flying a-top. The Wall is full six Fathom high, and so thick, that six Horsemen may easily ride a-breast on it; and 'twas in as good Repair as if it had not been built above thirty Years, nor was there the least Weed or Filth upon it, as is usual on other old Walls. He gives us a Cut of that Part he saw; and says, the whole Length of the Wall is 1200 Miles, as he was inform'd by a Jesuit, who, by the Emperor's Order, travell'd the whole Length of it. Some say 'twas built two hundred and fifty Years before Christ by the Emperor Chius, who began it with three Men out of every Ten, and then with two out of every Five of his Subjects, most of whom were destroy'd by a Mortality during the Work, which lasted five Years. This occasion'd an Insurrection, wherein the Emperor and his Son were both cut off; and Ydes says, the Chinese curse him for it to this day. Le Comte says, he measur'd the Height of it in one place, where it was 1730 Foot high; but no higher elsewhere than ordinary City-Walls. He thinks it the most ridiculous, as well as the greatest Undertaking in the World, because in some places 'tis rais'd over such high Mountains as it was impossible for the Tartars to climb. 'Tis strengthen'd all along by great Towers, two Bowshot from one another; and where it might most easily be forc'd, two or three Fences are clapp'd up behind one another, so that the hindermost contributes to the Defence of the foremost.

Nieuhoff says, the Inhabitants were originally West Tartars; and that from this Country they conquer'd China, so that the present reigning Family is originally of this Nation. For this reason the Chinese hate them, and give Strangers a very false Account of 'em, saying they live in Caves: But our Author says, they live in strong well-wrought Tents, made for the most part of Silk or Stuff, so artfully painted, that they keep out Rain, and shine like Glass. Some say they had formerly four and twenty Cities: But Magaillans says, they have not now above two or three small ones; and that most of the Country is uncultivated, and full of Woods and Mountains. Nieuhoff says, the poorer sort wear Skins of Beasts, but the Rich Silk and Cotton, which they have from the Chinese in exchange for Skins. Their Coats hang down to their Heels. They have a broad Girdle about the Middle, with a Cloth tied to it to wipe their Faces, a Knife, and two little Bags for Tobacco. On the left Side they wear a Hanger, with the Point turned forward. In Summer they have Straw-Hats, and in Winter Furr'd-Caps. The Soldiers wear Iron Helmets, but without Guards for their Faces; and they have Horses Manes or Tails dyed red instead of Feathers. Their Breast-Plates are of several Pieces nail'd to one another, and make a hideous Clattering when they march. Their Arms are Bows and Arrows, and their Troops consist chiefly of Horse. They are valued by the Emperor of China for their Strength and Courage. They delight much in Hunting, are for the most part Robbers, profess no Religion, hate Mahometanism, yet are very sollicitous about the future State of their Souls; for which reason, Nieuhoff says, that many of 'em are ready to embrace Christianity, as several of 'em did after the Conquest of China. They have a peculiar Language, more like the Persian than the Chinese, and much easier. Their Letters are in Form like the Arabick. They spell and pronounce like Europeans. They have excellent Rubies, Pearls, and other precious Stones, and abound with Cattel, which are larger than ours, but have no Horns. They have a famous Mountain call'd Changpe, or rather a Ridge of Mountains, which, Nieuhoff says, extends above an hundred Miles in length, and have a great Marsh in the middle about eighty miles long, from whence flow several Rivers. The antient Chams of Tartary liv'd on the chief Mountain, which, the Author of the Emperor of China's Voyages says, is always cover'd with Snow; and that as soon as the Emperor of China saw it in his Journey thither in 1692, to visit the Sepulchres of his Ancestors, he alighted from his Horse, fell on his Knees, and bow'd three times to the ground; after which he was carried on a Gold Throne to the Town of Kirin, Lat. 39. Long. 122. where the People flock'd about him, wept for Joy to see him, and he was so pleas'd with their Affection, that he allow'd every one to approach him, and forbad his Guards to hinder them, as they do at Pekin. This Town lies on the River Songoro, where, our Author says, they keep a great Number of Vessels in readiness against the Muscovites, who frequently come into this River to dispute their Pearl-fishing; which is not improbable, considering that this River falls into the Amour, along which the Muscovites have extended their Dominions as far as the East Sea.

Ula, or Oula, is by our Author made the chief City of this Country, and was formerly the Residence of the Great Cham. It lies on the same River, about fifty Miles North-east from Kirin. The Needle declines here from South to West one Degree and forty Minutes.

II. The Province of Leaotung lies South from Eastern Tartary, West from Corea, and North from the great Wall. Most part of it is desart, their Towns and Villages being destroy'd by a Tartar King. The Inhabitants assisted the Tartars in the Conquest of China, since which it has been made a Province of the Empire, and enjoys the same Priviledges with the rest. The Inhabitants are very dull at Arts and Sciences; but more strong and healthful than the other Chinese, and imitate the Tartars in Customs and Manners, tho generally at War with them. The Country is partly mountainous, and partly champain. It abounds with all sorts of wild and tame Beasts, has excellent Wheat and Barley, but no Rice. Their Fruits and Grapes are like ours in Europe; and they have several Medicinal Trees, and the Root Ginseng. They have plenty of rich Furs, with which they have a considerable Trade.

Chinian, or Xim-Yam, their Capital, is in Lat. 42. Long. 122. It is a pretty good Town, and has the Remains of an antient Palace. Nieuhoff says, there's only one more great City in this Country; but they have many strong Places bigger than some Cities.

III. Corea Kingdom or Province lies East from Leaotung and East Tartary. Some make it an Island; but the last Maps make it the East Part of the Continent over-against Japan, and the South Part of it is a Peninsula. Some make Yupi the North Part of it, which extends as far as the River Amour; so that it extends from South to North almost 720 Miles, and from East to West about 240. 'Tis divided into eight Provinces, is generally populous, and has several rich Cities well inhabited, and in Form and Strength much like those of China. They have a King of their own, but tributary to the Empire of China. In Habit, Speech, Writing, and Religion, they agree with the Chinese; but give more Liberty to the Women. They have plenty of Wheat and Rice, Fruit of all sorts, and two Harvests in a Year. They make several sorts of Paper, and curious Writing Pencils of Wolves Hair. Here's also the Root Ginseng; and 'tis said they have Gold Mines. But the Country is little known, the People having no Commerce but with those of China and Japan. The Clerk of a Dutch Ship that was cast away on the Coast in 1653, as we find in the second Volume of Dr. Harris's Navigantium & Itinerantium Bibliotheca, says, it extends from Lat. 34. to 44. which agrees with our Maps; but he makes it only seventy five Miles broad. He says, it contains 360 Cities and Towns, besides Forts on the Mountains. The narrowest Part of the Bay betwixt it and China freezes in Winter, so that they pass from one to the other on the Ice. The Coast abounds with Whales and Herring in the Winter; and on the East Coast there are many Rivers, where there's a Pearl-Fishing. The North People are poor, and for the most part wear Skins; and the Frost is so severe, and the Snow so thick, that those on the Mountains make Paths under it. Here's some Mines of Silver and Lead, and all sorts of European Birds and Beasts, with monstrous Crocodiles and Serpents. This Author says, they pay Tribute to the Tartars with the Root call'd Nisi; and that when the Tartar Ambassador comes for the Tribute, which is three times a Year, he is more respected than their King. 'Tis probable that he is rather an Ambassador from China; for the Author of that Emperor's Voyages says, Deputies from Corea came to wait on the Emperor of China at Leaotung, and made Presents to him. Yet the King here is absolute, according to the Dutch Clerk, has always a good Army about his Capital, and once in seven Years all the Provinces send their Freemen to attend him by Turns, besides his ordinary Guards; and when he passes their Streets, every one must turn his Back to him. His Horsemen are arm'd Cap-a-pee, and use Bows and Arrows. His Foot wear Corslets and Headpieces, and carry Halfpikes, besides Swords and Muskets. Every Town maintains a Galley with thirty Oars, and some small Cannon and Fireworks: Yet the People in general are cowardly, and bemoan those who are oblig'd to fight; so that their greatest Defence is the Cold and Mountains. The King's Revenue arises from a Tax on the Product of the Country, and Goods imported. All his Grandees depend on him, because they have nothing to live on but the Salaries he gives them.

IV. The Province of Pecheli, or Pequin, is the first within the great Wall, and is nam'd from its Capital. The Country is low, yet dry and healthful; is more barren than the other Provinces within the Wall, yet has plenty of Corn, but little Rice. Here are many sandy Desarts; but in some Places there's plenty of Cattel and Fish. There are three strong Cities, and fourteen Garisons, for Defence of the Wall, besides many others. They have the same Fruit as in Europe; and plenty of Grape, but make no Wine, their Rice-Liquor being prefer'd to it even by Europeans. The Frost here begins in November, lasts till March, and is so strong, that it freezes up the Rivers in twenty four Hours. The Atlas Hiſtorique ſays, that this and all the other North Provinces have plenty of Wheat, Barley, ſeveral ſorts of Millet, and Tobacco; and that they feed their Horſes with a ſort of black and yellow Pears inſtead of Oats. Here's good white and red Marble, Touchſtone, and ſeveral others much valued for Hardneſs and Colour. The way of travelling here is in a Waggon with one Wheel, which holds three Perſons.

Places of Note are,

1. Pequin, the Capital, Lat. 40. Long. 116. and the Reſidence of the Emperor. Nieuhoff ſays, it commands over ſix and twenty other Cities. The Atlas Hiſtorique ſays, 'tis ſquare, ſix large Leagues in Compaſs, and conſiſts of two Towns; one of them built by the Chineſe, who were drove out of the old City by the Tartars. The Tartars call it Cambala, i. e. the City of the Lord. The Wall which ſeparates the old from the new City is of Stone, higher than the Walls of our Cities, ten Miles round, with Bulwarks about a Piſtol-ſhot from one another; and the South-ſide is defended by two high Walls, ſo broad, that twelve Horſes may go abreaſt on them. The Suburbs, or new Town, is but ill fortified; yet there are ſtrong Outworks on each ſide the twelve Gates, with Redoubts and Towers, where they keep Guards; and at each Gate there's a noble Arſenal, with a Guard of a thouſand Men. Here are many fine Structures, Idol-Temples, Towers, and Triumphal Arches. In the middle of the City lies the chief Idol-Temple, and in the Tower their famous great Bell, which is rung three times in an Evening; and after the third time none muſt ſtir out, unleſs to viſit their Friends, and the Sick. The Bell is 120000 Pound weight. The City is ſo large, and has ſo many Streets, that there's a Book printed with an Account of 'em, for the Uſe of Lacqueys and Meſſengers. The principal Street is thirty Fathom broad, and very long, but makes no great Appearance, becauſe the Houſes front backward, out of reſpect to the Palace; ſo that nothing appears to the Street but little Shops. The Streets here are always as much crouded as they are in Europe, during Fairs and Proceſſions. This is chiefly occaſion'd by the Multitudes of People who come every day with Proviſions, and by the Reſidence of the Court, which fills the Town with Grandees, who always go abroad with large Retinues, and Men to clear the Way before them; and ſuch is the Vanity of the People, that even the Citizens of Note ſeldom go abroad but in Chaiſes, or on horſeback, and are always attended by Numbers of Servants, which makes the City look more populous than it is. Their Mechanicks go alſo continually about, eſpecially Mornings and Evenings, becauſe they work at their Cuſtomers Houſes, and not in Shops as ours do. The Shops are fill'd with Silk, Porcellane, and varniſh'd Ware, which make a beautiful Proſpect; and every Shop-keeper has before his Gate a large Board painted, varniſh'd, and frequently gilt, with an Account of the Goods he ſells. They are rang'd like a ſort of Pilaſters, all in a Line, ſo that they look like ſo many Decorations of a Theatre; and the Streets being all ſtreight, they form a very agreeable Proſpect. But in the Winter the Streets are very dirty, and in the Summer ſo very duſty, that 'tis very noiſome, ſpoils their Apparel and Furniture; and by the Multitude of People, Horſes, Chariots, and other Carriages, raiſes ſo much Duſt, that it fills the Air like a Cloud: Which is a very great Reflection upon the Chineſe, who boaſt ſo much of their Politeneſs. The Palace ſtands in the middle of the City, and is encompaſs'd with a double Wall. The outermoſt is extraordinary high and thick, plaiſter'd on both ſides with red Mortar, and cape'd with varniſh'd Bricks of a gold Colour, laid with great Art. It has four Gates; and is ſo large, that 'tis two Miles from the North to the South Gate. Each Gate has three Portals, and 3000 Men conſtantly keep guard at them. The inner Brick-wall is extreme high and thick, adorn'd with handſome Battlements, and is near five Miles in Circumference. It has alſo four Gates, with large Arches and Portals. Upon the Gates and the Angles of the Wall there are Halls of an extraordinary Size and Workmanſhip. They are varniſhed within with a beautiful Red, adorn'd with Flowers of Gold, and cover'd with Tiles of the ſame Colour. No Prieſt or deform'd Perſon muſt enter the Palace; and none but Mandarins and Officers of the Houſhold muſt come within the inner Wall without Licence. Betwixt the Walls there's a ſpacious Court for the Elephants, in the middle of which there's a large Room for them in Summer; but in the Winter they have Stalls with Stoves, otherwiſe they would not be able to endure the Rigour of the Seaſon. The Palace is encompaſs'd with a large deep Moat, full of choice Fiſh. At every Gate there's a Drawbridge; and betwixt the Walls many noble Palaces magnificently adorn'd, and ſet apart for ſeveral Uſes. On the Eaſt-ſide, within the Walls, there's a River with ſeveral Bridges of Marble, and a Drawbridge in the middle of each. On the Weſt-ſide, between the Walls, there's a Lake above a Mile long, full of Fiſh, with a ſtately Bridge over it, Triumphal Arches at each End, and Pleaſure-Houſes on its Banks. In the middle of it lie the Emperor's Barges, in which he goes a fiſhing, or to take the Air. On the Eaſt and Weſt Sides, betwixt the two Walls, there are Streets, with Houſes for thoſe who belong to the Palace. Within the inner Wall there's a Park with Wild Beaſts for the Emperor's Diverſion; and there are five Hills in it, rais'd by the Mud taken out of the Ponds and Ditches. The Columns, Portico's, and Pillars are extreme magnificent: The Roofs of all the Apartments are Hexagonal, cover'd with yellow Tiles, and adorn'd with Braſs-Work in form of Lions, Dragons, &c. The Galleries, Halls, and other Rooms are ſtately, and richly furniſh'd, and the Stair-Caſes are of fine Marble and Workmanſhip. There are alſo ſtately Gardens that belong to the Palace. There are nine ſquare Courts on a Line in the inner Palace. The Gates betwixt them are of Marble, and have great Pavilions of Gothick Architecture. In the Emperor's Apartments the Portico's are ſupported by large Pillars. There are Stairs of white Marble up to the Halls, and the Ornaments conſiſt chiefly in Sculpture, Varniſh, Gilding, and Paintings. The Floors are pav'd with Marble and Porcellane. But after all, there is nothing of that Regularity or fine Architecture we have in Europe. 'Tis always crouded with a Multitude of Mandarins and other great Men, when the Emperor gives Audience, for which he has ſeveral Halls. We refer to Iſbrand Ides for the State and Magnificence in which the Emperor appears on ſuch Occaſions. The River which runs thro this City ſometimes overflows, and does a great deal of damage to the new Town, as it did in 1668, when it deſtroy'd many Houſes and People. There's a ſtately Bridge over it of fine white Marble, of excellent Architecture. It has ſeventy Pillars on each ſide with Panes of Marble, finely carv'd in Foliage, Birds, Beaſts, &c. And at one end of it there are Pedeſtals, with Lions of an extraordinary Size, and Young-ones about them, between their Legs, and on their Backs, in ſeveral Poſtures, excellently well done; and at the other end there are two Elephants upon the like Pedeſtals, artfully cut in Marble.

Nieuhoff gives an Account of ſeveral other Cities in this Province, which we can't inſiſt upon. He ſays, that ſome Parts of this Country are infeſted with great Swarms of Locuſts, brought once a Year by an Eaſterly Wind, which frequently occaſion a great Dearth. When they appear, the People march againſt them with Colours diſplay'd, ſhouting and hallooing to prevent their ſettling, and never leave off till they drive them to the Sea or ſome River; where, being weary, they fall in, and are drowned. He ſaw one of thoſe Expeditions; and ſays, they tumbled down in ſuch Numbers, that they cover'd the Veſſels in which the Dutch Ambaſſadors were with their Retinues.

V. Chamſi or Xanſi Province lies South-weſt from that of Pequin. Nieuhoff ſays, the Chineſe derive their Origin from hence. It produces the ſweeteſt and faireſt Grapes in Aſia, which they dry and ſell, but make no Wine of 'em. This Province abounds with what they call natural Fire-Wells. They cloſe up the Mouths of 'em to the bigneſs of a Pot, and boil their Meat on 'em. Kircher ſays, the Flame is thick, carried about in Stoves, and does not conſume Wood. Here's likewiſe ſtore of Coal; and they uſe Stoves in their Houſes in Winter. The Sanſons ſay, they have inexhauſtible Mines of Sulphur and Burning-Stones. Here are alſo Mountains which yield red and white Earth, that the Women paint themſelves with, Jaſper of ſeveral Colours, the Root Ginſeng, Rhubarb, and many other Medicinal Roots. Ides ſays, the Yellow River here is in ſome Places two Miles broad. The Country is mountainous and ſmall, yet fruitful and populous. Nieuhoff ſays, they have fourteen ſtrong Forts for Defence of the great Wall and Roads; and that Taitung City is the Key of the Province, a Bulwark againſt the Weſt Tartars, and fam'd for beautiful Women.

VI. Chanton, or Xantung, lies South-eaſt from Pequin, Eaſt from Chamſi, and borders on the Gulph of Xang. Nieuhoff ſays, 'tis ſo fruitful in Corn, Rice, Beans, &c. that one Year's Product is enough to ſerve the Inhabitants for ten. They have alſo plenty of Poultry and Fiſh, Fruit of all ſorts, eſpecially Prunes and large red Apples, which they dry, and keep good a whole Year. The Country abounds with Roſemary, and Deer whoſe Fleſh taſtes of it. There's a Spring near the City Ninyang here, which they ſay prolongs Life. Some Cows here have a Stone in their Paunch as large as a Gooſe-Egg, which is prefer'd to Bezoar for Virtue. Nieuhoff obſerves many ſtrange Things of the River Luom here: among others, that he threw nine Sticks into it, of which ſix drove South, and three North. The Inhabitants are ſtrong, but fitter for Labour than Arts and Sciences; and are much infeſted by Bands of Robbers. A great part of the Royal Canal runs thro this Country, and has ſo many conſiderable Towns and Villages upon it, that the Toll amounts to ten Millions of Gold Crowns per Ann. The chief of them are,

1. Cao, on the Canal, noted for a Lake in the Neighbourhood, with a Stone in the middle like a Dragon with a Man's Head, which they call the Spirit of Thunder, becauſe when ſtruck on the Belly it makes a noiſe like it.

2. Tuncham, or Toncham, on the Canal, Lat. 37. Long. 114. It has the greateſt Trade of Silk in the Empire, is a large City, divided by the River, over which it has a large Bridge. On the top of a neighbouring Hill there's a Column an hundred Rods high, which being touch'd with one's Finger, ſounds like a Drum.

3. Lintſin, on the other ſide the Canal, fifteen Leagues North from Tuncham, noted for an excellent Harbour frequented from all Parts of the Empire, which makes the City rich and populous. 'Tis divided by the River, over which there's a Bridge with a ſtrong Caſtle at each end, that commands the River and Town. Here are many ſtately Temples, particularly one with a high Tower of wonderful Architecture, octogon, and conſiſting of nine Stories, thirteen Foot and a half each. The outer Wall is of Porcellane Mould, adorn'd with Fret-work, the inſide of poliſh'd Marble of ſeveral Colours, as clear as a Mirror. There are nine Marble Galleries on the outſide, adorn'd with Images, and hung with fine Copper Bells at the Corniſh, which chime pleaſantly when mov'd by the Wind. The Windows are adorn'd with gilt Bars. On the top there's the Image of a She-Idol thirty Foot high, made of Plaiſter-work, intermix'd with Bars of Gold and Silver; and round the Tower there are many Images of all Sizes, reckon'd the greateſt Curioſities in China.

VII. Chenſi, or Xenſi, lies Weſt from Chamſi, and has the great Wall running thro it. 'Tis partly mountainous, has ſtore of Wheat, Barley, Turkiſh Corn, and ſome Rice, which is purging. The Inhabitants ſheer their Sheep and Goats thrice a Year. Here's a Beaſt call'd Xee, of the ſize of a young Hind, that has Musk in its Navel, and can't live in any other Province. Here are Mines of Gold and Silver; but the Emperor won't ſuffer them to be open'd, perhaps becauſe they lie near the Weſt Tartars: But the Inhabitants find Gold in the Brooks. There are two and twenty great and ſmall Forts in this Province. Here's a Mountain call'd Holan, which, Nieuhoff ſays, is three hundred Miles round, is noted for wild Horſes, low, but ſtrong; and for Bears, whoſe Foreſeet are reckon'd a Dainty by the Natives. Here are Cocks and Hens with Wool inſtead of Feathers. The Country is infeſted by Graſhoppers, which devour their Corn and Graſs. The Natives eat them by way of Repriſal, and reckon them good Food. Here's a Mountain ſhap'd like a Cock, makes a great Roaring before Tempeſts; and another, that if a Drum be beat on it ſends forth Thunder and Lightning. Here are black Snakes, whoſe Fleſh they uſe for Antidotes. Here's an Herb call'd the Golden Thred of Silk-Worms, which cures all manner of Diſeaſes; another call'd Quei, which cauſes Laughter when eaten. Here's likewiſe abundance of Rhubarb, Bats as big as Geeſe, which are good meat.

meat. They have a Stone of inestimable Value, which increases and decreases with the Moon. Here's a Road with Bridges cut thro vast Mountains by one of their Generals, who employed some hundred thousand Men in it. The Tops of the Hills on both sides seem to brave the Clouds, and the Bridges betwixt the Mountains are so high, that it makes one giddy to look down. They are railed with Wood and Iron on the sides, and broad enough for four Horsemen abreast. It has shortned the way from Singan or Sigan their Capital to Hanchung, from 20000 to 80 Furlongs. Here's another called the Flying-Bridge of one Arch, betwixt two Mountains, 400 Cubits long, and 50 Perches high. It was built by one of their Generals, to make the way thro the Mountains more easy. It cost incredible Expence and Labour, Ways being cut thro the Mountains; and lest the Earth should tumble down, there are such high Walls built on both sides the Road, as make it dark, having no Light but what comes from above, and over the Arch there's a Timber-Bridge betwixt the Mountains, railed in on both sides. The Atlas Historique gives a curious Cut and Description of it, and says, there's another of the like kind in the Province of Xamsi. Kao says, this Province is governed by two Viceroys, is 400 miles long, and 350 broad. The Inhabitants are the best-proportioned and strongest in China.

Sigan, or Singan, the Capital, lies on a River, Lat. 34. Long. 107. It has thirty six Cities under it, is three Leagues round, divided into the Tartar and Chinese Towns. Here's an old Palace, the Residence of their antient Kings; but 'tis chiefly remarkable for a long Marble Table found here, as they were digging up some Ruins near the Town in 1625. 'Tis about ten foot long, five broad, has a Cross upon the upper part of it well cut, and underneath it a long Discourse, partly in Chinese, and partly in Syriack Characters, in Substance thus: There is a first intelligent and spiritual Principle, who is one Substance in three Persons: The second of those Persons, who is the Messiah, was born of a Virgin, and taught Man the way of Truth. He has left behind him a Law altogether heavenly and spiritual, to undeceive Men as to their Esteem of worldly Riches, and to inspire them with the Love of eternal Riches: That a Man from Judea, of singular Virtue, brought this Law to China in 636. in favour of whom the Emperor Tai-tcoun published an Edict. Kao, his Son and Successor, applied himself to promote that Religion which his Father had embraced, and the following Emperors did also confirm Christianity by their Edicts and Examples, notwithstanding the Persecution of the Bonzees. Father Le Comte says, this Monument was erected in 782. to preserve to Posterity the State of Christianity in China at that time; and, he adds, that the Chronicles of China confirm this. The Emperor being informed of this antient Monument, ordered a Copy of it to be taken, and that the Stone it self should be kept in a Pagod near the Town, where they say it still remains.

VIII. Honan Province lies South from Xansi, and East from Xensi. Nieuhoff says, here are several sorts of Gold Apples and Pomegranates. Kao says, 'tis a plain Country, and abounds so much with Rice, that a hundred weight is bought for one Shilling. Here are Snakes with white speckled Skins, whose Flesh, infused in Wine, is sovereign against Lameness. Kircher says, they have blue and green Tortoises, which have Wings upon their Feet. Here's a Mountain where the Natives fancy the Phenix died, and is lamented by all Birds once a year, when the Inhabitants go by Night with Lights in their Hands, and catch Multitudes. The Capital is Caifan, Lat. 34. Long. 113. formerly the Residence of the Court, remarkable for a large Pond dug on purpose for training the People to Sea-Fights. Its Banks are adorned with Idol-Temples, and the Palaces of Grandees.

IX. Suchuen, lies South from Xensi, and has part of the great Wall on the West. 'Tis large and fruitful, abounds with Silk, and the true China Roots; those that grow elsewhere being good for nothing. Here's also Rhubarb, Mines of Iron, Tin, Lead, Quicksilver, and Salt, Red and Yellow Amber, Stones, and Sugar-Canes. The Horses here are the best in China, and they have some Rhinoceroses. Nieuhoff says, that in the Mountains which border upon Honan, there is an absolute King, who has no dependance on the Emperor, but only, for the sake of good Correspondence, receives his Regalia from him. He does not suffer the Chinese to mix with his Subjects: He has many good Valleys under him, defended by inaccessible Mountains, and narrow Passes. This Province contains thirty nine great and small Garisons. Here's a Fruit called Lichi, much esteemed; it grows upon high Trees in Clusters like Grapes, is shaped like a Heart, in size like an Acorn, smells like a Rose, is of a purple Colour, and a pleasant Taste. Singu the Capital, was formerly the Residence of a great Prince, next to the Emperor in Dignity. Near this there is a high Mountain, upon which the Natives fancy that immortal Men converse.

X. Kiamnan, or Nanking, lies East from Honan, as far as the Sea. Nieuhoff says, it exceeds all the rest in the Richness of Soil and Commerce, being watered by the yellow River and Kiam, besides lesser ones. Here are so many Ships, that one would think all the Vessels of the Nation were assembled here. All Ships bound higher up the Country rendevouz at the Capital, and one may go from hence by Water to any part of China. 'Tis reckoned six Months Sail from hence to Pekin. The Inhabitants are generally witty, civil, and industrious, and among them are the most learned Men, and the ablest for all sorts of Trade in the Nation. Their chief Manufactures are Cotton and Silk; and the Elephants of this Province, and that of Junnan, are highly esteemed.

Nanking the Capital, lies on the River Kiam, Lat. 32. Long. 117. $\frac{1}{2}$. Nieuhoff says, it is pleasantly situate, in a fruitful Country. The River runs thro it in several Streams, navigable by great Vessels, and there are many curious Stone-Bridges over them. The Chinese are of opinion, that this City exceeds all in the World for Bulk and Ornament. The Walls of the City are said to be six Dutch miles in length, and the Suburbs longer. Kao says, it is seventeen French Leagues in compass. It has a double Wall, the first of Stone, above thirty foot high, with Breast-works and Watch-Towers, and thirteen Gates constantly guarded by Foot and Horse. Some of them have four or five Arches. The Water-Gate is constantly crouded, and therefore best guarded. The principal Streets are broad, streight, and neatly paved, but the Houses of the ordinary sort are mean. The Shops of the chief Traders are filled with Cotton, Silks, Porcellane, Pearl, Diamonds, &c. with Boards before each as at Pekin, with the Name of the Master, and the Commodities he sells. Gemelli says, he was informed by several Missionaries, that there are eight Millions of Houses in the City and Suburbs, which pay Taxes, and thirty two Millions of People, but leaves the Reader to believe what he pleases; and indeed there's no reason for any body to believe this extravagant Account. Nieuhoff computes them at a Million, and says here's a Garison of 40000 Tartars. The Town exceeds all the rest in China for stately Idol-Temples, Towers, triumphal Arches, &c. Their antient Kings had a large noble Palace here, which was ruined by the Tartars at their last Invasion. The Town sends Presents of Silks and Woollen to the Emperor, in five Ships every three Months, and likewise a Present of Fish, called Saul, twice a Week in Boats, drawn Day and Night by Men, who relieve one another at certain Stages, so that they come fresh to Pekin in eight or ten days, tho it be near 600 miles distant. Nieuhoff says, these Ships, which carry the Emperor's Presents, are the richest, best gilt, and painted that ever he saw, and curiously adorned with Images. The Tartars leave this City to the Natives for the Encouragement of Trade, and live in a Plain near an Idol-Temple, where there are several Porcellane Towers, and other curious Structures. Among others there's a Porcellane Tower, which exceeds all in China for Cost and Architecture. It has nine Rounds, each adorned with a Gallery, full of Images and handsome Windows. The Outside is glazed and painted with several Colours, and the whole cemented so, that it looks like one Stone; and at the Corners of the Galleries there are multitudes of little Bells, which chime pleasantly with the Wind. From the upper Gallery there's a noble Prospect of the City and adjacent Country. The Tartars obliged the Chinese to build this Temple 700 years ago, in remembrance of their Conquest. In the Neighbourhood there's another Idol-Temple, where they sacrifice Swine, Goats and Cocks for prosperous Voyages, and in some of those Temples they have Hell so painted to the Life, that it strikes a Terror. The City has two Governors or Viceroys, who command this and the neighbouring Province. They are assisted by some hundreds of Mandarins and a Vicar-General, who is over the two Viceroys, and chief in power. They use human Dung to manure their Orchards, esteem that most which comes from Flesh, and it is so frequently carried about the Streets and on the River, that 'tis very noisome.

Other Cities of chief Note here are, (1.) Yangchea, sixteen Leagues North from Nanking, on the Royal Canal. The Chinese say it contains two Millions of People, has a great Trade in Salt, is noted for handsome Women, and the Inhabitants prostitute their Daughters and Maid-Servants for Hire. Nieuhoff says, he saw here two of those Sloops they call Serpent-Boats. The Hulls are built in form of a Water-Snake. The Stern was hung with the Figures of strange Serpents of several Colours, which made a gallant Shew. They had three Masts, with an Idol on the Top of each, adorned with Silk, Flags, &c. and Standards on the Stern, set off with Tassels of Hair, Silk, Flags, and long Feathers. The Boat was covered with Silk, and under a high Deck there sat twelve Rowers, with gilt Crowns clad in Silk. (2.) Usu, on an Island in the River, a populous, strong, and trading Town, noted for making the best Arms, Guns, Lamps, &c. in China. (3.) Hoaigan, about 38 Leagues North from Nanking, a rich and well-built Sea-Port, on the East-side of the Royal River, and South of the Yellow River. It is strong by Situation, and the Seat of a Viceroy, who governs the seven Southern Provinces.

XI. Yunnan, or Innan, lies South from Suchuen, and East from the Kingdom of Ava. Kao says, it produces Gold, Silver, Copper, and Tin, with Rubies, and other precious Stones. It abounds also with Horses, Tygers, Elephants, Bears, and Leopards. The Country is partly mountainous, and partly champain, and the Air temperate. Kao says, 'tis very large, and only tributary to the Empire of China. Martinius, in his Atlas, talks of a Lake here, which changes the Leaves of certain Trees that fall into it into Black-Birds. Here are also Mines of clear red Amber, good against Fluxes. The Women here are permitted to go to Market, a Liberty granted no where else in China. Nieuhoff says, they have two Garison Cities, and fourteen others in this Province.

XII. Queichen lies East from Yunnan. The chief Product are Mines of Quicksilver, Copper, and Tin in their Mountains, Sweet Jessamin, China Root, and the Flower Quai. The Inhabitants are chiefly employ'd in making Arms, and there are eight great and small Garison Cities, besides many Forts and Castles.

XIII. Houquan lies East from Queichen, and South from Honan. Kao says, it produces Cotton, Rice, and Corn enough to furnish the whole Empire; that it abounds with Oil, Geese, Lampreys, and other Fish. Nieuhoff says, it has eleven Garison Cities, many Hills, and one called the Yellow Hill, from the Colour of its Earth and Stones. In some Places they have Manna and Flowers of a Saffron Colour, that grow in their Meers, and no where else in China. In the River Siang, there's a Creature like a Horse, with Tygers Claws and Scales instead of Hair. Kircher says, there's a Mountain, from whence issues continual Blasts in Summer, but none in Spring or Winter, and that there are certain Stones in this Province like Swallows, distinguished into Male and Female, which the Physicians use in their Compositions. Magaillans says, they have Wax-Trees as large as our Chesnuts. Kao says, here's a Lake above 400 miles in Compass, but our Maps give it nothing of such an Extent, and don't represent it to be above sixteen Leagues from South to North, and twelve from East to West. He says 'tis frequented by a vast Number of Ships, and runs with a pretty large Channel into the Canal of Nanquin.

XIV. Kiansi lies East from Houquan. Nieuhoff says, the Inhabitants are barbarous, and live by Plunder, tho their Soil be fruitful, and abounds in Gold, Silver, Lead, Tin, and Iron-Mines, the Trees Aquila and Calamba, and the Fruit Ananas. 'Tis encompassed with ſteep Mountains, interſperſed with Lakes and Rivers full of Salmon and other Fiſh, and is ſo populous, that many are obliged to remove to other Provinces for want of room. Kircher ſays, there's a Mountain here with two Tops, reſembling a Dragon looking fiercely at a rampant Tyger, and another with ſeven Tops like the ſeven Stars.

Kircher and others are ſo full of their Accounts of ſuch ſtrange Mountains in this Country, that we muſt ſuppoſe they have been impoſed upon by the Natives, who are exceſſively credulous, and tell ſtrange Stories of their Mountains; particularly, as the Atlas Hiſtorique ſays, that there's one in the Province of Chenſi, which has the Form of a great Cock, and crows ſometimes ſo loud, that 'tis heard for three Leagues; that there's another in Fokien, that ſhakes before a Tempeſt to the right and left, like a Tree ſhook by the Wind; that there's another in the ſame Province, repreſenting the Statue of their Idol Foe, ſo monſtrous, that its Eyes are ſeveral Miles long, and its Noſe ſeveral Leagues: all which muſt either be looked on as mere Fables and Reveries of the Natives, or otherwiſe have been the Works of ſome of their Princes or Great Generals, who employed the People to cut the Mountains into theſe Forms; which might the more eaſily be done, becauſe the Soil here is ſo deep, that, according to the above-mentioned Atlas, in ſome Places they dig three or four hundred foot, and that 'tis uſual for them to cut their Hills into ſeveral Stages, like Terraſs-Walks, from top to bottom, and to ſow Grain upon thoſe Stages; ſo that in ſome Places 'tis very pleaſant to ſee Chains of thoſe Hills, with hundreds of thoſe Terraſſes, that are as fruitful as their Plains. They have an Animal here which breeds Musk, and on one of their Mountains a certain Stone, which takes all Colours, according to the Quality of the Air, ſo that they foretel the Change of Weather by it. The Sanſons ſay, that on the Frontiers of this Province, towards Canton, there's a Mountain named Malin, where there is always a great Concourſe of People to carry Goods over the Mountain, from one navigable River to another, which very much ſhortens the Paſſage of Goods betwixt Canton and Nanking. Kao ſays, here's a Lake 300 miles round, navigable by great Ships, has many fine Cities and Towns on its Banks, receives all the Rivers of the Province, and diſcharges them into the great River of Nanking by a Canal. Our Maps don't repreſent the Lake above twelve Leagues long and nine broad, and the Canal about eight Leagues long.

The Capital City is Nankan, at the Weſt ſide of the Lake, Lat. 29. Long. 113. 'Tis a large City, with ſtately Temples and Idols. The adjacent Country abounds with Corn and great Herds of Swine. That called Silver-Rice grows in the Neighbourhood, and is highly valued at Court.

XV. Chekian, lies Eaſt from Kianſi to the Sea. Nieuhoff ſays, this Province abounds with Canals and Woods of Mulberry-Trees, which they cut every Year, becauſe the lower the Trees are, the Leaves produce the better Silk, of which here are ſuch Quantities, that ten Suits of Silk might be bought cheaper than one Cloth Suit in Europe. Here are Trees ſo large, that they ſay eighty Men cannot fathom them, and they have Reeds ſo large, that one of their Joints will hold a Kilderkin of Liquor. Here are alſo Tallow Trees. The Province in general is mountainous, and inferior to the reſt in Fertility and Number of People, but yields two profitable Commodities, that are in none of the reſt. The firſt is many thouſand Bales of the beſt Paper, and the ſecond is the Gum called Sic, which makes an excellent ſhining Varniſh. It drops from Trees that reſemble Fir; they can make it of what Colour they pleaſe. Its Exhalations, when preparing, cauſe Swellings and Conſumptions, but they have Antidotes to prevent it. Here's a particular ſort of Silk reſerved to be embroidered with Gold for the Emperor's uſe. Here's a Mountain, named Cutten, whoſe Soil is of that quality, that it tames Tygers and Snakes. The former do pretty much infeſt this Province, and here are fifteen great Gariſons.

Places of Note are,

1. Hantchou the Metropolis, Lat. 31. Long. 119. forty Leagues South Eaſt from Nankin. Le Comte ſays, 'tis one of the richeſt, largeſt, and moſt populous Cities in China; that 'tis four Leagues round beſides the Suburbs, and has a Gariſon of 10000 Men. Its Canals are crowded with Boats. The River on the Eaſt-ſide is half a League broad; and about four Leagues North there's a Lake twelve Leagues broad and twelve Leagues long, where the Inhabitants divert themſelves with Pleaſure-Boats. There's an Idol in the middle, with a Temple, and ſome Houſes of Devotion. Herbert ſays, 'tis the moſt remarkable City in the Eaſt for variety of antient Rarities. Martinius, in his Atlas, ſays, in his time the City and Suburbs were an hundred miles round; but that looks as fabulous as the Story of Paul the Venetian, who ſaid it had 12000 Bridges, moſt of them ſo high, that tall Ships could ſail under them without ſtriking their Maſts. On the 18th Day of every Month the River flows here higher than ordinary, which their Philoſophers can't account for.

2. Soutchcou, on the North-ſide of a Lake, twenty miles North from Hantchcou. Le Comte ſays, 'tis as big as that Town, is the Seat of a Viceroy, and has as great a Trade as any City in the Empire. Nieuhoff ſays, that Reeds grow in a neighbouring River as hard as Iron, two or three handfuls thick, with green or black Stalks three or four Rods high. Of theſe they make Matraſſes, Baskets, Canes, Lances, Pikes, Perſpective Glaſſes, &c. The Water which drops from it, when laid green on the Fire, is good againſt Bruiſes. The Natives boil the young Shoots, and pickle them in Vinegar.

3. Nimpo, near the Coaſt, Eaſt from Hantchcou. Le Comte ſays, the Entrance of the Harbour is difficult for great Ships, becauſe the Bar has never above fifteen foot Water at the higheſt Tide. 'Tis but two days Paſſage from hence to Japan, with which they have a great Trade in Silk, Sugar, Drugs, and Wines, which they exchange for Gold, Silver, and Braſs. 'Tis a large, ſtrong, populous City, has a numerous Gariſon, and is full of triumphal Arches.

4. Venchea, on a River twenty Leagues South-Weſt from Hantchcou. Martin, in his Atlas, ſays, they ſow the Fields here with Oyſter-Shells. Mr. Cunningham, F. R. S. and Phyſician to our Factory at Chuſan, on the Coaſt of this Country, who enquired into this Story, ſays, in a Letter to the Royal Society, dated in 1701. that he was told they ſprinkled the Shells with Urine, after they had taken out the Oyſters, and put them again into the Water, where they breed new Oyſters.

The Iſlands on this Coaſt, deſcribed by the ſaid Mr. Cunningham, are as follow:

(1.) Chuſan; he places it about Lat. 30. ſays, 'tis eight or nine Leagues Eaſt and Weſt, four or five South and North, and about three from the Point of the main Land, called Liampo, or Khitu. There's a good Harbour at the Weſt-end near our Factory, which is built cloſe by the Shore, in a low Valley, with 200 Houſes about it for the Benefit of Trade. There's a Town three quarters of a mile within Land, encompaſſed with a fine Stone Wall three miles round, well fortified, but the Guns ſorry, and the Houſes mean. The Governor of the Iſland lives there, with three or four thouſand Soldiers and Fiſhermen. It abounds with Cows, Buffaloes, Goats, Deer, Wild and Tame Hogs, Poultry, Rice, Wheat, Roots, Pot-Herbs and Tea, but the Goods come from the Continent, for they have no Manufacture here except lacquered Ware.

(2.) Pouto, he ſays 'tis nine Leagues from the Factory, and three miles Eaſt from the Iſland of Chuſan. 'Tis five Leagues round, inhabited by 3000 unmarried Bonzees, who have 400 Idol-Temples here, two of them large, adorned with ſtately Idols, finely carved and gilt, and there are two chief Prieſts who govern all the reſt. 'Tis noted for ſuperſtitious Pilgrimages, has ſeveral Walks cut thro the Iſland paved with Stones, and planted with Trees. The Prieſts dwell in the beſt Parts of it, and are maintained by the Offerings of the Chineſe Ships, that they may have a good Voyage to Japan. They frighten the Emperor from coming hither to ſee their Rogueries, by Stories of dangerous Thunder, &c.

(3.) Kimtong, he ſays it lies five Leagues from Pouto, in the way to Nimpo, is chiefly inhabited by Mandarins, who retire hither after they have ſerved their Offices. Here are ſome Silver Mines, but they are not allowed to be opened. The other adjacent Iſlands are either deſart, or inhabited by a few Fiſhermen, but all well ſtored with Deer.

XVI. Fokien lies South from Chekian along the Coaſt. The Sanſons ſay, 'tis not ſo fruitful as the neighbouring Provinces, but the Inhabitants have a great Trade in Japan, Formoſa, and the Philippine Iſlands. It produces Gold, Sugar, Calamba Wood, excellent Gold-Apples, Ananas, and the Inhabitants make all ſorts of Paper. Beſides the Mountain here ſhaped like their Idol Foe, Kircher ſays, that near the Lake Chung there's a fair Houſe, where they always hear the Noiſe of Bells at the Approach of any Rain or Tempeſts, and there is an Animal here exactly like a Man, but all over hairy; it feigns Laughter, and whilſt Travellers liſten to it, ſets upon and devours them. He and Martin mention a famous Bridge here ſixty Perches long and ſix broad, which coſt four Millions of Crowns. 'Tis of black hewn Stone, ſupported by 300 great Stone Pillars inſtead of Arches, and is railed on both ſides with Figures of Lions and other Ornaments. The chief Town and Harbour is Amoy, or Emuy, an Iſland at the Mouth of the Bay near the Shore, Lat. 24. Lon. 117 ½. It has a good Trade, is very populous, and has a Gariſon of ſix or ſeven thouſand Men. The Engliſh have a Factory here. Le Comte ſays, the biggeſt Ships ride ſecure here cloſe to the Land.

XVII. Quanſi, lies Eaſt from Tonquin, and South from Queicheu. It is for the moſt part mountainous, and abounds with Elephants, Tygers, and other Wild Beaſts. Kircher ſays, in the Cleft of one of their Mountains they have an Animal with four Feet and Horns, which they reckon a Fiſh, call it the Dragon's Delight, and make it capital for any one to hurt it. They have another with a Bird's Head and a Fiſh's Tail, that always turns towards the Wind; and Crabs, which ſoon petrify when taken out of the Water. Martinius ſays, they have Serpents thirty foot long, large Hogs with great ſtrong Briſtles, which they dart like Porcupines. Nieuhoff ſays, they have Trees, of which they make Linen-Cloth, which they wear more than Silk. Kao ſays, that in the Plains of this Province they have great Quantities of Rice, with which they ſerve their Neighbours, and abundance of Cinnamon, ſtronger in Scent and hotter upon the Tongue than that of Ceylon. They have Trees, from whence they draw Arack, and one of a mealy Pulp, of which they make Bread. Here is Sapao Wood, and other excellent ſorts for Cabinets. They alſo make good Porcellane here. That Author ſays, the Province is able to raiſe a Million of fighting Men.

XVIII. Quanton, or Canton, lies Eaſt and South from Quanſi, and is the moſt Southern Province of the Empire. Nieuhoff ſays, here are ſeveral ſafe Harbours and Roads, that it produces all Neceſſaries for Life, and has two Harveſts a year. Their Winter is very warm, and their Fields always verdant. Here are great Quantities of Gold, Pearl, precious Stones, Silk, Quickſilver, Copper, Steel, Iron, Saltpetre, Eagle, and other odoriferous Woods, abundance of Oſiers, of which they make Matraſſes to lie upon, and Cordage for Ships. Here's a Reed of a ſhining black like Ebony, of which they make Pipes and other things, and a Fruit, as big as a Man's Head, grows upon a ſort of Thorn-Tree, the Shell of a Gold Colour, the Pap reddiſh, and taſtes like an unripe Grape. They preſs out and drink the Liquor. Here are likewiſe Indian great and ſmall Nuts, Incas, Ananas, an Herb which makes Horſes ſtrong and ſwift, another they call the Herb of a thouſand Years, becauſe it never dies; they ſay its Decoction makes white Hairs black, and prolongs Life. They have another which ſhews which way the Wind blows, and when Storms approach. Here's alſo the Fruit called Letchi, as big as a Nut. The Meat is ſoft and wateriſh, more delicious than any of our Fruits, but ſo hot, that too much of it makes one break out in Pimples. The Natives dry it, and ſweeten their Tea with it. There's another, called The Dragon's Eye, which grows on a Tree as big as a Walnut: The Meat is white, the Juice ſharp, cool, and inoffenſive. The People are very induſtrious and ingenious. They have ſtore of Ducks and other good Fowls, and hatch their Eggs in Ovens and Dunghills. The Engliſh, Dutch, and Portugueſe drive a conſiderable Trade here; the latter trade chiefly from Macao, for which they pay the Emperor a Million of Rixdollars per annum. The chief Manufactures of the Province are Silks, Porcellane, Tin, Iron, Copper and Paper. The Viceroy of this Country takes place of all others in China: But 'tis so remote from the Seat of the Government, that the Highways are pester'd with Robbers, and the Coast with Pirates. Martinius says, there's a Pool on a Mountain here, in which if one cast a Stone, it makes a noise like Thunder, and occasions Rain. Kircher says, they have a Creature here call'd the Saffron Fish, which turns to a Bird of that Colour in Summer, when it flies over the Mountains for Food, returns to Sea after Autumn, and is chang'd again into a Fish, which the Natives count a Dainty. He says, there's another call'd the Swimming Cow, which often comes ashore, and fights with the Land Cows. Its Horns wax soft when 'tis long out of the Water, but harden again when it returns. Here are also Sea-Spiders with four Eyes, and six Feet, that eat Oysters, and vomit up Things like Pearls.

Viceroy

Places of Note here are, 1. Quanton, or Canton, in Lat. 24. near the Tropick of Cancer, Long. 113. Nieuhoff says, 'tis encompass'd with fruitful Hills, has the best Harbour in China, lies on the North-side of the River Ta, which falls into the Bay with a wide Mouth. 'Tis wall'd in for three Miles up the River, has several rich and populous Suburbs, equal to ordinary Cities. 'Tis defended towards the Water by two Rows of high thick Walls, fortified with Bulwarks, Watch-Towers, &c. and has two strong Castles built in the middle of the River, which make it impregnable. On the Land-side 'tis defended by a good Wall and five strong Castles, some within the Walls, and others on the neighbouring Hills. It exceeds all the Towns in China for Idol-Temple, Courts, Palaces, Triumphal Arches, and other publick Buildings. The Tartars took it by Treachery after a Year's Siege in 1650, when they destroy'd it by Fire and Sword for three Weeks together; but in a few Years after it was restor'd. Lockyer says, the Harbour was not in much repute with our East-India Company, till of late Years that they have prefer'd it to Amoy. He says, it lies fifty Miles up the River, we suppose he must mean the Bay; and that Vessels of an hundred Tun may ride close to the Town at low Water. The Streets are long and narrow, and pav'd with broad Stones. Here are no Carts nor Coaches. Their Silk-Men are as nice as our Mercers, live in the best part of the Town, have one Shop within another, pay great Rents, and have a curious way of rolling up their Silks with Brass Rods; and he wonders why we don't follow the Example. Their Rooms are commonly parted with a slight sort of white Deal. Their Windows are of Rattan or Cane in Summer, or have Bamboo Curtains, like Wire Grates to let down upon occasion; and in Winter they have Panes of Oyster-Shells, fix'd diamond-wise in wooden Frames. They have no Chimneys, but Stoves in the middle of their Rooms, and they commonly burn Charcoal in their Chambers. Their Houses are generally of Brick, and cover'd with Pantiles. Most of the large Streets have high Gates at each end, which are not open'd after Ten at Night without Order of the Mandarin of the Quarter upon extraordinary occasion. At that Hour the Mandarin's Officers begin their Walks, punish all Vagrants without Mercy, and are so insolent, that no body of Fashion goes abroad after Night without a privileg'd Lanthorn. Lockyer says, their Guns and Powder were very indifferent when he was there. They are well supplied with Fish, and the biggest Carps in the World. The Custom-House is kept in a great Barge, with Cabbins for the Officers. The Town and Suburbs are divided by a Wall. The Franciscans have a Monastery and two Churches here, and are maintain'd by the King of Spain. Chairmen are very common here, and will carry one six Miles for six Pence. Their Chairs are made of light Cane; and they go after the rate of five Miles an Hour. 2. Kao mentions Fuscian, a populous Village, four Miles from hence, on the same River; which, he says, is inhabited by 60000 Families, and drives the greatest Trade in all sorts of Manufactures, and especially of Silk, of any Place in China.

The Islands on the Coast subject to China are, 1. Ainam, or Hainan. It lies in Lat. 19, & 20. Long. 108. is almost circular, forty four Leagues East and West, and forty South and North. Kao says, it has thirteen Cities, a good Pearl-Fishery, and produces store of Aloes. The Sansons say, they have Aquila and Calamba Wood, Mines of Gold and Silver, abundance of Corn and Fruit, and wild and tame Animals. The Inhabitants are savage. The chief Town is Kiontcheou, near the North-east Corner of the Island, depends on the Province of Canton, and lies about four Leagues South from it. 2. Macao Island, at the Mouth of the Bay of Canton. Kao says, it is a sort of Peninsula, has a fine Harbour, is strongly fortified, has been possess'd by the Portuguese about an hundred and thirty Years. They have several Churches and Monasteries, trade chiefly in Pepper, Cinnamon, Cloves, Saunders, Pucho, a Medicinal Wood, Ebony, a Wood that dyes red, Wine, and eatable Birds-Nests. Le Comte says, the Portuguese are subject to the Mandarins in all Cases that relate to the Emperor, tho they have a subordinate Governor of their own. 3. Formosa Island being subject to China, we chuse to describe it here. It lies South-east from the Continent about forty Leagues. The Tropick of Cancer cuts it about the middle. 'Tis about seventy five Leagues from South to North, and twenty three from East to West. Nieuhoff says, 'tis full of Hills, fruitful Valleys, fine Streams, and abounds with Rice, Sugar, and all the usual Fruits, Birds, and Beasts of the Indies. The Mountains are full of Brimstone, which makes them subject to Earthquakes; and they have Mines of Gold and Silver, but not dug. It has no good Harbour for great Ships; so that they ride at Anchor about twelve Leagues from it. 'Tis very populous; and besides the Natives, has 25000 Chinese, who fled from the Tartars. The Natives are of an Olive Complexion, fat, strong, well-limb'd, and many of them so swift, as to out-run Stags. Most of them go naked in Summer, except their Privities. In Winter they wear Coats of Silk or Callico, or Stuffs of Dog's Hair, which they value much. Instead of Bread they use Rice and Roots, and make a strong Liquor of the former. The Women cultivate the Ground, and the Men hunt, or go to War. They hunt in Communities with Nets and Darts, and a Bell fasten'd to the latter, so that they follow the wounded Beast by the Sound. Their Houses are of Cane, but of one Story, rais'd three or four Foot from the Ground, with a Door at each Corner. Their Ornaments are Hangings of painted Callico, Heads of wild Beasts, Arms, and the Skulls or Bones of their Enemies. Their Utensils are of Cane or Earth. The People are reckon'd friendly, faithful, and quick witted. Every Village is a sort of Commonwealth, govern'd by twelve chosen for Life; but their Results must be approv'd by the whole Community, or are void. They always give Seniors the Precedence in every Thing. The Men don't use to marry till fifty Years of Age; but the Women as soon as they are meet. Their Courtship is by sending a Suit of Clothes and Bawbles, which if the Woman accept, the Bargain is made. They are not allow'd to cohabit till the Man be fifty Years of Age; and if the Woman be with Child before she is thirty seven Years old, their She-Priests make them miscarry, for they reckon it a Sin to keep any Children alive till both Man and Woman be of that Age. Marriages are dissolv'd upon very slight occasions, and both are at liberty to marry again. They abhor Incest, but make no account of Fornication, and little of Adultery, for which a Present of two or three Hogs is reckon'd a sufficient Atonement. They have no Courts of Justice, nor use any Corporal Punishment, but take what Compensations they please for Theft, Adultery, and Murder. They have frequently Civil Wars, when Villages combine against one another. Their Expeditions are chiefly manag'd by Surprize; and he that brings home most Heads, is reckon'd the bravest. Their Weapons are Shields, short broad Scimiters, Darts, and Arrows; but they have no Firelocks. They can neither write, nor read, but transmit their Paganism by Tradition. They have two chief Idols: One they reckon a great Man; and when it thunders, they say he is angry with his Wife, and refuses to send Rain. The other, they say, is malicious, and they worship him to prevent Mischief. Their Priestesses, for they have none else, sacrifice Beasts and Fruit, fall into Extasies, and pretend to answer such as consult them. They go to the Tops of their Temples quite naked, where they wash themselves in the sight of the People, pretend to foretel good and bad Fortune, and to banish the Devil, &c. They dry the Bodies of their Dead over a Fire, while the Company riots and dances; and after two Years bury them in the House. They believe Rewards and Punishments in a future State; and as soon as one dies, set a Vessel full of Water for the Soul to wash off its Sins, the greatest of which they reckon is to have Children before thirty seven Years old, to wear rich Cloths, or catch Crabs and Oysters in the forbidden Seasons. While the Dutch were among them, many of them were converted; but when the Chinese outed them of the Island by Surprize in 1662, they cut off all the Ministers and School-Masters that came into their hands. The Chinese sent great Numbers of People to settle here, on pretence of Trade, under one Coxinga, who had formerly been a Pirate, and pursued by the Dutch; for which he took this Revenge. The Dutch made a noble Resistance from their Forts and some of their Men of War, but were over-power'd by Numbers; and after losing 1600 Men, the rest capitulated to be sent to Batavia, but were barbarously mangled.

The INDIAN ISLANDS.

GEographers divide them into those on the Coast of India and China, nearer and more remote.

I. The first are the Maldives. They are a Chain of Islands and Rocks, which lie West and South-west from the Coast of Malabar, from South Lat. 5. to North Lat. 8. about two hundred Leagues in Length, and thirty in Breadth. They are divided into thirteen Attollons or Provinces, consisting of a great many small Islands, almost of a circular Form. They are surrounded with a Border of Rocks, which breaks the Waves, and occasions prodigious Surges. Authors differ as to their Number: Some make them 12000, and others but 1000. The Natives say, many of 'em have been swallow'd up by the Sea, which lessens them daily. The Channels betwixt them are so shallow, that one might easily wade them, but that the Bottom is rocky and sharp, and they are pester'd with ravenous Fish, that devour Men. At the Bottom of the Channels there's a Substance like white Coral, which they boil in Coco-Water, and form into Sugar or Honey. Many of these Islands are desart, and produce nothing but Cocoa-Trees and Grass. Others are overflow'd at High-water. Some abound with Crabs, and Fowls call'd Pingui's, of the Size of a Pigeon, which are excellent Meat. The Sandy Islands are white as Snow; the Sand fine as that of Hour-Glasses, and so hot that it hatches the Pingui's Eggs. The Fountains here are not good; but near the Sea, upon digging three Foot deep, they find plenty of freſh Water, which is very hot in the Night, and extreme cool about Noon. There are only four Channels betwixt thoſe Iſlands that are navigable by large Ships; and that not without danger, unleſs they have Natives for Pilots, who are all us'd to the Sea from their Infancy, and are expert Swimmers. Every Man has a little Boat, and the Rich ſeveral. They never ſail by Night, or out of ſight of Land. The Currents here run Eaſt and Weſt alternately ſix Months; but the Time of the Change is not certain, and ſometimes they ſhift North and South. The Attollons, or Cluſters of Iſlands, which form one Province or Juriſdiction, have an Entrance thro the Bar on each ſide, which is wonderfully provided by Nature for their Communication during the different Currents. Theſe Entrances are generally narrow, and on each ſide guarded with an Iſland, which if planted with Cannon, they could not be enter'd without leave. The Days and Nights here are always equal. The Climate is extreme hot, but temper'd with cold Dews by Night. The Winter begins in April, and continues till October, during which they have perpetual Rains and boiſterous Winds, but no Froſts. Their Summer begins in October, continues ſix Months, with Eaſt Winds, exceſſive Heat, and no Rain. The Natives are handſome, and of an Olive Complexion. The King and the Nobility live in the North Parts, and he baniſhes Criminals to the South. The Inhabitants are ingenious in Manufactures, and many of them in Sciences, eſpecially in Aſtrology. They are Mahometans. The Women begin to be marriageable about eight Years of Age, when they cover their Breaſts; but till then wear only a Cloth about their Middle. The Boys go naked till ſeven, when they are circumciſed. They have a peculiar Language; but their Worſhip is in Arabick, and their Ceremonies very fantaſtical. Every Man may have three Wives, if he can maintain them, but no more. The Women are laſcivious, and Divorces frequent and voluntary. Their Houſes are of Cocoa-Branches, and cover'd with the Leaves. The People are cautious and ſharp in trading, brave and well vers'd in the Uſe of Arms. They have two Harveſts per Ann. of Millet, and of another black Grain which reſembles it. They make Pottage and Bread of Milk, Cocoa, and Honey, and have a wild Root call'd Neipout, as big as one's two Fiſts, of which they make Meal and Cakes. They have another call'd Alas, which they dreſs ſeveral ways, and is a great part of their Food. They have ſtore of Herbs and Fruit-Trees, and barren ones, whoſe Leaves are very ſweet and well taſted. In ſhort, they have all the uſual Fruits of the Indies. De la Val, who was ſhipwreck'd here, ſays, there's no Place in the Indies where a Stranger can get an Eſtate ſo ſoon, theſe Iſlands lie ſo conveniently for Trade, and Proviſions are ſo cheap. He ſays, that tho the thirteen Attollons be in the ſame Climate, and all fruitful, yet the Product is ſo different, and the Natives have ſo divided themſelves, that one can't live without another: Their Artificers have little Boats, in which they live and work, and carry their Goods from one Province to another. They are infeſted with ravenous Crows, large Bats, Rats, Gnats, Dormice, Piſmires, and other Vermin; ſo that they build their Granaries on Piles 200 or 300 Paces in the Sea. They have no poiſonous Animals, but dangerous Sea-Snakes, wild Cats, and Ferrets. Here are no large Cattel, except three or four hundred that are kept for the King's Uſe, ſo that they ſeldom eat Fleſh; but they have as great plenty of Fiſh as any Place in the World for home Conſumption and Export. Here's a Tree nam'd Candon, lighter than Cork, of which they make Floats to fiſh with; and by faſtening Cables to any thing that's ſunk, boring Pieces of this Tree, running them along the Cable, and faſtening Floats of the Timber to the other end of the Cable, they hoiſted up the Cannon and Anchors of De la Val's Ship from the Bottom of the Sea. The King is abſolute, lives in the chief Iſland call'd Male, which lies in the middle of the reſt, is the moſt fruitful, and about a League and a half round. He has Governors under him in the other Provinces. His Palace is of Stone, one Story high, divided into ſeveral Courts, and many Apartments, but the Architecture mean. The Furniture is handſome; but the Beds are hung like Hammocks, to avoid the Ants. He has ſix hundred Guards, commanded by his Grandees, with Magazines of Arms, Cannon, and Ammunition. His Revenues conſiſt chiefly in a Number of Iſlands appropriated to the Crown, and Taxes upon the Product. They lade here about an hundred Ships per Annum with Cocoas, and alſo make Oil, Honey, Cordage, and Sails, and vend little Shells that contain a Creature as big as the end of one's little Finger, white, ſmooth, and glittering. De la Val ſays, they ſend forty Ships at a time with this Commodity to Bengal, where 'tis much valued. They put them up in Parcels of 12000, which they ſell for twenty Meaſures of Rice. They have alſo a ſort of Tortoiſe-Shells, white, black, and ſmooth, found no where but here, and in the Philippines. Their other Manufactures are fine Reed-Mats, and Cloths of Cotton and Silk. They have no Silver Coin, but Larins of about eight Pence apiece: All other Silver and Gold is taken by Weight. They never ſend out any, but lay it up among their Jewels as their chief Treaſure. Goods imported here are, ſome Cotton and Silk, Oil, Iron, Steel, Spices, China Ware, Rice, &c. The King engroſſes imported Goods, and ſells them to his Subjects at what rate he pleaſes in exchange for what he wants from them. Sometimes he ſends out Ships with the Product of his own Country. All Wrecks and Ambergreaſe are his; particularly thoſe call'd Maldiva-Cocoas, which are caſt aſhore here, are as big as a Man's Head, much us'd in Phyſick, and bear a great Price. The Natives fancy they come from Trees which grow in the Water.

II. The Iſle of Ceylon, ſuppos'd to be Ptolemey's Taprobane. It lies at the Entrance of the Bay of Bengal, on the South-eaſt Corner of India, or the Peninſula on this ſide the Ganges, within nine Leagues of the Coaſt of Coromandel, betwixt Lat. 6, & 16. 'Tis about eighty four Leagues from South to North, where it ends in a Point, and fifty two where broadeſt from Eaſt to Weſt. 'Twas formerly larger, till leſſen'd by Inundations. Baldæus ſays, the Air is temperate; and that 'tis the moſt fruitful Iſland in the Indies. It abounds in Rice, with which it ſupplies Coromandel. It has all the uſual Fruits of the Indies, and produces Grapes all the Year, except in the three rainy Months of the Winter. Here's alſo plenty of Ginger, Pepper, Cardamom, Nutmegs, Sugar-Canes, Mulberry-Trees, Palm-Trees, Calabaſs-Trees, Cotton, and Arack-Trees, Portugueſe Figs, Mangoes of ſeveral ſorts, and long Pepper. But Baldæus ſays, their Staple Commodity is a peculiar ſort of Cinnamon, which grows no where elſe: But we can't inſiſt on his Deſcription. There's a wild ſort as plentiful in the Woods as Hazles with us. Here are alſo Snake-Wood, Betel-Nuts, and Jackes, which ſerve inſtead of Rice when it is ſcarce. The Kernels are like Cheſnuts in Size, Taſte, and Colour; and the Tree yields a white thick glutinous Subſtance, which they uſe for Birdlime, and mix with their Rice, which makes it taſte like Eggs. Baldæus, Captain Knox, and others, give an Account of other Trees and Plants here as follows: 1. The Root-Tree, whoſe Branches turn to the Ground like Ropes, where taking root, another ſprings from them in the ſame manner, and in a ſhort time over-ſpread a large Tract of Ground. 2. The Tallipot-Tree, which is high, thick, and ſtreight, like the Maſt of a Ship. Its Leaves are ſo large, that one will cover fifteen or twenty Men from Rain. They fold up like a Fan, and when dry are ſtrong, limber, and light. The Inhabitants uſe them for Umbrellas, and the Soldiers for Tents. Their Pith makes good Bread when beat in a Mortar, and is us'd by the Natives when Corn is ſcarce. 3. The Kettule-Tree: One of them yields ſeveral Gallons of ſweet, pleaſant, wholeſome Liquor in a Day, which they boil up either into a brown Sugar, or another as good as our ſecond ſort. They make Ropes of its Leaves. The Buds taſte like Almonds, and the Wood is ſo hard that it ſerves for Peſtles to beat Rice. 4. The Orula has a Berry like an Olive. They uſe it for purging. When bruis'd, and ſteep'd in Water, it dyes a very good Black, ſerves them for Ink, and clears ruſty Iron by lying in it one Night. Here are other Shrubs of which they make Ropes and Brooms, becauſe their Smell drives away Fleas. That call'd the Capita Gouhah is us'd in Phyſick, makes very good Firing, and the Goldſmiths uſe no other Coal but what is made of its Wood.

Rattans are very numerous here, and bear a Plum, with which they make a ſour Pottage to quench their Thirſt. Here's Rice of five different Kinds, diſtinguiſh'd by their Seaſons of ripening. They have alſo Aloes of ſeveral ſorts, which the Natives eat alone, or mix'd with Rice. We refer to the above-mention'd Authors for a farther Account of their Trees, Plants, and Roots. The Dutch have planted European Roots and Pot-Herbs here with Succeſs. The Country likewiſe produces Gold, Silver, and other Metals, with all ſorts of precious Stones but Diamonds. Here's alſo plenty of Drugs; and from one ſort of their Cinnamon-Trees they draw a wholeſome well-ſcented Liquor while 'tis green, and another from the Root, that ſmells like the ſtrongeſt Camphire. They uſe the Timber likewiſe for building, and making Cabinets. The moſt remarkable Beaſts and Inſects are, firſt, Elephants, reckon'd the beſt in the Indies; Jackals, whoſe Fleſh is us'd with Succeſs againſt Conſumptions; Monkeys and Squirrels, which the Natives eat; large Crocodiles, with a Bone in their Heads, which the Natives powder, and uſe ſucceſsfully againſt the Gravel or Stone, as they do their Fat for diſperſing ſharp Humours in any part of the Body, and eat the Young-ones as choice Food. Here are ſeveral ſorts of Ants, which devour every thing they come at, except Iron and Stone. Ribeyo gives a very curious Account of them, and of their building ſtrong Vaults and Arches of Clay, where they live and breed. He ſays, the Poultry live chiefly upon them, and chuſe them before any other Food. When theſe Ants come to Maturity, they fly up in the Air as high as they can, and fall down dead. Here are ſeveral ſorts of Bees, one larger and brighter than ours. They make their Combs on the Boughs of Trees, yield Store of Honey, and at proper Seaſons the People flock in great Multitudes to the Woods, hold Torches under the Swarms till they drop; after which they gather the Honey, and boil and eat the Bees, which they reckon good Food. Here are many ſorts of large and dangerous Serpents both by Sea and Land, for which we refer to our Authors.

The Commodities of this Country are, Precious Stones of ſeveral ſorts, which are engroſs'd by the King. What they value moſt is that call'd the Cat's-Eye, becauſe of its various lively Colours, but one more than the other, according to the different Poſition of the Eye. They need no poliſhing, but are only waſh'd. Here are the fineſt Rubies in the World. Their Saphires are very large; and they have Jacinths, Verli's, and Taripoſes, which they value no more than we do Sand. In their Mountains there's ſtore of white, red, and green Chryſtal, plenty of Iron, Salt-Petre, and Brimſtone; but the King won't ſuffer them to uſe the two laſt. They ſell alſo Cardamom, Jaggory, Arack, Oil, Black Lead, Turmerick, Salt, Rice, Betel-Nuts, Musk, Wax, ſtore of Pepper, Black Coral, Pearl, and Amber, of which there are very large Pieces found on the Coaſt. The Goods imported are Velvets, Silks, red Caps, Porcellane, Spices, Opium, China Roots, Camphire, Musk, Sandal-Wood, Lead, Copper, Tin, Salt-Petre, Brimſtone, gilt Looking-Glaſſes, Glaſs-Bottles, and painted Callicoes.

This Iſland was formerly divided into nine Kingdoms; but is now under one, who is abſolute. He has a large Palace at a Place call'd Digligy, near the middle of the Iſland, Lat. 8. Long. 80. where he uſually reſides in time of Danger. The Architecture is mean; but it has many large and ſtately Gates finely carv'd, and the Poſts and Iron-Work the like. The Windows are inlaid with Silver Plates and Ebony. He has always ſtrong Guards, and Elephants in readineſs to trample down thoſe that mutiny. He keeps abundance of Concubines, which he chuſes out of the handſomeſt Women, whether married or not; and theſe are his Cooks. His Guards are commanded by Dutch or Portugueſe Captains. He demands the ſame Reverence from his Subjects as they pay to their Gods; for they are made to believe that all their Kings become ſuch after Death; but of Chriſtians he demands only that they ſhould kneel to him, and be uncover'd.

The Portugueſe were formerly ſettled here, but behav'd with ſo much Barbarity, that one of their late Empreſſes on her Death-Bed ſent for the Dutch General and another Prince, to whom ſhe committed the Government of her Children, profeſs'd her ſelf a Chriſtian, and bewail'd that ſhe had worſhip'd Idols contrary to her Conſcience. At laſt, by the Aſſiſtance of the Dutch, the Portugueſe were expell'd, and the Proteſtant Religion eſtabliſh'd here, wherein our Author Baldæus was a great Inſtrument. The Dutch poſſeſs about a fourth part of the Iſland. The other Strangers are Malabars and Moors. The former have the ſame Privilege with the Natives, who are ſuppos'd to be deſcended from them. There's a wild ſort, who live in the Woods, are expert Archers, and ſubſiſt chiefly on Veniſon and Honey, which they ſell to others. They are in a manner independent; but now and then pay Tribute in Elephants Teeth, Honey, Wax, and Deer's Fleſh to the King, for which they have Bows, Arrows, Cloth, and other Neceſſaries. The Moors live chiefly by trading to the Sea-Ports, which are all in the hands of the Dutch. The civiliz'd Inhabitants are proper and handſome, very active, and ingenious in all Manufactures, except Iron. They own the Chriſtian Religion to be better than theirs, and confeſs their Weakneſs in not practiſing thoſe moral Duties recommended by it. For the other Particulars of their Religion, Manners, and Cuſtoms, we muſt refer to the above-mentioned Authors, who are very large upon them.

III. Sumatra lies South-weſt from the Peninſula of Malacca, and is ſeparated from it by the Straits of that Name. It extends from South Lat. 4. to North Lat. 7. lies North-weſt and South-eaſt, is about ſeven hundred and eighty Miles long, and ſixty eight Leagues where broadeſt. Schouten ſays, it is diverſify'd by Mountains, Valleys, fruitful Plains, Foreſts, and Rivers. The Equinox paſſes thro the middle of it. The great Heats make the Air very unwholeſome, eſpecially during the rainy Seaſon, when moſt Evenings they have ſudden Tempeſts and Calms. This is aſcrib'd to their numerous Marſhes, from whence the Sun raiſes abundance of ſtinking Exhalations, which, with their ſudden Heats and Colds, occaſion putrid Fevers, and other languiſhing Diſtempers. The Weſt part of the Iſland is the moſt unwholeſome; but thoſe who remove to the Eaſt-ſide are cur'd of thoſe Diſtempers. The Iſland is very populous, eſpecially in the North Parts, where they have all Neceſſaries for Life. Their Mountains are high and woody, have Mines of Gold, Silver, Tin, Iron, Braſs, Copper, other Metals, and Sulphur. Here's no Wheat or Rye; but ſtore of Rice, Barley, Honey, Wax, Sugar, Ginger, and Pepper, with which, and other ſorts of Fruit, they load many Veſſels every Year. Here are alſo Diamonds, Jacinths, and Emeralds, Silk, Bezoar, Cinnamon, Mace, Cloves, Millet, Cocoas, Camphire, and Caſſia. They have Beeves, Buffaloes, Horſes, and Fowl of all ſorts. Their Wild Beaſts are Elephants, Tygers, Rhinoceroſſes, Bears, Boars, Deer, and Goats. In their Woods there are Porcupines, Serpents, and Monkeys. Their Rivers are peſter'd with Crocodiles. Here's all the uſual Fruits of the Indies, with Benzoin, Aloes, and Eagle-Wood. They have alſo Palm-Wine, Areka, and Indian Fig-Trees. Here are ſulphurous Springs, which reſemble Oil, and iſſue both from the Rocks and Earth. The Water is good againſt Lameneſs. The King of Achem forbids the exporting of it on pain of Death; ſo that what Foreigners get is by Stealth. Here are Reeds of three hundred Fathom high. The Water of the River Indapura is ſo red, that it dyes the Sea for two Leagues. This is aſcrib'd to the Bark of Oaks, which grow on its Banks. Its Water is unwholeſome, and the Air is ſo peſtilential about this River, and that call'd the Devil's-Iſle, that it kills Men and Beaſts almoſt as ſoon as they come aſhore. This River falls into the Sea on the Weſt Coaſt, South Lat. 3. Long. 100.

The Inhabitants are generally Mahometans, and ſome of 'em Pagans and Cannibals. They are of a large Stature, their Complexion black and brown. The Women are fair, and well ſhap'd, but have no Notion of Chaſtity. The Rich wear Coats of Silk or Callico, with a Napkin about their Heads. The leaſt Crimes are puniſh'd among the Natives by cutting off Hands and Feet, and capital Crimes are puniſh'd in the moſt barbarous manner: Such Offenders were formerly given to the Cannibals, who cut off their Arms and Legs, threw Pepper on their Trunk, and eat it up. The general Language is the Malayan, tho they ſpeak ſeveral others. Some divide the Iſland into thirty Kingdoms; but moſt of them are ſwallow'd up in that of Achem, which is the moſt powerful. Some Places on the Weſt Coaſt are under the Protection of the Dutch Eaſt-India Company, to whom they muſt ſell all their Silver and Gold at certain Rates. The Engliſh have their chief Pepper Factories at Jambi, on a River that falls into the Sea on the Eaſt-ſide of the Iſland, in South Lat. 2. Long. 102. and at Palimbang, near a Bay on the Eaſt-ſide of the Iſland, South Lat. 4. Long. 104. The Engliſh are much eſteem'd by the King.

The only Place of Note is Achem, on the North Point of the Iſland, North Lat. 6. Long. 95. 'Tis Capital of a Kingdom, and ſituate in a Plain on a pleaſant River, about a League and a half from the Sea. The Harbour is commanded by a Fort; and here's a large Royal Fortreſs, with ſeven Gates well fortified, according to the Indian Manner, and mounted with Cannon. There are ſeveral other Redoubts in the adjoining Marſhes for defence of the Town. The Houſes are built on Poſts, becauſe in the rainy Seaſon the City is overflow'd. Lockyer ſays, the Town is conſiderable for Trade. The Goods imported are Pieces of Eight, Chineſe Gold, Iron, Wire, Steel, Callicoes, Woollen Cloth, Quilts, Silks, Salt, Opium, Salt-Petre, Tobacco, Rice, Butter turn'd to Oil, Cotton, Muſlin, Salampores, Chints, Gunpowder, Ivory, Bees-Wax, Mortivand, ſmall Jars, Pepper, and Buffaloes from other Parts of the Iſland. When a Ship arrives, the Shabander, or chief Officer, ſwears thoſe that land to obſerve the Articles made betwixt the Natives and the Company that the Ship belongs to. He adminiſters the Oath by lifting up a Dagger in a Gold Caſe three times to their Heads. The Engliſh Eaſt-India Company had a Factory here; but recall'd it, becauſe it did not anſwer. Yet they have ſtill great Privileges; and ſuch as would enjoy them muſt paſs for Members of the Company: In which caſe, they only preſent the King and Court with ſixteen or ſeventeen Pieces of the Goods they import, and muſt hire a Houſe for vending them. Other Foreigners pay from Five to Eight per Cent. The Houſes here are paliſado'd, and ſtand apart, except in two or three of the chief Streets, where they have their Exchange, and where the Chineſe live. The Europeans dwell in a long Street near the River, and keep Fire-Arms to ſecure themſelves againſt the thieviſh Natives, who are jealous of them, and go always with Swords, Daggers, and Targets. The chief Traders have large Ovens to ſecure their beſt Goods from Fire. The Diſtempers here are Fevers, Fluxes, and Agues, occaſion'd frequently by Intemperance, or ſleeping in the Air, which is very chilly by Night, becauſe of the great Dew. Here are frequent and fierce Tempeſts of Wind, Thunder, and Lightning in a dry Seaſon. Here are four Shabanders, or Noblemen, who are Chief under the King; and Strangers muſt keep fair with them. The King is guarded by his Concubines and Eunuchs. His chief Riches conſiſt in Gold, precious Stones, and Elephants. The People are moſt noted for Conduct and Courage of any in the Iſland, or neighbouring Continent. His Subjects are perfect Slaves, great Enemies to Chriſtianity, and ſworn Enemies to the Portugueſe, with whom they have had frequent Wars. They are bold, treacherous, and bloody, and have no regard to Oaths or Promiſes. They are temperate in their Diet, which is Rice, Fiſh, Cocoa-Nuts, and Herbs. Their common Drink is Water; but the better ſort drink Palm-Wine and Arack. Here are pretty good Tradeſmen of all ſorts for Arms, Guns, Utenſils, and building Ships, &c. Here are ſeveral other Towns, Capitals of Kingdoms; but having nothing remarkable, we paſs them over, as we do likewiſe great Numbers of ſmall Iſlands on the Coaſt.

IV. Java lies Eaſt from the moſt South part of Sumatra, from which 'tis ſeparated by the Straits of Sunda. 'Tis about ſix hundred and ſixty Miles from Eaſt to Weſt, and the greateſt Breadth from South to North about an hundred. It lies betwixt South Lat. 5. & 7 ½. It has abundance of commodious Creeks, Bays, Harbours, and goodly Towns on the North Coaſt, with many ſmall Iſlands near the Shore. It had formerly many Kingdoms, but is now divided chiefly betwixt the Dutch and the King of Bantam, who poſſeſs the Weſt Parts, and the Emperor of Mataram, who poſſeſſes the Eaſt. The Atlas Hiſtorique ſays, the Air is not very hot; that the Country abounds with Pepper, reckon'd the beſt of any, and moſt of it grows in the Territories of Bantam. It abounds alſo, with Sugar, Rice, Benzoin; has Mines of Silver, Gold, Copper, and ſome Diamonds, Rubies, Emeralds, &c. but is infeſted with Serpents and Gnats. The Natives are barbarous, proud, of a brown Colour, have flat Faces, thin, ſhort, black Hair, large Eye-Brows and Cheeks. The Men are ſtrong-limb'd, and wrap Callico two or three times round their Bodies. The Women do the like; and thoſe of Faſhion have it ſtrip'd, or flower'd with Gold. The Men have two or three Wives, beſides Concubines, and are given to Lying and Cheating. Thoſe on the Coaſt are generally Mahometans, but the others Pagans. A great part of the Iſland is ſtill unknown, by reaſon of unpaſſable Foreſts, Wilderneſſes, and Mountains. Here are Tygers, Rhinoceroſſes, Black Cattel, Sheep, Hogs, with other tame and wild Beaſts, and plenty of Fiſh and Fowl. That Part poſſeſs'd by the Dutch lies on the North-ſide of the Iſland, has the Dominions of Bantam on the Weſt and South, tho that King be properly their Vaſſal, and kept by them on his Throne out of Policy.

Batavia, their chief Settlement, lies, according to the Atlas Hiſtorique, at the bottom of a Bay in South Lat. 6. 20. (Le Brun ſays, 6. 10.) Long. 107. Le Brun, who was here in 1706, ſays, it was formerly nam'd Jacatra; that it came into the poſſeſſion of the Dutch in 1619, when they built the Citadel, rebuilt the Town, made it the Seat of the Government over all the Factories which they have in thoſe Parts, and call'd it Batavia. Their Juriſdiction extends Eaſt to the Kingdom of Siribon, and Weſt to that of Bantam, South to the Sea, and North over all the neighbouring Iſlands. The Harbour and Road are good. The Town has a charming Situation, and has been very much beautified within theſe few Years. All the Avenues are planted with fine Trees on the Sides of Canals; but the natural Beauty of the Country, where there's a conſtant Verdure, ſurpaſſes all the reſt. The Town is a League and a half round, the Ditch from twelve to fifteen Fathom broad, the Walls of Brick, and one and twenty Foot high, the Rampart a Fathom and a half wide, and has five Gates nam'd after Towns in Holland. The Citadel is a quarter of a League round, has two Gates and four Baſtions well mounted with Braſs Cannon. 'Tis encompaſs'd with a very high Stone Wall, and large Magazines of Proviſion, Ammunition, and Merchandize. As one enters by the Land-Gate there's a large Square encompaſs'd with fine Houſes, thro which one goes to that of the Governor-General, which takes up the greateſt part of one Side: That of the Director-General is oppoſite to it; and the Church of the Citadel is betwixt them, where the Governor, the Director, and other Officers, have Seats according to their Rank. At the Water-Gate there's ſuch another Square, inhabited by the chief Merchants, and the Officers of the Company: Here are alſo Magazines. The Governor's Palace is built after the Italian Manner, and very richly furniſh'd, with Apartments for his Officers, Counſellors, Servants, Guards, &c. but we can't inſiſt on Particulars. There are many fine Canals in the City, with ſtately Houſes and Walks of Trees on both ſides. There are three Churches: One for the Dutch, one for the Portugueſe, and one for the Malayan Converts, who have Miniſters that preach in their own Language. The Dutch have five, the Portugueſe four, and the Malayans two, beſides others which are ſent to the Dutch Factories elſewhere. There are Forts at all the Avenues to the Town, with Guards. Here are a great many Strangers, ſome of which go almoſt naked, and others are clad in a very odd manner. The Chineſe are moſt numerous, and abound in all Parts of the Town. They are indefatigable and ingenious, eſpecially in imitating whatever they ſee done. They are the chief Husbandmen, who cultivate the Country, take care of the Sugar-Mills, and of the Places where Arack and Brandy is made. They keep all ſorts of Shops and publick Houſes, which are generally fill'd with Seamen, who conſume great ſtore of Corn-Spirits, which are very cheap. The Beef here is very lean, and they have no Mutton but what comes from elſewhere; but there's great ſtore of Fowl of all ſorts, which is their chief Proviſion. The Woods abound with Game, and particularly with Boars. Fiſh here are plenty, of all ſorts, and very good; and their Herbs and Roots the like. There are abundance of fine Houſes in the neighbouring Country belonging to the Governor, the other Officers of the Company, and rich Merchants. The Governor goes ordinarily in his Coach every Wedneſday and Saturday to divert himſelf at one of his Country-Houſes, attended by his Guards in great State, and he is likewiſe attended by them to Church; for which end they draw up in the Court before his Palace. They conſiſt of a Troop of Horſe arm'd with Cuiraſſes, a Company of Grenadiers, a Batallion of Fuſiliers, Pikemen, and Muſqueteers with Head-Pieces, attended with Trumpets, Hautboys, &c. and a Led-Horſe with rich Trappings for the Governor. The Atlas Hiſtorique ſays, the City is very populous, well built, and rich. Foreigners pay Tribute for Liberty to trade trade here. He tells us, that when the Dutch made the first Settlement, and began to fortify the Town, the Emperor of the Country came and besieg'd them both by Sea and Land, and made several furious Attacks. But one of his Generals being disgusted, came over to the Dutch, discover'd all the Emperor's Designs, and gave them one Advice which had all the wish'd for Success. He told them, that being Mahometans, they were oblig'd by Principle to purify themselves for six Days, if they happen to touch or be touch'd with the Excrements of Christians. Upon which, when they made the next Attack, the Dutch ply'd them with Stink-Pots, which they were more afraid of than Cannon and Bullets, abandon'd their Ladders, and gave over the Storm; so that the Dutch pursu'd and made great Slaughter of 'em. Nieuhoff says, there are seventeen or eighteen Islands within and without the Bay; which so break the Wind and Waves, that the Road is one of the safest in the World, and able to contain above a thousand Vessels. The Town-House lies in a spacious Square in the Centre of the City, and is a noble Structure. Here the Courts of Justice are kept, and the Senators and Directors of Military Affairs meet. The Streets all run in a streight Line, most of 'em being thirty Foot broad, well pav'd on the sides next the Houses, with Canals in the middle, and many Bridges over them; and most of the Houses have handsome Gardens for Fruit and Flowers, and adorn'd with Springs and Fountains. Here are Halls for the several Trades, Hospitals for the several Nations, Schools for teaching Latin and Greek, &c. and a Printing-House. Their Markets are well regulated; and about a League West from the Town there's an Isle call'd Ormus, where they have Magazines of Naval Stores, defended by Forts; and there's another call'd Onrust, because of the continual Noise made by the Ship-Carpenters. The Tide is very irregular; so that those of the Island are oblig'd to be continually on guard against it. Crocodiles are very large and troublesome here; so that the Company give thirty Florins for every one that's kill'd. The Grapes here are good to eat, but never ripe enough for Wine; and here's such plenty of Rice, that a Farthing's worth will last a Man a whole Day. Wine is very scarce and dear; but they make a good sort of Mum for a Penny a Pint; and the Soldiers drink a sort of Brandy distill'd from Fruit and a certain sort of Sea-Froth for the same Rate. Tea is so cheap, that the Chinese sell as much for two Pence as four People can drink, with Sweet-Meats and Surgar-Candy into the Bargain. Beef and Buffaloes Flesh is two Pence a Pound, wild Boars very cheap, and Fish almost for nothing. The Natives are such Slaves to their own Princes, that they rather chuse to be under the Dutch, and much admire the Magnificence of the Governor-General, who keeps a Royal Table, and lives every way like a King.

Bantam, the Capital of the Kingdom of that Name, lies at the bottom of a Bay, 52 miles West from Batavia. It is well fortified, according to the Indian way, and the Works mounted with large Brass Cannon. The Town is divided into several Quarters, each of which has a Guard and Barrier, and the principal Passes of the River and Harbour the like. The Palace is also well guarded, and none can approach it without leave. The Harbour is frequented by Vessels of all Nations, and both English and Dutch have Factories here. There are three Markets every day much frequented; that which Christians mostly resort to, is separate from the rest of the Town by a Marsh and Palisadoes. The chief Trade of this Place is Pepper. 'Tis about two Leagues round, but most of the Houses very sorry, being only made up of Branches of Trees, and covered with Leaves. The Harbour is very large and good: The Castle is a large square Structure, encompassed with a high Wall, Bastions, and Half-Moons, and is about a quarter of a League round. 'Tis well mounted with Cannon, and kept by a Dutch Garison of 400 Men. The East and greatest part belongs to the Emperor of Mataran or Mataram, who put his two best Towns into the hands of the Dutch, viz. Japara, formerly the Capital of the Island, and Seat of the Empire; and Cheribon; because of the Assistance they gave him against two of his Brothers, who disputed the Empire with him. Cheribon lies sixty Leagues East from Batavia, upon a Gulph on the Northside of the Island. Twelve Leagues from thence lies Taggal, near which there's a Mountain of Bitumen, which frequently takes fire. Japara lies on the East-side of the Gulph of Cheribon, 31 Leagues North East from the Town of that Name, and is the chief Factory next to Batavia which the Dutch have in the Island. Materan, where the Emperor now resides, is on the South-side of the Island, South Lat. 8. Long. 110.

The Dutch East-India Company sends to this Island, and chiefly to Batavia, every Year ten or twelve Ships, with European Goods, proper for this Country; from whence they bring back Gold, Silver, Diamonds, Pearls, Ivory, Red Copper, Tea, Porcellane, Pepper, Mace, Cinnamon, Ginger, Cloves, Silks, Cotton, Stuffs of all sorts, with other Products of all Parts of Asia, by which they make considerable Profit. There are six general Governments or Factories, which depend on this of Batavia, which are those on the Coast of Coromandel, of Amboyna, Banda, Ternate, and Ceylon, besides particular Factories which depend on these. The Governors of which are named Commandants, viz. those of the Cape of Good Hope, Macassar in the Isle of Celebes, Padan and Andragyri in Sumatra, Timor or Motir in the little Moluccas, Cochin, and several other Places on the Coast of Malabar. Their Factories in Persia and the Mogul's Country, Siam, Tonquin and Japan, do all likewise depend on the Sovereign Council of Batavia. The Isles of Madura on the North-East Corner, and that of Balia on the East, belong also to Java.

V. Borneo, lies North from Java, East from Sumatra, and the Peninsula of Malacca, is about 600 miles from South to North, and above 500 from East to West; but neither the Breadth nor the Length equal. It is situated betwixt South Lat. 6. and North Lat. 7 ½. 'Tis reckoned the largest Island in Asia. The Air is extremely hot, and the People of an Olive Complexion. It produces Store of Pepper, and the best Camphire in the Indies. Here are Mines of Gold and Diamonds, some of which are also found in the Rivers on the South-side.

Here is also Bezoar, Aloes, Musk, Brazil-Wood, Sapan-Wax, Frankincense, Mastick, Agarick, and other Gums. There is a great number of little Horses, but few Sheep or Black Cattel. 'Tis divided into several Kingdoms, but the chief and best known is that of Borneo, so named from its Capital, which lies upon a Gulph in the North West side, North Lat. 3 ½. Long. 110. Authors differ as to its Extent, some making the Houses 25000, others not above 2000. They are slightly built of Wood upon Pillars, and lie upon so many small Islands, that the Town resembles Venice. The King and those on the Coast are Mahometans, but most of the rest Pagans. They have no fixed Habit, wear Coats of Camblet and Cotton with coloured Lists. They have a good Mien, and their Women are more chaste than their Neighbours, but the Sansons say the Natives in general are thievish. Their Arms are Swords, Bucklers, Lances, Darts, and Pikes. The Dutch have some Places on the Coast, and the chief Trade of this Island. They import hither Glass, Cinnabar, Cloaths, Woollen Stuffs, and Iron, which is much valued here, and have Camphire and Pepper in Exchange.

VI. Celebes, or Macassar, lies East from Borneo, and is divided from it by the Strait of Macassar. The greatest Extent South and North is about 310 miles, and the greatest Breadth East and West 240. It lies betwixt South Lat. 5 ½. and North Lat. 2. Mandelsloe, Schouten, and Argensola, Funnel and Dampier give the following Account of it: The Natives are of a whitish Complexion, were antiently Cannibals, Pagans, and Pirates, and went all naked. Mandelsloe says, they are now Mahometans, and their Features and Customs much like those of the Siamese. The Women have their Breasts naked, but wear Breeches. The Men are still barbarous, treacherous, and haughty, but brave. Some of them use poisoned Daggers, make themselves mad with Opium, and one of them in a drunken Fit will charge a whole Regiment. Their Arms are Sabres and Trunks, from whence they blow poisoned Darts. They are addicted to Magick, and carry Charms to preserve them from Danger. The Women paint, are very lascivious, jealous, and apt to poison their Gallants. Funnel says, the Island is well inhabited, the South Part is very high Land, the Country abounds with Rice and Cocoas, and they have Gold Mines, of which the Dutch are not yet Masters, the Natives being still capable of defending them. The North-West Winds blow here from November till March, make the Coast very unsafe, and the Country is so much overflowed then, that they build their Houses on Poles ten foot high.

The principal Town is Macassar, near the South-West Corner of the Island, South Lat. 5. Long. 118. 'Tis possessed by the Dutch, who took it from the King and the Portuguese in 1660. and have made it a Place of good Trade. They have a Fort mounted with 70 Guns, garisoned by 700 Men, by which they keep the King in awe.

2. Jompandam, eight Leagues South from Macassar, is another Fortress possessed by the Dutch. There are several Islands about it, which go all under the Name of Celebes; the chief of which is Bouton, near the South East Corner, 25 Leagues long, and 10 broad. It has a large Town on the East side, named Callacassong, on the top of a Hill, inclosed with a Cocoa-Walk and strong Stone-Wall, governed by an absolute Prince of their own.

VII. The Moluccas are a Knot of Islands, which lie East and South from the Celebes, and West from New Guinea. They are all famous for several sorts of Spices, are governed by Kings, separated by narrow Straits, and dangerous of Access, because of Sands and Shelves, yet several of them have good Roads. The Soil is so dry and spungy, that it immediately swallows up Rain. They are covered with Grass and thick Shrubs, and continually verdant. They lie betwixt South Lat. 10. and North Lat. 3. The Air is unwholesome, and occasions Dropsies, for which the Natives use the Wine in the Philippine Islands, mixed with Ginger and Cloves, and the Dutch use Juice of Lemons. The general Product is Banana, Cocoas, Oranges, Lemons, Aloes, Sandal, Cinnamon, Mace, Nutmegs, Cloves, and other useful and pleasant Fruits. They have no Corn or Rice, but make Bread of a Tree called Sagu-Palm. They extract a Liquor from it called Tuas; when new, it is sweet, and very fattening, and if boiled, tastes like Wine. They draw another from Bamboos, Nipa, and Cocoa-Trees. They have no Mines, but are supplied with all sorts of Arms by Europeans. The Natives are very strong, much given to War, but lazy in every thing else. They are long-liv'd, kind to Strangers, but importunate Beggars, cheating, suspicious, and ungrateful. They have large Eyes, and long Hair on their Eyebrows, which they paint. They are of a brown or yellowish Complexion. The Women are fairer, and tolerably handsome, wear their Hair generally loose about their Shoulders, and sometimes tie it up neatly with Flowers and Feathers. They affect Bracelets of Pearl, Pendants, Necklaces of Rubies and Diamonds without distinction of Quality. Most of their Clothes are of Silk. The Malayan is their general Language, and their Religion Mahometanism. They punish Robbery severely, but easily pass by Adultery. They think it their Duty to encourage Propagation, and for that end have Officers to beat Drums at Break of Day to awake married People. Their Habits are like the Turks and Chinese. Here's a certain Wood which burns, but does not consume, tho one may rub it to powder; and here's a Shrub, whose Leaves turn to Butterflies. The five chief Islands are almost round, so that all their Harbours cannot enjoy the Benefit of both Monsons, which are the South and North-West Winds. Here's no Difference betwixt Summer and Winter, nor any regular Rains, but they come more from the North-West Quarter than from the South. Here are Serpents of above thirty foot long, and large in proportion. They creep very slowly, and are not venomous. They eat a certain Herb, after which they get upon Trees by the Banks of the Seas or Rivers, and vomit up the Herbs. This brings Fish about them in great numbers, which the Herb intoxicates, makes them float on the Surface of the Water, and become the Serpents Prey. Here are also Crocodiles, more dangerous by Land than Water. Here's one sort of Sea-Crabs that is poisonous, and another which feeds on Herbs, and is very good Meat. These Islands were first possessed by the Chinese, afterward by the Persians, and then became a Subject of War betwixt the Spaniard and Portuguese, to whom Charles V. sold them for a Sum of Money. Argensola gives an Account of the War betwixt the Portuguese and the Natives who leagued against them, expelled them because of their Cruelty, and persecuted their Converts. He gives also an Account of the Conqueſt of thoſe Iſlands by the Dutch, and of their Difference with the Engliſh about Amboyna, with the Manifeſtoes on both ſides.

Account

The chief of theſe Iſlands are,

1. Ternate, in North Lat. 2. Long. 126. lies Eaſt from Celebes, and near the North-weſt Corner of Gilolo. Argenſola ſays, 'tis eight Leagues round, has good Water, but little Proviſions, and few Cattel but Goats. They have Almonds and coarſe Tobacco, but their chief Riches are Cloves. Here are Birds of Paradiſe, and Parrots that much exceed thoſe of the Weſt Indies for ſpeaking. The King of this Iſland was the chief of all the fourteen in the Moluccas, and claimed the Sovereignty of the whole, called himſelf Emperor of this Archipelago, and had Tribute from them in Gold, Amber, and Birds of Paradiſe. Theſe Iſlands were able to raiſe 120300 liſted Men, beſides Multitudes of others, and great Numbers of Slaves. They joined the King of Ternate, to revenge the Murder of his Father upon the Portugueſe. He entered into a ſtrict Union with the Dutch in 1599. who helped him to ſhake off the Portugueſe Yoke. He kept his Court at Gamolamma on the Coaſt, which conſiſted chiefly of one Street, where there are ſtill the Remains of Churches and other Structures built by the Portugueſe, and about a League from it there is a ſmall walled Town called Malaya, near which the King has his Palace encompaſſed with Walls. The Buildings are ſlight, but he has fine Gardens, with Volaries of all ſorts of Indian Birds, and Cloſets of all the Rarities of the Indies. He is always attended by numerous Guards, Princes, and Mahometan Prieſts. He wears the Dutch Habit, of fine Cloth, Velvet, or Sattin. The Dutch have ſeveral Forts here, and are looked upon by him and his People as their Deliverers, ſo that they have all the Spice-Trade of thoſe Iſlands. The Natives Houſes are made of Wood and Cane, and every one builds his own. Their Furniture is only a few Pots to dreſs their Victuals, a Hatchet to cut their Wood, and Mats to ſit and lie on. Their Clothes are moſtly of Silk, and every one makes his own. They have no Locks to their Doors, nor any Glaſs in their Windows. Their Smiths uſe Almond-Shells inſtead of Coals. Sir Francis Drake was in this Iſland, and well received by the King, who allowed the Engliſh to ſettle Factories, and offered to ſubmit to Queen Elizabeth. Some of the Inhabitants made war ſeveral times upon the Dutch, but were reduced in 1680. and are now curbed by the ſtrong Fortreſs of Orange, where the Company have Magazines, Workhouſes, and an Hoſpital. They have alſo fortified Malaya, and without the Town the Company has a fine Garden, and a large Suburb inhabited by their Blacks.

2. Tidor Iſland is larger than Ternate, and lies South Eaſt from it. The King of Ternate aſſiſted the Dutch to take it from the Portugueſe. The Capital is of the ſame Name, and has a Harbour, but dry at low Water. The Product is the ſame with that of Ternate. The Town is very ſtrong by Nature.

3. Motir, Motil, or Timor, lies South from Tidor, and has a Dutch Fort.

4. Machian, South from Motir, almoſt upon the Line. It produces the beſt Cloves in the Moluccas, and is ſeven Leagues round. The Dutch took it from the Spaniards in 1609. and have three Forts here.

5. Bachian, lies juſt South of the Line, and has the ſame Product with the reſt. The Dutch took it from the Spaniards in 1610. have Forts in it, and pay no Cuſtom. They have alſo the neighbouring Iſland of Labova, which produces Cloves, and they keep the Natives in awe by a Fort.

6. Bouro, or Buero, in South Lat. 4. Long. 125. lies Weſt from Ceram, 'tis about thirty Leagues round. The Natives are Mahometans and Pagans, and of a black Complexion. Both Sexes go naked till twelve Years of Age, and afterwards cover only their Privities. The Women have ſuch eaſy Labour, that they immediately waſh themſelves and the Child, hang it up in a Net by a String inſtead of a Cradle, and the Men lie a Bed for them. They are ſubject to the King of Ternate, but protected by the Dutch, who have a Fort and Gariſon here, and the Blacks belonging to the Company have fine Plantations. The Product is Cocoas, and other Indian Fruits, Rice, Millet, Barley, Beans, Pot-Herbs and Tobacco. Civet Cats are cheap here; ſome of the Natives worſhip Crocodiles. Its Mountains are ſeen twenty eight Leagues at Sea, and have Foreſts of Ebony and Lary. The Shore in moſt Parts is ſteep like a Wall, and the Iſland is ſubject to Earthquakes. Here's a monſtrous Creature of the Size of a Roebuck, the Head and Mouth like a Hog, with ſmall Eyes and Ears. The Tusks in its upper Jaws are a foot long, an Inch thick, and crooked like thoſe of a Wild Boar: from the upper Jaw riſe two Horns, a quarter of a Yard long, and an Inch thick, ſmooth and hooked at the end. The Fleſh is as good as Veniſon. Nieuhoff ſays, there was a warlike People here, called Bokies, who inhabited ſeveral other Iſlands; and taking part with the Dutch againſt the King of Maccaſſar, the Dutch invited them, with their King and Queen, to Java, where they are allowed a Palace, and the People great Priviledges.

7. Timor, in South Lat. 9. larger than the other of that Name, already deſcrib'd. It abounds with Corn, Cattel, Fowl, Wax, Ginger, Cinamon, and other Fruits, has ſome Gold Mines, and Foreſts of white and yellow Sanders, of which the Natives make broad Swords, that will cut a Man thro the Middle at a Blow. The Inhabitants are Mahometans, ſome of 'em Papiſts, and others Pagan Cannibals. Their other Arms are Bows and Arrows. The Men cover the Hair of their Heads and Beards with Cane. Captain Saris ſays, the beſt Goods to ſell here are Chopping-Knives, China Frying-Pans, Porcellane, Bells, Bugles, Taffata's of any Colour but Black, and flat Pieces of Silver about a Hand's Breadth. The neighbouring Iſland of Malva yields Pepper.

8. Solor lies North-weſt from Timor, South Lat. 9. Long. 123. It was poſſeſs'd by the Portugueſe; but taken from them by the Dutch, to whom the Inhabitants willingly ſubmitted, and embrac'd their Religion. 'Tis of great Importance, becauſe it produces the beſt Sandal-Wood, which is a mighty Commodity in China. It alſo produces Gold and Pearls, and, together with Timor, furniſhes moſt of the neighbouring Iſlands with Proviſions.

9. Banda Iſles are a Knot which lie South from Ceram, betwixt South Lat. 4. & 9. So that being at a conſiderable diſtance from one another, the Dutch have rooted up all the Nutmeg-Trees that grew in ſuch as they don't inhabit, to prevent other Nations from ſettling there, and have erected Forts in the reſt. Theſe Iſlands are ſubject to Earthquakes from November to February; and in ſeveral of them there are Vulcano's and Springs of hot Water. The Iſland properly call'd Banda lies South of Ceram in South Lat. 4. Long. 128. 'Tis divided into three Parts, each of them three Leagues round, and produces without Cultivation very good Nutmegs, Mace, and Drugs, more than any other Place in the World. Argenſola gives a very curious Deſcription of the Nutmeg-Trees, and the Fruit, which we can't inſiſt upon. The Natives make an admirable Oil of Mace for Diſeaſes of the Nerves, and others proceeding from too much Cold; and eat the Nutmegs as a Remedy againſt ſtinking Breath, to fortify the Stomach, and clear the Sight. Their other Fruits are Bananas, Oranges, Cocoas, Olives, &c. Moſt of the Inhabitants are Mahometans, and ſome of them Pagans. They have Veſſels of War with three or four Cannon each. Their Arms are Carbines, Bucklers, large Scimiters, Lances of hard Wood, and Darts. They have alſo Back and Breaſt-Plates, are revengeful, glory in bringing home the Heads of their Enemies, and ſhewing their bloody Swords. Some of them live an hundred and thirty Years. Fruit is their chief Food; and the Women till the Ground, and do all the Drudgery. They have three Harveſts per Ann. viz. in February, July, and October. Their Government is a ſort of Commonwealth under a Shabander, or Governor, who manages all with the Approbation of the People. The Natives have ſeveral times revolted againſt the Dutch, being incited to it by the Engliſh and others; but are now entirely reduc'd. At the Weſt-end of the Iſland there's a Mountain with three hundred and twenty four ſtone Steps to the Top, where the Dutch have a Fort, and at the foot of it a Town for their Negroes, which is alſo well fortified; and they have likewiſe Fortifications and good Intrenchments at every Landing-Place, beſides ſeveral Redoubts. Their chief Factory is at Nera, which is well fortified, and is the Reſidence of their Governor and his Council. The Commodities chiefly imported here are Rice, Cloths of Coromandel, Cambaya, and Malacca, Broad Cloth, Stammel, Black and Red Calicoes, China Boxes, Baſins, light-colour'd Damasks, Taffatas, Velvet, Gold Chains and Coins, Silver Cups gilt, Head-Pieces, Guns, and damask'd Sword-Blades.

10. Amboyna lies near the South-weſt Corner of Ceram, Lat. 4. Long. 128. Nieuhoff ſays, 'tis twenty four Leagues round, and cut by a vaſt Bay on the South-weſt, where there's a good Harbour. It produces ſtore of Cloves. Part of it is ſubject to the Dutch, and the reſt to the King of Ternate. The Inhabitants are a Mixture of Mahometans, Papiſts, and Proteſtants. The Product is Millet, Tobacco, Cocoa-Nuts, Potatoes, Pinang, Oranges, Lemons, Citrons, Bamboos, and Nutmegs; but the chief is wild Cloves. Here are many high ſteep Mountains, with Springs of freſh Water; and the Valleys are planted with fine Walks of Trees. The Air is not very wholeſome; and the Inhabitants are liable to a Diſtemper like the French Pox, but not ſo painful, nor occaſion'd by Venery; ſo that 'tis aſcribed to the Quality of their Air, and the too much Uſe of Cocoa-Nuts, Sea-Fiſh, and a Liquor call'd Saguwer. The Natives diſtil an odoriferous Cephalick Spirit from the green Cloves and Leaves, and likewiſe extract an Oil from them, both excellent againſt the Palſey, and they preſerve Cloves and Sugar for the ſame end. Here's a ſort call'd Royal Cloves, bigger, and dearer than the reſt. The Natives wear large Whiskers, and are naked all but the Middle. They buy their Wives; and if they prove barren, reckon the Marriage null. The Women are luſtful, fond of Strangers, and frequently poiſon thoſe who refuſe them. The Natives have Veſſels, whoſe Stern and Poop are ſhap'd like the Head and Tail of a Dragon. Their Weapons are Bows, Arrows, Halfpikes, Javelins, Scimiters, Targets, Firelocks, and poiſon'd Darts, which they blow from hollow Trunks. Thoſe that dwell on the Hills don't ſubmit to the Dutch. The Iſland is ſubject to Earthquakes, which makes them build their Houſes low.

The chief Fort and Staple of the Dutch is call'd Victoria, and lies two Leagues Eaſt from the Harbour. 'Tis well fortified, and has a good Gariſon. They have a Church, where Worſhip is perform'd in the Dutch and Malayan Tongues. They have ſeveral other Forts in this Iſland, which is reckon'd their beſt Settlement in the Eaſt Indies, next to Batavia. It has been ſeveral times taken and retaken by the Dutch, Portugueſe, and Spaniards; but the Dutch have kept poſſeſſion ever ſince 1655. There's a Folio in Dutch of the Rarities of this Iſland, printed in 1705, with Copper Plates repreſenting the Curioſities. It conſiſts of eighty ſeven Chapters, each of which treat of ſome extraordinary Product. There are ſeveral other Iſlands depending on this, whoſe Product is much the ſame. Our Writers inſiſt much upon the Treachery and Cruelty of the Dutch to our Factory here in 1623: But their Writers lay the Blame upon our Factory, the Chief of whom plotted againſt theirs, and confeſs'd it; for which they were puniſh'd. The Curious may find a large Account of this Matter in Argenſola, and the publick Papers which paſs'd betwixt the Nations on that Subject.

11. Ceram lies North from Amboyna, South Lat. 3. Long. 128. is about ſixty four Leagues from Eaſt to Weſt, and twenty where broadeſt. Schouten ſays, it is Winter in the North Part, when 'tis Summer in the South. The Inhabitants are Pagans and Mahometans, and ſubject to the King of Ternate. Middleton, in his Voyage, ſays, the Pagans are Cannibals, and roaſt Chriſtians alive, which he aſcribes to their former barbarous Treatment by the Portugueſe. They have a Tributary King of their own, who dwells at Cambello, the chief Town of the Iſland, with a Harbour; but the Dutch are poſſeſs'd of the Fortreſs which commands it.

12. Gilolo lies on both ſides the Line, but moſt of it on the North-ſide, as far as North Lat. 3 ½. 'Tis about an hundred and twenty Miles from South to North, and forty eight Leagues from Eaſt to Weſt; but much indented by Bays. The Product is Rice and Saga. The Inhabitants are tall, well proportion'd, but cruel, and were formerly Cannibals. They are govern'd by a King of their own. The Air is unwholeſome. Here are abundance of Tortoiſes, and ſmall Lizards of extraordinary Beauty. They are lively ſwift Creatures, and prey upon Flies.

VIII. New Guinea lies East from Gilolo and Ceram, and is the most North Part of that call'd Terra Australis Incognita. What Part of it is known lies South of the Line, which runs thro the North-west Corner of it. Authors differ about its Extent, and whether it be an Island or Continent. Herrera, in his Novus Orbis, thinks it to consist of a great Number of Islands. Our Sir Richard Hawkins cruiz'd about them forty five days; he says, there are many Islands and convenient Harbours on the Coast, that the Soil is good, and the Inhabitants of a black swarthy Complexion. Dampier, in his third Volume, gives a particular Description of the Plants and Shrubs of this Country and New Holland, which we refer to. Tasman says, the Natives go naked, and cover their Privities with Leaves. They mark their Foreheads with a red Stroke from Ear to Ear, and paint their Hair grey or red. He says, they had nothing to barter but large Snail-Shell, with which they made a strange noise, and smelt what they receiv'd. That call'd Schouten's Island is plac'd by Tasman in South Lat. 54. Min. The Inhabitants were a nimble People, brought the Dutch Fruits like Melons, and the Seas were full of Fish; but so deep, that the Dutch could find no Ground.

Mia, another of those Islands, two hundred and sixty Miles South-east from Schouten's, and the most East which the Dutch saw on this Coast, abounds with Cocoas, and other East Indian Fruit.

Jamna, which lies a little to the East, has the same Product. The People were very docile, could perfectly repeat whatever the Dutch said. Most of them had red Roses tied about their Heads, adorn'd with Feathers, and had Bone-Rings thro their Ears, with Shells hanging to them shap'd like Spurs, Strings of Hogs Teeth about their Necks, Strings of Shell about their Waists, with a small Lappet before their Privities, and a Hog's Tooth, or Splinter of a Cane thro the Gristles of their Noses.

Another of these Islands, divided from New Guinea by a Strait on the West, was call'd New Britain by Captain Dampier, who discover'd it in 1699. 'Tis about two hundred and sixty Miles long, and two hundred and forty broad, with a great Number of Islands, Capes, and Harbours about it.

Carpenter's Land, so call'd from a Dutch Commander, who discover'd it, lies South of New Britain, between Lat. 10 & 20.

IX. New Holland lies South from New Guinea. The most northerly Part is in South Lat 10. It was discover'd by the Dutch in 1644, and is reckon'd 1600 Leagues long. Dampier says, the Tides on the Coast are very regular, the Flood running North by East, and the Ebb South by West. He says, the Coast, for about sixteen Leagues North-east by East from Lat. 16. 50. is even low Land, produces several sorts of Trees unknow to us. It abounds with Manatees and Turtles, but few other Fish. The People, he says, are the most miserable and beastly in the World, more nasty than the Hottentots, and have neither Houses nor Garments. They are tall, streight, thin, have great Heads, round Foreheads, and large Brows, great Bottle-Noses, full Lips, and wide Mouths. None of them have the two Foreteeth of their upper Jaws, nor one good Feature. Their Hair is black, short, and curl'd: Their Skins as black as a Coal. Their Eyes are half shut, because they are so infested with Flies, that they can scarce keep them out of their Mouths. They tie the Rind of a Tree round their Waist, with long Grass or Leaves under it to cover their Nakedness. They lie in the open Air, live in Companies of twenty or thirty, Men, Women, and Children together; have no Food but small Fish, which they catch by making Stone-Wears across little Branches of the Sea, to which the Tides bring them, and leave them at low Water. They have no Instruments to catch great ones. These small Fish, with Cockles, Muscles, and Periwinkles, they broil on Coals, and divide equally. When they have eaten, they lie down till the next low Water, and then, be the Weather never so bad, such as are able go down to the Wears for more Fish; for their Country produces nothing else that is eatable, and they have no Instruments to catch or kill Birds or Beasts. Their Arms are wooden Cutlasses and Launces, or rather long Poles sharp at one end, and harden'd by Fire. Where they lodge they make up a Fire with a few Boughs on the Wind-side. Dampier was here in 1688. He says, the Natives were very shy, and set light by every thing he offer'd them. He gave some of them Clothes, to oblige them to carry Water aboard his Ship; but they would not do it. They have no Boats, but swim in Droves from one Island to another. He describes a Bay in this Country by the Name of Sharks, because it abounds with those ravenous Fish. We refer to him for the Birds, Fowls, and Shrubs he saw here. Burgo-Master Witsen, in his Observations upon this Country, mention'd in our Philosophical Transactions, says, the Soil in general is very barren; that here are no fresh Rivers, nor four-footed Beasts, except one of the size of a Dog, with long Ears, which lives either by Land or Water. He takes notice of Birds-Nests here so large, that six Men could not fathom them; but does not describe the Fowls.

X. Diemen's Land was discover'd by the Dutch in 1642, and call'd after the Governor of their East-India Company. Tasman, the Discoverer, places it in Lat. 42. 25. and Long. from Teneriff, 163. 50. He saw none of the Natives, but only their Fires at a distance; and found Trees two Fathom and a half thick, and above sixty Foot high to the Branches, with Steps cut in the Trunk by the Natives, to climb up to the Birds-Nests.

XI. New Zealand. Tasman places it in South Lat. 42. 10. He says, the Inhabitants are couragious, strong, tall, and thick, have a Complexion betwixt Yellow and Brown, harsh Voices, black, long, thick Hair, ty'd up on their Crowns, and a large white Feather over it. Their Clothes are square Pieces of Mat and Callico about their Middle, but their upper Parts are naked. They hang a square Plate about their Necks, have Clubs for Arms, and a Mooriſh Trumpet for Musick. The Country is fruitful, but meanly inhabited, and little cultivated.

XII. The Land of Papous, or Blacks. Argensola says, it consists of a great Number of Isles, encompass'd with Sand and low Ground. Some place them East of the Islands of Banda, and join them to New Guinea; but the Sansons separate them from it. Argensola says, their Kings keep a Correspondence with him of Ternate; that there are some Whites among them, whose Eyes are so weak, that they can't endure to see the Sun. The People in general are thin, lazy, perfidious, ignorant, and clownish. Their Commodities are Gold, Ambergrease, and Birds of Paradise, in which they pay their Tributes. They don't transport their Gold, nor make any Use of it but for Ornament.

XIII. The Philippine Islands. They were so call'd from Philip II. of Spain in 1565, when the Spaniards made the first Settlement there. They were first discover'd by Magellan in 1520. They are reckon'd twelve hundred, of which five or six hundred are pretty considerable. They lie South of the Molucca's, betwixt North Lat. 5 & 19. and extend about sixteen Degrees in Longitude. When the Spaniards came, the People went naked, and had no Arms; so that they were an easy Conquest. They are divided into several Nations. Most of 'em are Mahometans, and wear the Turkish Habit, but no Shoes nor Stockins. The Women have long black Hair, tie it in a Knot behind, and are fond of white Men. The Air here is very hot, with little difference of Seasons; but the Rains begin in May, and last three Months. The chief Product of the Islands is Gold, Rice, the usual Indian Fruits, Beasts, Fowl, Fish, and Insects, with good large Nutmegs, which they don't cultivate, lest it should tempt the Dutch to attack them. They neither allow the English nor Dutch to trade hither, lest they should discover both their Riches and Weakness.

The chief Islands are,

1. Mindanao, betwixt North Lat. 5 & 10. Long. 123, &c. 'Tis an hundred Leagues East and West, and seventy six North and South. The Hills are rocky, and produce many Trees unknown to us. The Soil is fat, the Valleys well water'd, and abound with Ever-Greens, Nutmegs, Cloves, &c. The Inhabitants are of different Nations and Languages, tawny, but lighter than most other Indians. Their Stature is low, their Eyes small, their Noses short, their Mouths large, their Lips thin and red, their Teeth black, their Hair of the same Colour, and lank. They are ingenious and nimble, but lazy, and implacable when provok'd. They offer their Women to Strangers for small Presents, and take it ill if they be refus'd. The Spaniards had several Forts here, but were expell'd by the Natives, who are afraid of the Dutch, but invite the English to settle among them. The Capital Mindanao lies upon a River in the South-side of the Island, Lat. 7. Long. 123. Their Houses stand upon Posts, from fourteen to twenty Foot high, and consist of one Floor, with many Partitions. The Sultan's House stands on an hundred and fifty Posts, higher than the rest, with broad Stairs leading up to it. He has twenty Iron Cannon mounted in his Hall, and his Generals have some in theirs. The Floors are well matted, but they have no Stools or Chairs. Their Diet is Rice, Saga, Fish, Buffaloes, Flesh, and Fowls, which they take up with their Fingers, and use no Knives, Spoons, or Forks. Besides their own Language, they speak the Malayan, and some of them Spaniſh; but being Mahometans, their Devotion is in Arabick. Their chief Trades are Goldsmiths, Blacksmiths, and Shipwrights, who build good Vessels for any Use. They exchange Gold, Bees-Wax, and Tobacco for Callicoes, Muslins, and China Silks. They have many Wives; are govern'd by an absolute Sultan, who is carried about in a Couch on Mens Shoulders, and attended by Guards arm'd with Swords, Lances, and Bayonets. The City is about a Mile long, and almost as broad. The River is narrow, has but eleven foot Water on the Bar at Spring-Tides, and abounds with Worms, which eat through Ships not well sheath'd. The West Winds are dangerous in this Harbour. The People are subject to a dry Scurff, with violent Itchings, the Small Pox, Agues, Fluxes, and Griping of the Guts. When the Inhabitants of this Island make War, they fight no pitch'd Battels, but encamp in wooden Forts defended by Guns, endeavour to surprise their Enemies, and neither give nor take Quarter. Several other Islands lie about this, with good Harbours, subject to Mahometan and Pagan Kings, who keep a good Correspondence with him of Ternate, and are Enemies to the Portugueſe and Spaniards.

2. Paragoa, N.W. from Mindanao, betwixt Lat. 10 & 11. is eighty Leagues long, and twenty broad. Their King is Vassal to him of Borneo. The Product is Figs as thick as a Man's Arm, and half as long, and others about a Hand's Breadth, which are better than the large ones. Here's store of Rice, of which they make good Wine.

3. Mindora, N. E. from Paragoa, Lat. 13. Long. 118. It has a Town of the same Name, Mines of Gold, and produces Pepper. It is about thirty two Leagues long, and twelve broad.

4. Tandaya, or Philippine, which, being first discover'd, gave Name to the rest, lies in Lat. 13. Long. 124. is the pleasantest of them all, fruitful, rich, of easy Access, and the Inhabitants civil.

5. Cebu, Lat. 11. Long. 123. lies in the middle of other Islands. The Spaniards have a Town on the East-side call'd Jesus, with a good Harbour. Magellan contracted an Alliance with the King of this Island, and was kill'd in his Quarrel by the King of Matan.

6. Manila, or Lucon, the northermost of these Islands of any Note, lies betwixt Lat. 14 & 19. Long. 118. is about two hundred eighty Miles South and North, and two hundred forty East and West, but indented by Bays on both sides. The chief Town Manila, near a Bay on the West-side of the Island, Lat. 14. Long. 119. is the Residence of the Spaniſh Viceroy, who commands the Islands, and the See of an Archbishop. 'Tis well built, large, strong, has a good Citadel and Harbour, but of difficult Entrance, because of the Rocks that lie at the Mouth of the Bay. The Houses are spacious and strong, the Streets large and regular, with a noble Market-Place in the middle. Here are many fair Churches and Convents. The Inhabitants are reckon'd six thousand. Many ingenious Chineſe Merchants and Tradesmen, who are curious Artificers in Gold, Silver, and Silk, live in the Suburbs. Ships from China, Portugal, and Spain, trade hither; and two large Ships from Acapulco in the West Indies come hither once a Year, which are said to gain 400 per Cent. by their Trade. The Natives who live on the Country are subject to the Spaniards, and Papists. Sir Thomas Cavendish says, that the Princes and Inhabitants of these Islands offer'd him to join with the English, to pay them Tribute, and shake off the Spaniſh Yoak. Gemelli says, there are hot petrifying Springs here, which turn live Fish into Stones. There are 39500 tributary Indians in the Island: Some of 'em wear a Plate of Massy Gold on their Foreheads two Inches broad, and lin'd with Taffafata, three Gold Pendants in each Ear, and Rings in their Ancles, which tinkle as they go.

New Segovia, at the North end of the Iſland, is the ſecond Town in Dignity, the See of a Biſhop, and has a Fort with a Governor and Gariſon.

We can't inſiſt on the reſt of the Iſlands, but ſhall give the following brief Account of them from the Sanſons and Gemelli. In general they produce Iron, Steel, Saffron, Honey, Wax, long Pepper, other Spices, and Drugs of all ſorts, with precious Stones, vaſt Quantities of Ambergreaſe; and there's a Pearl-Fiſhing near that call'd the Iſle of Negroes. Gemelli ſays, they have not only Mines of Gold, but a great deal in the Sand of the Rivers, out of which they gather annually the Value of 200000 Pieces of Eight. He mentions a Fruit here of ſuch admirable Virtues againſt moſt Diſeaſes, that the Dutch give double the Quantity in Gold for it. 'Twas but lately diſcover'd, twiſts about Trees like Ivy, and bears a Fruit like a Melocotoon, with eight or ſixteen Kernels as big as Nuts, that are powerful Antidotes againſt Poiſon. They have many medicinal Herbs good for Wounds, and all Diſeaſes; and Baths ſo hot, that they immediately ſcald a Crocodile to death, and the Smoke of 'em is as hot as the Flames of a Furnace. Here are many remarkable Animals unknown to us. The chief of 'em are, 1. Flying Cats, with hairy Wings on both ſides, by which they fly from one Tree to another. 2. Serpents call'd Ibitin, of a great Length, that hang by the Tail on Trees, draw Men and Beaſts that paſs by them with the Force of their Breath; and the only way to prevent it is to beat the Air betwixt them and the Serpent. 3. A Sea-Fowl call'd Tavon of the ſize of a Hen. They lay their Eggs in a light ſandy Ground, which are all Yolk, and when the Chickens are hatch'd, as whole and ſweet as at firſt. The Spaniards eat the Chickens and Yolks together. 4. A Woman-Fiſh, ſo call'd becauſe its Breaſts are like Womens. Their Fleſh eats like Pork, and their Bones are us'd to ſtop Bleeding and Coughs. 5. Shell-Fiſh ſo large, that one of 'em will dine a Boat's Crew. 6. Large Bats, as good as Rabbits. The ſame Author ſays, the Chineſe trade hither with Silks, Cottons, Porcellane, Gunpowder, Quickſilver, Iron, Steel, Copper, and other Metals, Houſhold Stuff, Pictures, Lace, and Womens Dreſſes.

Gemelli ſays, the Mountains and thick Woods are inhabited by Blacks, who differ from the reſt of the Natives, are barbarous, go naked all but their Privities, and feed on Fruits, Roots, Monkeys, Rats, Snakes, and what elſe they can get. The Womens Ornaments are Bracelets of Ruſhes and Indian Canes. They have no Laws nor Government, but obey the Heads of Families. They lie at Nights in hollow Trees, or under Mats. They will not ſuffer the Inhabitants of one Mountain to go to another; but fight deſperately in defence of their Property. They hate the Spaniards ſo much, that when they kill one, they invite all their Friends to drink out of his Skull. They uſe poiſon'd Arrows, and bore their Points, that they may break in their Enemies Bodies, and make the Wound incurable. They worſhip Stocks, Stones, and ſeveral deform'd Statues. Some of 'em are Mahometans. When they contract Friendſhip, they drink a Drop of one another's Blood in Liquor, and think themſelves oblig'd to take one another's Part againſt all Mankind. They bury alive Children that are born with any Defect.

Others of the Natives are more civiliz'd, and follow much of the Chineſe Cuſtoms. They ſalute People of Quality by bowing low, clapping both their Hands to their Jaws, or ſtretching them out, and lifting up one Foot. Some of them ſit before their Superiors as if they were eaſing their Bodies, think it ill Manners to do otherwiſe, or ſpeak till they be ſpoke to. They had formerly a Cuſtom that none muſt wear Red till he had kill'd a Man, nor a ſtrip'd Garment till he had kill'd ſeven. Thoſe of better Note wear Jewels: Others pink their Skins, and ſtrew Powder upon 'em to make the Impreſſion laſting. They make Wines of Cocoas and Sugar-Canes. They build their Houſes near Rivers and Lakes, where they bath at the Riſing and Setting of the Sun. They worſhip the Images of their Anceſtors; reckon all that are kill'd by Thunder, Sword, or Crocodiles, to be deify'd; forbear to cut down certain Trees, becauſe they fancy the Souls of the Deceaſed dwell in them, and that they ſee Apparitions on the Tops of them. They live together in Tribes; and if any one change, he muſt pay a Quantity of Gold.

Gemelli reckons in all the Iſlands 250000 Spaniards and Indians ſubject to Spain, tho the twelfth Part of the Natives be not conquer'd. The King of Spain maintains 4000 Soldiers in the Country; and he ſays, the Crown ſpends 250000 Pieces of Eight per Ann. more than it receives from hence.

XIV. The Iſlands of Ladrones, or Thieves, lie Eaſt from Manila, and North-eaſt from the Philippines, betwixt Lat. 14 & 22. in about Long. 140. They were ſo call'd becauſe of the thieviſh Temper of the Inhabitants. The Spaniards under Magellan landed here in 1520, burnt their Houſes, and kill'd ſeveral of them, becauſe of their Theft and Robbery. They have little Proviſions, go quite naked, and have no Government. Their Complexion is Olive; their Hair black and long. They paint their Teeth black and red, and anoint with Oil of Cocoa. The Women are better featur'd; and their Hair ſo long, that it trails on the Ground. Their Houſes are of Timber, cover'd with Boards and Fig-Leaves. Their Beds are Palm-Mats and Leaves. Their Weapons Clubs and long Poles with iron Heads. Their Diet is Fruit, Fowls, and Fiſh. Their Canoes are oddly contriv'd, with Sails of Date-Leaves. There are ſeveral Vulcano's in the North Iſlands; and ſome of them have Cochineal.

The Empire of JAPAN.

IT lies Eaſt from China, betwixt Lat. 30 & 38. and betwixt Long. 128 & 145. Schouten ſays, it conſiſts of the great Iſland of Niphon, and others about it: But 'tis not yet known whether the North Part of the great Iſland joins to the Land of Jeſſo. Theſe Iſlands were formerly different Kingdoms, but now reduc'd into one potent Empire. The Climate is very cold towards the North, where they have much Snow in December, January, and February. In other Reſpects the Country is pleaſant and fruitful, well water'd, verdant almoſt the whole Year, and abounds with all manner of Neceſſaries. They have plenty of Rice and Tea, and in ſome Parts Wheat and Barley. Here are rich Mines of Gold and Silver, and very good Tin. They have alſo a Fiſhery of Pearls, red for the moſt part, and as much valu'd by the Natives as the white. The Portugueſe were the firſt Europeans who diſcover'd this Country, about 1534 or 1541, when ſome of their Merchants were drove hither by a Tempeſt. The Author of the Hiſtory of the Church of Japan, tranſlated from the French, and printed at London in 1700, ſays, that all the Iſlands taken together are above ſix hundred Leagues in Compaſs, two hundred in Length, and from ten to ſixty in Breadth. Schouten makes the Length about three hundred and fifty, and the Breadth an hundred ſixty. The French Jeſuits ſay, that Japan lies nearer Mexico than China; and that both China and Japan are found by Obſervation to be five hundred Miles nearer Europe than is commonly believ'd.

Some divide it into ſixty eight Kingdoms, whoſe Kings are abſolute within themſelves, have frequent Wars with one another, but are all ſubject to the Emperor, who, Schouten ſays, ſurpaſſes all the Monarchs of Europe in Splendor, has abſolute Power over the Lives and Eſtates of his Subjects, and diſpoſes of them at pleaſure for very ſlight Faults. They derive their Origin from China, from whence they were baniſh'd for Rebellion, and therefore affect many Cuſtoms quite contrary to the Chineſe. The Vaſſal Kings, Princes, and Noblemen are very rich, but ſpend it in Luxury. The People are divided into Magiſtrates, Prieſts, Soldiers, Tradeſmen, and Peaſants. They are generally ſubtle, ambitious, quick of Apprehenſion, argue with Cunning and Vivacity; but are plung'd in groſs Idolatry, hard hearted, uncharitable, revengeful, and deceitful, yet affect a modeſt and civil Behaviour. They are capable of Fatigue, patient in Adverſity, induſtrious, and love the Uſe of Arms and Sciences. They hate all Nations who are not of their own Religion, but the Dutch, who they think have none, and therefore allow them to trade here: But as ſoon as their Veſſels arrive, all the Men are oblig'd to land, and every thing is taken out of the Ships, not excepting their Sails, Cannon, and Ammunition, but reſtor'd when the Ship is loaded and ready to ſail. Their Habits are much like thoſe of the Chineſe, and other Indians. Few of them have Beards or Muſtachio's. They love black Hair and Teeth. Many of 'em ſhave great part of their Heads, and tie what Hair is left behind in their Necks. The better ſort uſe Fans and Umbrella's when abroad; but the common People go bare-headed in all Seaſons. The Women ſeldom go out but with their Husbands, and thoſe of Quality are very magnificent in their Apparel and Retinue. Their Houſes are of Wood, handſomely built; they have few of Stone, becauſe of Earthquakes, on which account all their Structures are low. The Roofs lie ſome Feet over the Walls, under which they have pleaſant Galleries. Thoſe of Note affect large Gardens and Houſes, with handſome Apartments well furniſh'd, and adorn'd with fine Screens and curious Paintings: But their Houſes being of Timber, are very ſubject to Fire; ſo that 100000 were burnt in Iedo their Capital in 1657.

The Country is very populous, full of Towns, Villages, and Temples in ſhady Groves, where the Prieſts live round them. Their Language is as compendious as the Chineſe, but their Characters differ; and they read from the right Hand perpendicularly downwards. Mr. Cocks, chief Reſident of the Engliſh Factory at Firando, ſays, they exceed all the World in Feaſts and Entertainments, to which they invite their Dead by calling at their Graves. They march thither with Lamps, where they eat and drink for ſeveral Nights together; and toward the end of the Feſtival go about the Town with Flags, beat upon large Pans, and dance at the Temples, Sepulchres, and Doors of great Men. They love Balls, Plays, and Maſquerades, in which their Kings and Princes act the chief Part, and treat the Company. When a Chriſtian dies, the Corps muſt not be brought within ſight of a Pagod; ſo that they are ſometimes carried two or three Miles about. They will not ſuffer them to be carried in any of their Boats; and will rather let 'em rot above Ground than bury them.

The Vulgar ſpeak to the Mandarins on their Knees; and if any of 'em be on board a Veſſel, they don't ſpeak a Word, but the Pilot directs the Steerſman by waving a Fan.

When People of Quality marry, they go in Coaches, follow'd by their Kindred and Friends to a high Place, where the Bonzi, or Prieſt, marries them at the Foot of an Idol. The Bridegroom and Bride have Flambeaus in their Hands, and light two Lamps at the ſame time, while the Prieſt pronounces the Words. Then their Friends expreſs great Joy, and give preſents to the Bride, who throws all her Toys ſhe play'd with during her Infancy into the Fire. Then they ſacrifice Beeves to the Idol, and return in Pomp with a Crowd of Muſicians to the Bridegroom's Houſe, from whence Flowers are thrown out upon the Spectators, and the Rejoicings laſt a Week. The Men are allowed Concubines; but the Women are ſtrictly guarded, and Husbands on the leaſt Umbrage may kill or divorce them. Adulteries betwixt two married Perſons are ſeverely puniſh'd; but for preventing it they allow publick Brothel-Houſes. Many of their Women make themſelves miſcarry, and murder their Children, which is reckon'd no Crime in poor or unmarried People, unleſs the Children be Males, and then the Emperor breeds them for War. They waſh the new-born Infants in cold Water.

Schouten ſays, they worſhip the Devil, and the Head of their Religion, whom they call Dair. They have many Sects, and worſhip the Inventors. Their Temples are curiouſly carv'd and gilt, fill'd with monſtrous Idols, ſome of 'em dedicated to Devils, Apes, Rivers, and Fiſhes. Their Prieſts ſhave their Heads, have Bonnets of Oſier, wear long Robes, and are under a General. They pretend to Auſterity, but are great Villains; they frequently foretel Fires, which they ſay will be rais'd by the Devil; whereas they themſelves employ Incendiaries, that they may have an opportunity for Plunder. Xavier ſettled the Roman Religion here in 1549, and the Jeſuits who ſucceeded him made Multitudes of Converts: But Schouten ſays, they were extirpated upon the Diſcovery of a Plot by the Portugueſe and new Converts, to make themſelves Maſters of the Empire; ſo that all the Chriſtians were maſſacred in a few Years. The Jeſuits ſay, this was a Plot forg'd by the Dutch, to ruin the Spaniſh and Portugueſe Trade here. But the popiſh Author of the Hiſtory of the Church of Japan owns, that it was owing to the Inſolence of ſome Franciſcans, who valuing themſelves as Ambaſſadors from the King of Spain, would preach publickly in the Churches, contrary to the Emperor's Orders, and the Advice of their Friends. This was aggravated by the Vanity and Pride of a Spaniſh Captain, who being ſhipwreck'd on the Coaſt, and his Ship and Goods ſeiz'd by the Emperor's Order, he boaſted of his Maſter the King of Spain's Power, ſhew'd a Map of his Dominions in the Eaſt and Weſt Indies; and being ask'd by one of the Tributary Kings and the Emperor of Japan's Miniſters, How the King of Spain came by thoſe Countries? he anſwer'd, By ſending Miſſionaries firſt, then Troops, and joining with the new Converts. This being reported to the Emperor and his Grandees, it rais'd a Jealouſy leſt the Portugueſe and Spaniards ſhould ſerve them ſo, which occaſion'd a Perſecution of the Romaniſts; and their Converts having actually taken Arms under ſome of their Lords, were worſted, and maſſacred, and all Strangers expell'd the Empire. Tavernier ſays, the King of Portugal in 1643 ſent Preſents of 80000 l. Sterling Value to the Emperor of Japan, to regain that Trade; but they were rejected. And Gemelli ſays, the Portugueſe attempted to ſettle here again in 1685, and hoped to ſucceed by carrying home ſome Japaneſe from Macao, that had been ſhipwreck'd on that Coaſt. But the Emperor would not admit them; ſo that notwithſtanding this Kindneſs, they were forc'd to retire on pain of Death.

The Atlas Hiſtorique ſays a great deal more in Vindication of the Dutch from this Calumny; and that the Japaneſe know well enough that they are Chriſtians; and that what their Enemies ſay of their denying their Religion in that Country is falſe. Kao ſays, the Dutch came hither about the beginning of the Perſecution, were permitted firſt to ſettle at Firando, and afterwards tranſported to Nangueſacque.

The ORIGIN of their Nation and Government.

THE Author of the Atlas Hiſtorique, Tom. 5. printed in 1719, is the laſt who has writ upon this Country, and gives an Account in ſubſtance as follows.

About ſeven Centuries ago one of the chief Families of China being enrag'd at the Tyranny of their Emperor, reſolv'd to dethrone him. This occaſion'd a great deal of Blood on both ſides; but the Emperor having the better, reſolv'd to extirpate that Family and their Adherents by a general Maſſacre. This would have been executed, had not his Miniſters and thoſe who were related to the Unfortunate repreſented to him the ill Conſequences of that Extremity, and adviſ'd him to put a ſtop to the Maſſacre, and baniſh the Rebels. Upon which they retir'd to Japan, and ſet up a Monarch over themſelves, whom they call'd Dairi. He behav'd ſo well, that they ador'd him as a God, and the like Reſpects were paid to his Succeſſors for ſome time; but one of them abandoning himſelf to Luxury, his chief Miniſter rebell'd, and uſurp'd his Power. Upon which the Lords of the Country ſet up for Kings in their ſeveral Diſtricts. The Uſurper to prevent the ill Conſequence of this reſtor'd the Dairi, and made himſelf his chief Miniſter, by which he engroſs'd all the Power. This occaſion'd their preſent Form of Government; ſo that the Dairi is only a Phantom of a Monarch, and the Succeſſor of that uſurping Miniſter has the Title of Emperor and the Adminiſtration. The Dairi, however, is look'd upon as the Chief, and particularly of their Religion; ſo that when he is inſtall'd by the Bonzees he is ador'd, and, according to their Laws, muſt never expoſe himſelf to Moon-light, nor ſuffer the venerable Hair of his Head and Beard, or even ſo much as his Nails, to be cut. The Reaſon they give for it is, That he is the Son of the Sun; therefore the Moon is not worthy to ſee him, and it wou'd be unworthy of his high Birth to look upon its dull Rays. But tho he be depriv'd of the Adminiſtration, the Perſon call'd Emperor is no more than Vaſſal to this Japan Pope. He muſt marry the Dairi's Daughter, if he has one marriageable, and allow her the Title of Empreſs, and every ſeven Years is oblig'd to ſend the Dairi a Basket of Earth as a Sign of his Homage, and that he holds the Country of him. The Dairi wears a black Robe, with a red Collar, and plaited Rochet, ſits on a Throne with a large Scimiter hung on one ſide, and a Bow and Arrows on the other. His Miniſters, or Counſellors, are call'd Bungi's, who, together with him, determine all Matters of Religion. He only gives Titles of Nobility, which is worth ſeveral Millions to him. All the Kings have Ambaſſadors at his Court, and make him Preſents once a Year to renew their Titles. He has alſo an Archprieſt under him, who has the only Right to conſecrate Biſhops; ſo that tho he has neither Land nor Revenue, he is richer than the Emperor himſelf, and gets vaſt Sums by impowering the Prieſts to ſell Pardons. Theſe Men having the Power of inſtalling him, he honours them ſo much, that he riſes up when they approach him, and allows them to ſit in his Preſence. The Reaſon is, that the Sons of Princes and great Men who can't be otherwiſe provided for, take this Order upon them, and live in Monaſteries founded by their Anceſtors, where they heap up vaſt Riches. They get Money from the People by pretending they can ſave them from future Torments; are bred in Univerſities, where they ſtudy Morality, and the Jeſuits own, that they never heard more pathetick Diſcourſes, nor ſtronger Reaſoning upon that Subject, than from the Bonzees, many of whom are ſo good Orators, that they make their Hearers weep: But under all this pretended Morality, they are perfect Cheats and Debauchees. They rob the People of great Sums, by pretending to give them Bills of Exchange to receive it in the other World, which thoſe poor Wretches firmly believe. They are divided into ſeveral Sects, and have Nunneries as well as Monaſteries. There's alſo a ſort who live in the Mountains like Hermits; and another call'd Jengui's, who are ſo cruel, and have ſuch a deform'd Aſpect, that the Japaneſe call them Devils, and not without reaſon; for they enjoin ſuch Penances to Pilgrims as frequently end in Death, and often murder them if they don't comply with their Orders.

We come next to their Emperor. Mandelſloe ſays, that he is able to raiſe 386000 Foot and 38800 Horſe by his Deputy-Kings, beſides 100000 Foot and 20000 Horſe that he always keeps in his own Pay; and his Revenues are ſo great, that two Months Income is enough to diſcharge his annual Expence. His Horſe are arm'd with Corſlets, Firelocks ſomewhat longer than our Horſe-Piſtols, Pikes, Bows, Arrows, and Scimiters; his Foot with two Scimiters each, Head-Pieces, Muſquets, Pikes, Halfpikes, and broad Knives. We have no room to inſiſt further upon their Cuſtoms, but come to the Geography of their ſeveral Iſlands, as follows.

I. Nipbon, the largeſt, lies twenty Leagues Eaſt from Corea, betwixt North Lat. 34 & 40 ½. ſo far as is yet diſcover'd. It is of an irregular Form, and runs up with a narrow Slip toward the North; but whether it joins any other Country is not known. The greateſt Length Eaſt and Weſt is four hundred and ſixty Miles; the greateſt Breadth North and South at the Eaſt end is about three hundred, including the above mention'd Slip: But the main Body of the Iſland is not above an hundred and twenty five.

Places of Note are,

1. Jedo, Jendo, or Eddo, on a Bay near the South-caſt Corner of the Iſland, Lat. 36. and Long. 141. Captain Saris, an Engliſhman, who was here in 1613, ſays, it was then a noble City, the Tiles of the Houſes were gilded, and the Door-Poſts varniſh'd; that the principal Street was as broad as any in England, had a fine River at the ſide of it, with a Stone Fountain at every fifty Paces for Water, in caſe of Fire. There was a noble and ſtrong Caſtle two Miles round, where the young King then liv'd, who was very civil to the Captain, gave him a Letter to the King of Great Britain, James I. with two Suits of Armour finely varniſh'd for his Majeſty, and allow'd a free Trade in his Dominions to the Britiſh Subjects. The Author of the Hiſtory of the Church of Japan ſays, the City is three Leagues long, and two broad, and as well peopled as any in Europe. The Caſtle is a League and a half round, and well fortify'd. The Streets within are large, and have magnificent Palaces on each ſide. It has three Incloſures. In the middle are the Palace and Seraglio, with Parks, Fiſh-Ponds, Canals, Water-works, and Gardens excellently adorn'd by Art and Nature. The Princes of the Blood and chief Counſellors live in the ſecond Incloſure. The Tributary Kings and Princes live in the third, and court the Emperor's Favour by outvying one another in the Beauty of their Palaces, where their Children are kept as Pledges of their Fidelity. He ſays, the Emperor was then ſo rich, that he ſpent annually in Houſekeeping and Penſions about twenty five Millions Sterling. His Palace had three Rows of Buildings in front of nine Stories high, form'd at top like Pyramids, and Dolphins over them plated with Gold. The Hall of Audience was ſupported by large fine gilt Pillars, the Cieling of pure Gold, richly enamel'd with curious Figures and Landskips, and the Roof cover'd with Tiles of Gold. In the great Hall, where the Emperor receiv'd the Homage of the Tributary Kings, there was a Gold Throne adorn'd with precious Stones of an incredible ſize. The Streets of the City are four French Leagues in Length; and in 1606, the Emperor employ'd above 300000 People in enlarging it: But it ſuffer'd much by a Tempeſt in 1614. And Mr. Wagoner ſays, that in 1656, when he was there, this City, which for Largeneſs might have been compar'd to a Province, was burnt down in forty eight Hours, with the Palace and about 160000 People. The Atlas Hiſtorique, Vol. 5. ſays, 'tis ſtill a very large City, the Streets at an equal diſtance from one another, have a Gate at the end of each well guarded during the Night; but neither this City, nor moſt of the others in Japan, have any Fortifications. And as theſe Towns, being built of Wood, are very ſubject to Fire, there is in each Street a Magazine proof againſt Fire, whither the People carry their beſt Effects on ſuch Occaſions; and near the Empreſs's Apartment there's a Magazine of that Nature, where the Emperor's Treaſures are kept, which are thought to exceed the Riches of all the other Monarchs on the Earth. He ſays, the Temple of Amida, one of their chief Idols, is of Gold; but there is nothing more frightful and ugly in Nature than the Image of that Idol. It is plac'd on horſeback upon an Altar cover'd with Plate, and the Houſings of the Horſe are embroider'd with Gold, Pearls, and Diamonds. The Japaneſe are ſuch brutiſh Idolaters, that they think they merit Eternal Life merely by pronouncing the Name of this Idol; and the Prieſts, who ſubſiſt by the Offerings made to it, uſe all their Art to perſuade them to believe this.

in

2. Meaco, or Macao, Lat. 35. Long. 134. a hundred and eighty Miles Weſt from Jeddo. Saris ſays, in his Time it was the greateſt City in Japan, a Place of mighty Trade; and the Tradeſmen of every ſort liv'd in a Street by themſelves. Here was the ſtatelieſt Temple in the whole Empire, built of Freeſtone, very lofty, the Roof arch'd, and ſupported by mighty Pillars. It had a peculiar Altar, at which they offer'd Rice and Money; and a monſtrous Idol of Copper, which reach'd as high as the Roof. Herbert ſays, his Chair was ſeventy Foot high, and eighty broad; his Head big enough to hold fifteen Men, and his Thumb forty Inches round. The Temple ſtood on the Top of a high Hill, and on each ſide of the Aſcent were fifty Pillars of Freeſtone, ten Paces from one another, and upon the Top of each a Lanthorn, which made a very fine Shew by Night. The Sanſons ſay, this City formerly had 140000 Houſes. The Jeſuits ſay, when they were there, it had at leaſt 100000; that the upper and lower Town were twenty Miles long, and eight or ten broad; but it was afterwards diminiſh'd by Fire. The Author of the Hiſtory of the Church of Japan ſays, that in his Time it contain'd 90000 Families, beſides five great Univerſities, of 35000 Scholars each, who ſtudied Aſtrology, Hiſtory, Poetry, Arithmetick, and Rhetorick. It was formerly the Reſidence of the Emperor, as it is now of the Dairi. His Palace is in the upper part of the City, and deſcrib'd in the Dutch Embaſſy to Japan as follows: On the left Hand, as one goes to it, there's an admirable Tower, of extraordinary Height, and the Roof cover'd with Plates of Gold. Near this ſtood the Palace of the Maſter of the Horſe, with a Guard of 2000 Soldiers. On the Eaſt-ſide of this was a Court, in which 40000 Horſe might be drawn up in Order of Battel. At the Entrance of the Palace was a large Porch, with gilt Balls on the Roof. The Porch was in the middle of a fine Gallery, which had eight Apartments of the ſame Structure. Within it was a Court adorn'd with numerous Statues richly varniſh'd, and a Banner with the Emperor's Arms. At each end of the Court was a ſumptuous Apartment for the Women. Each Palace had many Out-houſes, and a fine Garden wall'd, and adorn'd with Towers. The Gardens had all ſorts of curious Trees, Flowers, and Herbs; and in the middle of all ſtood the Dairi's Palace, encompaſs'd by a very high Wall, adorn'd with fine Statues. The Aſcent was by fifteen large Steps of Braſs, and on each ſide a Corps de Guard, with gilded Roofs and Balls. On each ſide theſe Guards were Gardens handſomely wall'd in, with octagon Pavilions at each Corner, whoſe Roofs were of curious Shell-work. At the head of the Stairs was the principal Entrance of the Palace, ſupported by eight large enamel'd Columns, with Chapiters reſembling the Corinthian Order, and Baſes of white Marble. The Front of the Palace was higheſt, and had ſomething curious which way ſoever one look'd. The Sculpture was of poliſh'd White laid chequer-wiſe upon a Ground-work of Gold. The Windows and Portholes were all adorn'd in the ſame manner. The Floors were of Stone, ſo well poliſh'd and join'd, that they look'd like a Mirror. Behind this was another Court pav'd with white and black Marble; and within that another, with a Structure fronting the Entrance. There were Pilaſters on both ſides reſembling the Corinthian Order, and ſupporting an Architrave, Friſe and Corniſh of the ſame. In the Spaces between were Marble Images upon Pedeſtals. At each of the Angles of the great Hall was an Impoſt which crown'd the Front, and ſupported the Balluſters that went round the Hall. The ſecond Story was ſuſtain'd by ſixteen Columns, had five great Balconies, and at the four Angles a wing'd Dragon of poliſh'd Gold. The third Story had many Ornaments different from the reſt. The middle of the Palace roſe like a Dome to an extraordinary Height, and on the Summit was a Pyramid of Balls. On the right and left were Galleries ſupported by ten great Columns, cover'd with Plates of Gold, and that Part that jutted over the Windows the like. Behind the Galleries were the Dairi's Apartments, ſo magnificent, that 'tis ſcarce poſſible to deſcribe them. The Windows, inſtead of Glaſs, were of fine Silk, ſo curiouſly varniſh'd, that they look'd like Chryſtal. The Pavement was of Marble of all Colours, cover'd with the fineſt Mats.

The Dairi's Way of living was anſwerable to the Magnificence of his Palace. His Victuals muſt never be dreſs'd nor ſerv'd up twice in one Diſh. When he went abroad, he was carried in a Litter much like our Coaches, the Pillars of Maſſy Gold, the Roof adorn'd with all ſorts of Figures and Balls of that Metal, and encompaſs'd with Silk ſo fine, that he could ſee every body without being ſeen. He was carried by fourteen of his chief Gentlemen, attended by a vaſt Retinue beſides his Guards, and follow'd by another Coach for his Wife or Concubines. The Houſings of the Horſe were embroider'd with Pearls and Diamonds. The Horſes were led by Gentlemen, and others walk'd on both ſides the Coach with Fans and Umbrellas; and after this came a great number of magnificent Calaſhes for the Ladies of the Court.

3. Suranga, or Surungo, Lat. 35. Long. 135. Saris ſays, 'twas in his Time as big as London and its Suburbs, and the Place of the Emperor's Reſidence. The Mechanicks and Tradeſmen liv'd in the Out-parts, that they might not diſturb the Gentry. The Engliſh were then allow'd to trade thither. In the Road betwixt this City and Jeddo is their great Idol Dabis, made of Copper, ſhap'd like a Man kneeling, and extending his Arms, and is two and twenty Foot high. They have a Temple of one of their chief Idols at a Place call'd Tencheday, much frequented by Pilgrims. Mr. Adams, who ſaw it, ſays, that every Month one of the moſt beautiful Virgins of the Country is brought hither, and ſhut up in a fine Apartment, where they make her believe the Idol will come and lie with her in a human Shape, and afterwards reſolve ſuch Queſtions as they deſire her to ask. They that lay the Plot are able to perform the Promiſe. The ſuppos'd Idol leaves her ſomething like Scales of Fiſh at parting; and theſe Women are ever after highly honour'd. The Emperor ſends his Son to reſide here, after fifteen Years of Age, till his own Death makes way for his Succeſſion.

4. Oſacca, on the Eaſt-ſide of the River at the bottom of the Bay, fifteen Leagues South-weſt of Meaco, is one of the chief Ports of the Empire, with a ſtrong and well fortify'd Caſtle. The River here is as broad as the Thames. On the other ſide lies Sacay, one of the pleaſanteſt Places in Japan, and a Town of great Trade.

II. Bongo, Ximo, or Saycock, is the next largeſt Iſland, on the South-weſt Corner of Niphon, and ſeparated from it by a narrow Strait. 'Tis about ſixty Miles long, and thirty broad. Mr. Adams was drove aſhore here; and the Viceroy was ſo kind, that he provided for him and his Men handſomely, and forbad the plundering of the Ship. He was forc'd to make uſe of the Portugueſe Jeſuits, who were very unkind, miſrepreſented what they ſaid, and gave ſuch a Character of them and all other Europeans as muſt have ended in their Ruin, had not the Emperor ſent for Mr. Adams, who being a good Mathematician, got ſo far into favour with his Majeſty, who lov'd the Mathematicks, that he was unwilling to part with him, and gave him Compenſation for his Ship and Goods that were plunder'd during his Abſence. The Engliſh were then more eſteem'd here than the Dutch, who made very good Returns in Bars of Silver for European Commodities.

The Capital is Nangaſaqui, at the bottom of a Bay on the Weſt-ſide, Lat. 33. Long. 129. The Town is large, conſiſts of eighty eight Streets, narrow, but very ſtreight. They are ſhut up by Portcullices at Night, and hung with Lanthorns to prevent Diſorders. It has many lofty Structures, is well guarded, and has Gariſons at the Mouth of the Bay, who give notice of the Approach of Ships, which are carefully ſearch'd, leſt they ſhould bring any Prieſts or Jeſuits. The Dutch Factory here has no Communication with the Town, but ſtands on a Rock enclos'd with a Wall and has two Gates: One towards the Port, to ſhip their Goods; and when that's done, 'tis ſhut up, and has five Seals upon it, which none muſt break on pain of Death: The other is towards the Town, and conſtantly guarded. When Ships arrive, they muſt fire three Guns at the Entrance of the Harbour; when Viſitors go on board, regiſter the Names, Age, and Quality of the Men, that they may compare it with the Complement of the Ship before ſhe goes away; and if any of them die, a Mandarin muſt ſee the Corps before it be interr'd. A Japaneſe Bark is appointed to look after every Ship. The Cargo is always carried aſhore in Japan Bottoms; and when ſhe is unloaded, the Hatches are ſealed up with the Emperor's Seal, which 'tis Death to break up without Order. When the Dutch want Neceſſaries from Shore, they make a Signal, and the Governor muſt be conſulted before they be ſupplied, and no Ship muſt ſtay after Orders to depart. They muſt not trade hither but once a Year; and then a Paſſport is granted for their Deputy to go and viſit the Emperor. The adjacent Iſland Diſma is cover'd with Shops and Booths, where at Market-time are ſold all ſorts of Japan Goods.

III. Firando Iſland, near the South-weſt Corner of Bongo, Lat. 33. 35. Long. 127 ½. When Saris was here, the Deputy-King and his Courtiers were very civil to the Engliſh, came on board their Ships, which they much admir'd, and were very well pleas'd with the Entertainment and Muſick. The Engliſh built a Factory here; but it did not continue long. He mentions ſeveral well inhabited Towns on this Coaſt, particularly Fucate, as large as London within the Walls, which was well built and fortify'd, but had no Gariſon.

IV. The Land of Jeſſo, Yedzo, or Seſſo, betwixt Lat. 41 & 52. and Long. 132 ½ & 150. Some call it an Iſland. Others think it joins to America, and is ſeparated from Japan on the North by a Strait of twelve Leagues, or twelve Miles. They reckon it three thouſand Miles long; and ſay, the Natives are Idolaters, barbarous and warlike. The Japaneſe furniſh them with Rice and Apparel in exchange for Silver, and a ſort of Gold-Sand that their Country abounds with, Fiſh, Neats-Tongues, and Whale-Oil. They have Boats of Planks, ſew'd together with Cocoa-Rind, and no Iron-work about them. The Dutch Accounts, publiſh'd in 1643, ſay, part of it is ſubject to the Emperor of Japan, who has a Governor at Matzimay, or Matſmey, where he receives an annual Tribute in Silver, Feathers of ſeveral Colours, and fine Furs. This Town is plac'd by our Maps in Lat. 46. Long. 140. The Japaneſe have a Fort, and five hundred Families conſtantly reſiding here, and a Market in September, when the Natives come to buy their Winter-Stores in exchange for their Commodities. Rice is what they value moſt, and the other Commodities imported are Cotton, Cloth, Iron, and Lead. There has been no Diſcovery yet farther North than Lat. 51. The Straits of Vries lie Eaſt from it, with an Iſland in the middle call'd the States-Land, Lat. 45. Long. 152 ½. and Eaſt from thoſe Straits lies that call'd the Company's-Land, diſcover'd by the Portugueſe in a Voyage from China to New Spain: But we have only a ſmall View of part of the Weſt and South Coaſt, about Lat. 45.

AFRICA,

LIES on both ſides the Equinoctial, from South Lat. 35. to North Lat. 37. ſo that from the Cape of Good Hope on the South, to Cape Negro on the North, 'tis 4980 Miles. The Longitude is betwixt Long. Weſt from London, 18. and 51 Eaſt; ſo that from Cape Verd on the Weſt, to Cape Garda Fu on the Eaſt 'tis about 4576 Miles. But neither the Length nor Breadth are equal, it being much contracted from the Line South, indented by the Red Sea on the Eaſt, and the Mediterranean on the North. The Line cuts it thro almoſt in the middle; and 'tis alſo cut by both the Tropicks. The Days and Nights are equal under the Equinox. The longeſt Day in the North Parts is about fourteen Hours and a half, and about fourteen Hours and a quarter in the South. Notwithſtanding this Poſition, it is every where inhabited, tho not ſo well as Aſia and Europe; 1. Becauſe of the inſupportable Heats in ſome Places. 2. Becauſe ſeveral Provinces have no Water. 3. Becauſe others are cover'd with Sands, which, being blown to and fro by the Winds, overwhelm Men and Beaſts. 4. Becauſe ſeveral of the Provinces are inhabited by Cannibals, or ſuch as take and ſell one another for Slaves. 5. Becauſe ſome of them are much annoy'd by wild Beaſts and dangerous Serpents. 'Tis obſerv'd that Africa produces greater Variety of Animals than any other Part of the World; ſo that 'twas a Proverb in Ariſtotle's Time, That Africa was always producing ſomething new. 'Tis alſo obſerv'd that the Air is more temperate under and about the Line, than under or near the Tropicks. The Reaſon is, That under and near the Equator there are two Summers and two Winters; and the Nights and Days being always equal, does very much cool the Air and the Sun paſſes lightly thro the Degrees of the Zodiack betwixt the Equinoxes: But when it comes to the Tropicks, it makes the Days longer than the Nights, and ſtays longer on the Degrees of the Zodiack about the one and the other Solſtice. In many Places near the Torrid Zone there's little or no Water to be found for ſome Hundreds of Leagues. 'Tis a well-known Story, That an Engliſh Merchant travelling thoſe Parts was ſo exceſſively dry, that he gave 10000 Ducats for a Cup of Water, and died ſoon after he drank it, as the Perſon did who ſold it him. The Coaſts are not ſo ſubject to this Inconvenience, becauſe there are more Rivers, and the Winds temper the Heat of the Sun. Hence it is that the Coaſts are much better peopled and fruitful, eſpecially in Egypt and Barbary, where in ſome Places the Corn yields 100 for one, and the Stocks of their Vines are as big as large Trees. Africa has excellent Fruits, admirable Drugs, ſome Mines of Gold and Silver, and abounds with wild Beaſts, as Lions, Leopards, Panthers, Rhinoceroſſes, Elephants, Monoceroſſes, Camels, Dromedaries, Tygers, and wild Aſſes. It abounds likewiſe with Civet Cats, Oſtriches, Singing Birds, Parrots, Apes; and their Horſes, eſpecially thoſe of Barbary, are very much eſteem'd. Here are alſo many monſtrous Serpents, and the Rivers are infeſted with Crocodiles.

The Africans in general are of a good Stature, and ſtrong; but not ſo good Soldiers as the Europeans and Aſiaticks. They fight moſt on horſeback with Arrows and Lances; and tho their Armies be many times numerous, they fight in ſo diſorderly a manner, that half the Number of Europeans is enough to rout them. The Arabians who have ſettled in this Country are more dextrous, which, with their being capable of Fatigue, and their Experience in War, makes them formidable to the Africans. Many of the latter are Barbarians, and ſo naſty, that they eat the Entrails of Beaſts without cleaning them; but others are more polite, and want neither Wit nor Judgment. As to their Religion, many of 'em are Mahometans, eſpecially along the Coaſt from the Red Sea to the Atlantick; but the greater Number is Pagans: And here are no Chriſtians, except in Abyſſinia, and where the Europeans have Settlements.

Thoſe on the Mediterranean are the beſt Soldiers, becauſe they have been us'd to Wars with the Europeans; but moſt of the reſt have neither Courage nor Fire-Arms, nor any Knowledge of Arts and Sciences; and in general the Africans are reckon'd cruel, revengeful, and treacherous. Moſt of them are black, and others very tawny, which is aſcribed to the Heat of the Sun, tho 'tis obſervable that the Americans, who live under the ſame Climate, are nothing ſo black.

This Country has many famous Mountains, of which the moſt remarkable are Atlas, the Mountains of the Moon, Sierra Leona, or the Mountains of Lions, and the Pike of Teneriff. Atlas, ſo famous in Antiquity, that it was thought the South Boundary of the World, had its Name from a King of Mauritania, ſo addicted to Aſtronomy and viewing the Stars from the Mountains of his Country, that the Poets feign'd he ſupported the Sky with his Shoulders. This Range of Mountains runs from the Weſt-Ocean call'd the Atlantick from hence, as far as Egypt, which is above 1000 Leagues, ſeparates Barbary from Biledulgerid, and has ſeveral Branches, the moſt noted of which are thoſe of the Great and Little Atlas. The Mountains of the Moon, or Beth, are higher than thoſe of Atlas, and have alſo ſeveral Branches. That which extends towards the Cape of Good Hope is call'd Picos Fragoſos; that which is Eaſt of the Kingdom of Congo the Mountains of Chryſtal. Thoſe round the Lakes of Zaire and Zaflan are call'd the Mountains of Salt-Petre and the Sun; ſo that none but thoſe betwixt Abyſſinia and Monomotapa retain the Name of Mountains of the Moon. They are reckon'd the higheſt in Africa, and are for the moſt part cover'd with Snow and Ice. Thoſe of Sierra Leona ſeparate Nigritia from Guinea, extend as far as Ethiopia, and were by the Antients call'd the Chariots of God, becauſe they are ſubject to Lightning and Thunder. The Pike of Teneriff, which the Dutch make their firſt Meridian, is one of the higheſt in the World, but far from being fifteen Leagues, as ſome have fancied, and does not much exceed one in height. The Summit is always cover'd with Snow, and ſerves as a Land-Mark to Mariners.

The moſt remarkable Capes, Rivers, Seas, and Gulphs, we ſhall deſcribe in their proper Places. We come now to the Geography, and begin with,

I. BARBARY.

IT has the Mediterranean on the North, which ſeparates it from Europe, has Sara, or thoſe call'd the Deſarts of Barbary, on the South, the Atlantick on the Weſt, and Egypt on the Eaſt. From Cape Non on the Atlantick to the Frontiers of Egypt, 'tis above 2200 Miles, including the above mention'd Deſarts; and from the Kingdom of Tombut on the South to the Straits of Gibraltar on the North, where 'tis broadeſt, 1200. 'Tis the moſt fruitful, trading, and populous Part of Africk. The Soil abounds with Corn and Fruit, as Citrons, Oranges, Figs, Olives, Grapes, Almonds, in which the Inhabitants drive a great Trade, as alſo in their Coral, Marroquin Leather, and Barbary Horſes. The Air is hot, but temper'd by the Winds from the Mediterranean. The Inhabitants are of a good Stature, ſtrong, tawny, and very dextrous with Bows, Arrows, and Lances within Land, and thoſe on the Coaſt handle their Fire-Arms well enough; but their bad Education and cholerick Temper makes them ignorant, cruel, fierce, revengeful, deceitful, idle, and they are addicted to Theft, Piracy, and all ſorts of Debauchery. Their Religion is Mahometan; but they tolerate a great number of Jews, and ſome Chriſtians, on the account of Commerce.

Barbary is divided into the following Governments:

I. The Empire of Morocco, which has the Atlantick on the Weſt, the Country of Ludaya and Sara Deſarts on the South, the Kingdom of Algiers and other Deſarts on the Eaſt. From the Borders of Sara to the Straits of Gibraltar 'tis ſix hundred and fifty Miles, South and North; and from the Atlantick to the Deſarts of Tegorarin 'tis almoſt a thouſand, Eaſt and Weſt; and is divided into the Kingdoms of Fez, Morocco, Sus, and Tafilet. The Prince calls himſelf Emperor of Africk, King of Morocco, &c. and Grand Cherif of Mahomet.

(1.) Fez lies next to the Straits of Gibraltar, and is the fruitfulleſt Part of the Country. 'Tis divided into ſeven Provinces.

The moſt northerly Province of this Country is by ſome call'd Habat, and lies next the Straits of Gibraltar. It contains,

1. Arzilla, a ſmall, but ſtrong Town, with a good Harbour, Lat. 35. 6. Long. 5. It formerly belong'd to the Portugueſe, but was taken from them by the Moors about the Cloſe of the ſixteenth Century.

2. Tangier, thirty Leagues further North, an antient, and once a conſiderable City, with an Univerſity and ſtrong Citadel at the Weſt-ſide of the Peninſula and Entrance of the Straits of Gibraltar. It was taken by the Portugueſe in 1472, and given to Charles II. of England with Catherine of Portugal in 1662. But not being duly taken care of, nor anſwering Expectation, he order'd it to be blown up in 1685.

3. Ceuta, on the other ſide the Peninſula, about ten Leagues Eaſt from Tangier. It belongs to the Spaniards, who have fortified the ſame; and is chiefly noted for having ſtood out a Siege, or rather a Blockade againſt the Moors above thirty Years, and is not yet taken in 1719.

South from hence lies the Province of Aſgar, along the Coaſt of the Atlantick; the Capital of which is Larache, on the Coaſt, near Lat. 35. Long. 5. It has a tolerable Harbour, and is pretty ſtrong. The Portugueſe poſſeſs'd it; but the Moors retook it in 1688. The Inhabitants are Corſairs.

On the Eaſt-ſide of the Peninſula, and upon the Bay, lie,

1. Tetuan, about fifty Miles South of Ceuta. 'Tis an open, but large and populous Town, inhabited by Corſairs, but the moſt civil on the Coaſt. The Dutch have a Factory, and the French a Conſul here. The Moors allow an Hoſpital, where Prieſts are ſuffer'd to officiate for the Comfort of Chriſtian Slaves; and all Chriſtian Ships that come hither contribute towards it.

2. Penon de Velez, ſixty two Miles Eaſt from Tetuan, on the ſame Bay, a Fortreſs, belonging to the Portugueſe, noted for good Pilchard-Fiſhing.

3. Melilla, on the ſame Coaſt, Lat. 35. Weſt Long. 15. Minutes, has a good Harbour, is well fortified, and one of the beſt Places belonging to the Spaniards on this Coaſt.

4. Oran, on the ſame Coaſt, Lat. 85. 10. Eaſt Long. 8 Minutes, a ſtrong Place, with a good Harbour, belonging to the Spaniards.

The next Province is Fez, which contains,

1. The Capital of the ſame Name, in Lat. 34. Lon. W. from London, 4. about an hundred and twenty five Miles South from the Mediterranean, and as much Eaſt from the Atlantick. It lies near a River of the ſame Name, and another call'd Sebou. It has high ſtrong Walls of ſquare Stones, and good Towers, but no Bulwarks. It has eighty ſix Gates, and is interſpers'd with Hills in the Out-parts. The Middle is upon a Level, water'd with fine Canals. 'Tis divided into twelve Quarters, has ſixty two Markets, with rich Shops, two hundred large and ſtreight Streets, beſides many ſmall ones, with fair Buildings on both ſides. It has ſeven hundred Moſques, beſides Colleges, Hoſpitals, Storehouſes, Mills, and Baths. Here are two hundred and fifty Stone Bridges over the Canals, ſome of them with Houſes built on each ſide. Moſt of the Houſes are of Stone and Brick, three Stories high, adorn'd on the Outſide with Moſaick Work, and encompaſs'd with Galleries, which lead to the ſeveral Rooms. Moſt of the Houſes have a Turret, where the Women are kept in handſome Rooms, from whence they have a View of the City, but can't ſtir abroad. Their chief Moſque, according to Gramaye, is half a Mile in Compaſs, has thirty very large Gates. The Roof is an hundred and fifty Cubits long, and eighty broad. The Tower is of a vaſt Height, the Length of which is ſupported by thirty Pillars, and the Breadth by twenty. The Temple has above nine hundred Arches, with Marble Columns, and a Lamp at each. It has four hundred Ciſterns for the People to bathe in before they go to Prayers, and two and forty Galleries round it, where they keep all the Neceſſaries belonging to it.

2. New Fez, which is about a Mile from the old Town, ſerves it as a Citadel. It has the Palace of the Prince, which is very large, has as many Moſques, Baths, and Colleges, as Old Fez, is divided into fifteen Quarters for the reſpective Tradeſmen, who are reckon'd 20000, of all ſorts. Theſe two Towns are the general Magazine of Barbary, are ſaid to contain about 300000 People, among whom are 5000 Jews, and many rich Merchants who buy European Goods, and ſend them to the Provinces in exchange for their Product, with which they trade to the Maritime Towns. The beſt Marroquins are made here. The Trade of Import conſiſts in Cochineal, Vermilion, Engliſh and other Woollen Cloth, Silks, Spices, Iron-Wire, Braſs, Steel, Drugs, ſmall Looking-Glaſſes, Muſlins, Arms, and Ammunition, Allum, Earthen Ware, Toys, Cotton, Quickſilver, Opium, Tartar, and Paper, red Woollen Caps, Fuſtians, Combs, Gold-Wire, Brocades, Damasks, Velvet, coarſe Callicoes, Linnen Cloth, and Guinea Cowries, which paſs in this Country for Money. The Goods exported are Wax, Skins, Wool, Oſtrich-Feathers, Copper, Dates, Almonds, Stone for Terraſs-work, Gold Ducats, Figs, Raiſins, Olives, Honey, Horſes, ſome Silks of their own Manufacture, and a ſort of Cloth made of Cotton and Flax.

3. Mequinez, or Mechnes, about fifty nine Miles Weſt from Fez, is well built, the Streets handſome and large, the Inhabitants civil. It has abundance of Aqueducts, Temples, and Hoſpitals; was commonly the Appanage of one of the Emperor's Sons, and is now the Place of his own Reſidence. His Palace is as large as the Town, and exceeds all the Structures in this Country. 'Tis higher than the City, has ſeveral thick, high, and white Walls, and conſiſts of a great number of Pavilions; has two Moſques with very high Steeples, but irregular. He has very fine Stables and Gardens; and there are other fine Palaces near it, built by the Alcaids, from whom he takes them at pleaſure. The Jews have a Quarter here, where their Chief lives, who impoſes and exacts the Tributes upon all of them in the whole Kingdom, where there are above 16000.

4. Sala, Salle, or Sally, twenty ſix Miles South-weſt of Fez, on the Coaſt of the Atlantick. 'Tis divided into the Old and New Town by a River. That on the South-ſide is call'd Rabata, a large Town upon a Rock, defended by a Fort, contains many Moſques, Palaces, Hoſpitals, Colleges, Baths, Stews, and Shops; and has a high Tower, from whence they can ſee Ships long before they approach. 'Tis much ſhort of what it was, but ſtill a conſiderable Fortreſs. The New Town, on the other ſide the River, is ſtrongly fortified on the Land-ſide with two Walls, and a large Space betwixt them, where they ſow Corn. Towards the Sea 'tis defended by Rocks and Towers. They have alſo a large ſtrong Citadel. The Harbour is broad, but ſhallow, and has a Bar; ſo that none but light Ships can enter at high Water, when 'tis not above eleven or twelve Foot deep; ſo that their Corſairs, which infeſt the Ocean, harbour about the Iſle of Fedale, which is not far from them. They were formerly independent, but now ſubject to the Emperor of Morocco, who has a Governor here: and he with ſome Alcaids, choſe out of the Townſmen, has a Right to make Peace and War. Their Juriſdiction extends only over a few Villages.

(2.) Morocco Kingdom lies South from Fez, along the Coaſt, beyond Cape Non, is more fruitful than Fez, has ſome Mines of Gold, Silver, and Copper; but their chief Commerce is in Hides, Skins, Wax, Oil, Sugar, and Paſtel. 'Tis a hundred Leagues long, and ſixty broad; and is divided into ſeven Provinces. Duccala the Firſt lies fartheſt North, and abounds in Corn. The only Towns and Ports of Note are, 1. Saffie, thirty Leagues North-weſt of Morocco, which is tolerably ſtrong. 2. Mazagan, which belongs to the Portugueſe, and is well fortify'd, and lies twenty Leagues North-eaſt of Saffie. 3. Almora, on the Coaſt, twenty five Miles North of Sally, a ſmall fortified Town with a Harbour, formerly belonging to the Spaniards; but taken from them in 1689, and now inhabited by Corſairs.

Morocco Proper is populous, abounds with Cattel, and takes Name from its Capital, which is that of the Kingdom. 'Twas the Seat of the antient Cheriffs of Mauritania. Tingitana lies in a fine Plain, Lat. 30. 10. Long. Weſt 5. 10. about five or ſix Leagues North from Mount Atlas, is large, ſaid to contain about 100000 People, has good Walls, twenty four Gates. Its Moſques, Colleges, and about four hundred Aqueducts, are all the Remains of its antient Splendor.

Elgiumba, another Town in this Province, is pretty ſtrong, and a Granary to Fez.

(3.) Sus, or Suſa Province, which ſome place in Biledulgerid, is the moſt ſoutherly, fruitful, and conſiderable part of the Kingdom of Morocco. 'Twas formerly reckon'd a Kingdom, and divided into ſeven Provinces. The chief Towns are Tarudant, the Capital, forty Leagues South-weſt of Morocco; and the Port of St. Croix, or the Holy Croſs, which was taken from the Portugueſe ſome Years ago, lies eighteen Leagues South-weſt from it.

II. Algiers Kingdom is one of the largeſt in Barbary, is 576 Miles Eaſt and Weſt, and 250, where broadeſt, South and North. Here are abundance of Mountains and barren Ground; but in general the Country has plenty of Corn, Fruit, and Game. The Air is ſo temperate, that the Heat does not ſcorch the Leaves of Trees in Summer, nor the Cold make them drop in Winter. This Kingdom is a ſort of Republick, under protection of the Grand Seignior; and the Baſſa has ſo little Authority, that he can't come to the Divan unleſs he be call'd by the Council. The Inhabitants are chiefly Moors, who ſettled here after their Expulſion from Spain, and are now the richeſt and moſt noted Corſairs in Africa. They are cruel, and ſo greedy, that they violate or keep Treaties, according as they find it for their Intereſt. The Country is divided into five Provinces.

Places of chief Note are,

1. Algier, Lat. 36 ½. Long. 52 Minutes Eaſt from London. 'Tis Capital of its Province, and of the whole Kingdom, which is ſo fruitful, that in ſome Parts they have two, and in others three Harveſts a Year. They have alſo admirable Melons and Grapes, with all ſorts of tame Cattel; and their Foreſts abound with wild ravenous Beaſts, and others for Game. The City lies on the Bank of the Sea, upon the Front of a Hill. 'Tis ſquare, moſt of the Houſes of Brick, and form a ſort of agreeable Amphitheatre, each Houſe having a Gallery, and fine Terraſs. The Walls are high, ſupported by good Ramparts fortified by many Baſtions, and encompaſs'd with a large Ditch. The French bombarded it in 1688; but without much effect. The Town is grown exceeding rich by Piracies. Over-againſt the North Gate there's an Iſland, join'd to the Continent by a Mole, which makes the Harbour larger and ſafer than formerly.

2. Tenez, Capital of its Province, almoſt a hundred Miles Weſt from Algier. 'Tis well fortified, and has a good Harbour.

3. Tremeſen, or Telenſin, is Capital of its Province, formerly reckoned a Kingdom. It lies ſeventy eight Miles South-weſt from Oran; was formerly a conſiderable Town, but is now much decay'd.

4. Bugie, Capital of its Province, lies about ſeventy ſix Miles Eaſt from Algiers, on the Front of a Hill, upon the Coaſt, is a conſiderable Town, has fine Streets, many Moſques, Colleges, Cloiſters, Inns, Hoſpitals, a large Market, and a ſtrong Citadel. The Houſes are reckon'd about 8000. 'Twas taken by the Spaniards in 1508; but retaken ſoon after by the Turks.

5. Gigery, ſeventy four Miles North-eaſt from Bugie, a large Town on the Coaſt, where the French made a Deſcent in 1664, but were repuls'd with Loſs.

6. Bona, on the Coaſt, two hundred Miles South-eaſt from Bugie. Some take it to be the Hippo of the Antients, the See of the famous St. Auguſtin. It was formerly conſiderable, and taken by the Emperor Charles the Fifth, but retaken by the Turks, who have ſince diſmantled it.

7. Con-

7. Conſtantine, ſeventy ſix Miles South-weſt from Bona, is Capital of its Province, lies near the River Sufegamar, has a ſtrong Citadel, and contains about 1200 Houſes.

8. The Baſtion of France, upon the Sea, betwixt Bona and Tabarca, thirty Miles North-eaſt from Bona. 'Tis a Fortreſs and Magazine, built by the French in 1633. The Iſland of Tabarca, in the Neighbourhood, is noted for a Coral-Fiſhing, which belongs to the Genoeſe, and is defended by a Fort.

III. Tunis Kingdom lies Eaſt from that of Algier, is four hundred fifty Miles South and North, and two hundred, where broadeſt, Eaſt and Weſt; but was formerly larger. Here are many Valleys, which abound in Corn and Fruit; their Mountains with wild Beaſts and others for Game. Horſes and Camels are very cheap here. Hannibal, Aſdrubal, Terence, Tertullian, and St. Cyprian, were born in its Dominions.

Places of Note are,

(1.) Tunis, the Capital, at the bottom of a Gulph, Lat. 37. Eaſt Long. 10. 18. from London. The Bay is reckon'd one of the beſt in the Mediterranean. The Town is about a League round, and almoſt oval. It ſtands near the Ruins of antient Carthage, from which it was built. 'Tis reckon'd to contain 10000 Families, and 3000 Shops, where they ſell Linen and Woollen. Their chief Trade is with the Venetians and Genoeſe; but their greateſt Riches comes from Piracy. The Houſes are for the moſt part of Stone and Brick, cover'd with Plaiſter. They are generally but one Story high, and the Roofs terraſs'd, from whence the Rain-Water runs into two publick Ciſterns; for they have neither Fountain nor River. The Spring-Water is brought from Places in the Neighbourhood, and reſerv'd for the Uſe of the Dey and Baſſa. The Streets are large, but very dirty, becauſe never clean'd. The Sides next the Houſes are rais'd for the Paſſage of People on foot; but the Middle is narrow and deep, ſo that Horſes and Carriages frequently ſtop one another, and hinder Paſſengers. There being no Windows towards the Streets, it looks as if one walk'd betwixt two Walls of a Cloiſter. Here's nothing handſome but the Market-Place, which conſiſts of two Streets which croſs one another, and are larger and longer than the reſt, and all cover'd. Here are Shops furniſh'd with all ſorts of Goods. The only Structure of Note is the Houſe of the French Conſul, which is very large, high, and of regular Architecture: But the chief Ornament of the Town is its magnificent Moſques, with a very high Minaret of fine Architecture. The Walls of the Town are forty Fathom high, flank'd with many Towers; and there's a ſtrong Citadel on the Weſt-ſide. The chief Trade of the Town now is in Olives, Soap, Oſtrich-Feathers, and Horſes. The Gulph is about three Leagues long, and two broad, and join'd to that of Gouletta by a narrow Paſſage, which makes it very ſtrong; and this Strait is alſo defended by a good Caſtle. Charles the Fifth took this Town in 1535, and reſtor'd their dethron'd King. The Turks took it in 1570, and continu'd abſolute there for a while; but at laſt the Town form'd it ſelf into a Republick, under protection of the Turks, to whom they pay Tribute.

(2.) Gouletta, which lies North-eaſt from the Town, is a ſtrong Fort built on a riſing Ground, has a good Harbour, a Cuſtom-Houſe, and Magazines.

IV. Tripoly Kingdom, was formerly part of Tunis, and lies Eaſt from it, and Weſt from Barca; moſt of which being govern'd by the Grand Seignior's Baſſa of Tripoly, are commonly join'd together, extend near 1000 miles Eaſt and Weſt, and 340 where broadeſt South and North. The Air of the Country is pretty good, but the Soil ſo barren and rocky, that the Inhabitants of the inland Parts are very poor, and live chiefly by Robbery; but the Soil on the Coaſt is better, abounding with Dates, Corn, Citrons, Orangès, Figs, Olives, and Saffron reckon'd the beſt in the World. Places of Note are,

1. Tripoly, the Capital, on the Coaſt, Lat. 30. 32. Eaſt Long. 14. 48. It has a convenient Harbour, defended by two Forts. The Town is not large, but lies upon the Sea in form of a Creſcent, and is adorn'd with fine Towers in form of Pyramids. The Point on the Eaſt is a parcel of Rocks with antique Forts; the other is flank'd with a large Caſtle, and terminates at that call'd the Engliſh Fort; but the Town within does not anſwer the Proſpect from the Harbour, moſt of the Houſes not being above twenty foot high, with Platforms at top, and have ſcarce any Light but what comes in by the Door. That call'd the Merchants Street is ſomewhat better; that Quarter of the Town is well-peopled, but the reſt has not been rebuilt ſince bombarded by the French in 1685. The French are the greateſt Traders, and the Arabians bring hither great Quantities of Aſhes, of which they make Glaſs and Soap. Here are the Ruins of a noble Roman triumphal Arch, much valu'd by Antiquaries. There's a Latin Inſcription, ſtill to be read in theſe words, Viro Arminiaco Silvirio Flamen perpetuus, marmori ſolido fecit. Without the Town there's abundance of fine Proſpects. Here's a noble Moſque, very well adorn'd; the Portal is of Marble, and noble plain Architecture. The Baths of this City are the beſt on the Coaſt of Africa, cover'd with great Halls and Domes, and they are reckon'd ſovereign againſt Rheumatiſms. The Chriſtians are allow'd the Freedom of Worſhip in this Town, and the Slaves have Chappels in their Priſons. The chief Riches of the Town comes from their Piracies. Half a League from hence is the new Town call'd Miſſia: It conſiſts of Pleaſure-Houſes belonging to the chief Turks of the Country, and is extreme pleaſant, being in the middle of Gardens, where they look like ſo many Terraſſes encompaſs'd with Palm-Trees. Theſe Gardens are cultivated by the poor Chriſtian Slaves, to whom they ſcarce allow Bread and Water. The Tripolines of both Sexes are luxurious and greedy. They pretend to be a ſort of Republick, but the Grand Seignior's Dey or Baſſa is commonly very tyrannical.

2. Barca is the only Town of any Note in the Country, which bears that Name, but is very inconſiderable. Some take it to be the antient Ptolemais. 'Tis now call'd Tolometa, lies on the Eaſt-ſide of the Bay of Sidra, towards the North-Weſt Point, and is the Seat of a Cadi.

II. EGYPT,

HAS Barca on the Weſt, the Iſthmus of Sues and the Red-Sea on the Eaſt, the Mediterranean on the North, and Nubia on the South. 'Tis about ſeven hundred and eighty miles where longeſt South and North, and ſix hundred and ſixty where broadeſt Eaſt and Weſt. The Air is unhealthful, becauſe of the great Heats, and of the Slime left by the Nile, after it overflows the Country. The People however live long, and the Soil, tho ſandy, is made very fruitful by the Inundations of that River; ſo that for the abundance of Corn produc'd here, it was antiently reckon'd the Granary of the Roman, as it is now of the Turkiſh Empire, to which it is ſubject. It likewiſe produces Rice, Dates, Senna, Caſſia, Balm, fine Plants, and excellent Simples. Here is alſo abundance of Cattel. Their Sheep uſually bring forth twice a year, and at each time three or four Lambs; and 'tis common with their Women to have two or three Children at a time. This is aſcrib'd to the drinking the Water of the Nile, whoſe Inundation begins the 15th of June, increaſes for forty Days, and decreaſes for forty more. When it riſes to twenty four foot, 'tis look'd upon as a certain Sign of a fruitful Year; but if more or leſs, 'tis a Sign of Scarcity; and if it don't overflow at all, 'tis a certain Token of Famine, becauſe there's ſeldom any Rain here, and what they have is not ſufficient to fructify the Soil. About half a League from the Nile, and three Leagues Weſt from Cairo, are the famous Pyramids, formerly reckon'd one of the Wonders of the World. There are ſeventeen in all, but three of them ſurpaſs the reſt; the firſt being 520 foot high, and 682 ſquare; the ſecond is not ſo high, and but 631 foot ſquare; the third is leſs, but the beſt Workmanſhip. Three Leagues from the Pyramids is the Village Sakara, near which are the Pits of the Mummies ſo much talk'd of, and which the Moors ſell to Travellers. They are only embalm'd Corps, which keep, as they ſay, two or three thouſand years in their Pits, whither the antient Egyptians carry'd them. They paſſed the Lake for that end, and put a Piece of Coin in the Mouths of the Mummies, to pay for the Paſſage of the Ghoſts to the other World in Charon's Barge.

The preſent Egyptians don't trouble themſelves about making Mummies; they are reckon'd very witty, and the Invention of Arithmetick, Geometry, and Aſtronomy is aſcrib'd to them. They are handſomely clad in their way, are of a middling Size, very tawny, ſober, and are reckon'd the beſt Swimmers in the World, but are charg'd with being Idle, Covetous, Diſſemblers, and given to Robbery and Cheating.

The Country is commonly divided into Upper, Middle, and Lower Egypt, with reſpect to the Courſe of the Nile, which runs thro the middle of the Country. It lies betwixt Latitude 20. 42. and 30. 24. in the 3d, 4th, 5th, and 6th Climates; ſo that the longeſt Day is 13 hours 15 minutes in the South, and about 15 hours ¼ in the North.

Thevenot divides the Inhabitants into Moors, Chriſtians, Cophtis, Franks or Europeans, Greeks, Turks, and Jews. The Moors are the greateſt Number, and are deſcended of the Arabians. They are kept under by the Turks, and few of them admitted to any Office. Both Sexes are naſty. Their Religion is Mahometan, in which they are more devout than the Turks. The Cophtis are a very ignorant ſort of People, have ſome Remains of Chriſtianity, and many fooliſh Stories about our Saviour. They are ſuppos'd to be the Race of the antient Egyptians, are much diminiſh'd in Number, and kept more under Subjection than the Moors. The Franks are Chriſtian Foreigners, who live chiefly about Cairo, and the other trading Towns of Lower Egypt, and have Conſuls of their ſeveral Nations, but he of France is moſt regarded according to Thevenot: and Chriſtians in general are very much hated and oppreſs'd in this Country.

The Nile being the principal River in Egypt, and one of the moſt famous in the World, we ſhall give a ſhort Account of it here. The Antients own'd they were ignorant of its Fountains, and modern Authors are not yet agreed about them. The Portugueſe Jeſuits, who, by the League betwixt their King and him of Ethiopia, had an Opportunity to travel the Country, ſay they ſaw its two Fountains, and that they are twenty Paces aſunder, at the foot of a Mountain in the King of Gojam, Lat. 12. Long. 30. 28: yet Thevenot ſays, the King of Ethiopia's Ambaſſador, who affirm'd he had ſeen it 12 times, ſays, that it has but one Fountain, and riſes in a Plain 12 Days Journey from Gonthar, the Capital of Ethiopia; ſo that ſtill we muſt leave it at an Uncertainty. What is moſt to be depended on, is the Courſe of it from its famous Cataracts; the firſt of which, according to the Atlas Hiſtorique, is about five Leagues, after it comes out of the Lake Dambea. Peter Pais, a Portugueſe Jeſuit, ſays, the Rocks which form thoſe Cataracts are fourteen Fathom high, and the Tops ſo near one another, that the Emperor of the Country lays Bridges upon them to paſs over his Army. The Water-Falls betwixt the Rocks, make a Noiſe like Thunder, and their Breakings raiſe ſuch thick Miſts, that afar off they look like Clouds. Dapper ſays, they are ſix miles in compaſs; they fall 200 foot downward ſloaping. Lucas, who ſaw them, ſays, the Natives commonly ſhoot them on Rafts, and that under the firſt Cataract there are ſeveral Gaps in the Rocks, which lead to ſubterranean Paſſages, but the breaking in of the Water has made them inacceſſible; tho it appears by Niches, and a ſort of Platform, that they were formerly acceſſible. The Turks have ſeveral little Fortreſſes, with Gariſons on both ſides the River near the Cataracts, to curb the thieviſh Arabs. Philoſophers are not agreed as to the Cauſes of the Nile's Inundation; but the moſt probable Account is, that it proceeds from the great Rains that begin in Ethiopia about Eaſter, and continue four or five Months, which fill all the Caverns of the Earth, and the reſt diſcharges it ſelf into the Lakes or Rivers which communicate with the Nile.

We come now to the Geography. Places of chief Note in this Country are,

1. Alexandria, on the Coaſt, Lat. 32. Long. 32. 'Tis famous for its Antiquity, was the moſt conſiderable Town in Africa next to Carthage, and is ſuppos'd to have been the No of the Hebrews, but is now a Heap of Ruins and ill-inhabited. The Turks call it Scanderie. It was a long time the Capital of Egypt, and the Walls built by Alexander the Great, ſuppos'd to be its Founder, are ſtill to be ſeen. It had ſo many Columns, Obelisks, and ſtately Palaces, that it was reckon'd the ſecond City of the Roman Empire. Its Circumference was about twelve miles. The Phare, built by Ptolemey Philadelphus, was reckon'd one of the ſeven Wonders of the World, and one of the moſt ſtately Piles that ever was ſeen, but 'tis now demoliſh'd. The Air is unwholeſome. It lies about 700 Paces from the Sea, and has two Harbours, ſeparated by a Point of Land in form of a Mole, and defended by two Caſtles built by the Turks. Theſe Harbours are ſafe enough, but the Entry dangerous, becauſe of Shelves. Its Trade is much decay'd ſince the Europeans found out a way to the Eaſt Indies by the Cape of Good Hope. Thoſe of Provence in France have the chief Commerce, and ſend many Veſſels thither annually for Levant Stuffs, Spices, Oſtrich-Feathers, Senna, Drugs, Mummies, &c.

2. Roſetta, near the Mouth of the Weſt Branch of the Nile, 48 miles North-Eaſt from Alexandria, has a good Harbour, and tho but ſmall, is populous, and has a conſiderable Trade, eſpecially in Sugar. The Houſes are magnificent, and 'tis defended by a good Caſtle.

3. Damietta, on one of the Branches of the Nile, about 125 miles Eaſt from Alexandria. 'Tis famous in Antiquity, and was oftentimes taken and retaken by the Turks and Chriſtians during the Holy War. 'Tis ſtill large and populous, and one of the Keys of Egypt.

4. Cairo, or Grand Caire, lies on the Eaſt-ſide of the Nile, a little above where it is divided into Branches, about 120 miles South-Eaſt from Alexandria. It is the Reſidence of the Baſſa of Egypt, and one of the greateſt Cities in Africa. 'Tis divided into four Parts, which, with the Suburbs, are reckon'd ten or twelve Leagues long, ſeven or eight broad, and in the whole twenty five in compaſs. It contains 16000 Streets, 6000 publick Moſques, 200000 Houſes, and a great number of Squares and Market-Places; but ſome ſay, that if it be ſeparated from the Villages and Ruins that lie round it, 'tis no larger than Paris. Its Commerce is much decay'd, ſince the way to the Eaſt Indies by the Cape of Good Hope was diſcover'd, but it ſtill drives a good Trade in Turkey Carpets, and other Manufactures. The Town is not wall'd, but they have a fine and ſtrong Caſtle on a Rock. The Water is brought into the Town from the River by an Aqueduct of 350 Arches. The Ruins of antient Memphis lay a little below it.

5. Manſoura, lies upon the moſt Eaſtern Branch of the Nile, 76 Miles North-Eaſt from Cairo, and is a large fine Town.

6. Suez, on the Bank of the Red-Sea, lies 87 miles Eaſt from Cairo, and gives its Name to the Iſthmus which ſeparates Africa and Aſia. The adjacent Country is ſo full of Sand, that the Inhabitants are forc'd to bring their Proviſions and Water from other Places. It conſiſts only of two or three hundred Houſes, with an Arſenal and an antique Caſtle. It was formerly the Place where Goods were landed from the Eaſt Indies for Europe. The Harbour is ſhallow, and the Turks keep here only two Gallies and a few Ships.

We return again to the Coaſt of the Atlantick on the Weſt, and ſhall deſcribe the Countries as they lie from thence to the Eaſt.

III. BILEDULGERID.

SOME call the Country South from Barbary, and North from Sara or Zaara, by the general Name of Biledulgerid, and extend it from the Coaſt of the Atlantick on the Weſt, to the Deſarts of Barca on the Eaſt. Others, and later Maps, make Biledulgerid only a ſmall Country South of Tunis, and remarkable for nothing but producing of Dates. Biledulgerid, taken in the largeſt Senſe, is divided into ſeveral Kingdoms, which have nothing remarkable, only they are inhabited by a ſort of Arabs, who hire themſelves to any Princes that will employ them; and thoſe that are not ſo employ'd, ſubſiſt chiefly by hunting of Oſtriches, or by Robbery, and are a very treacherous, brutiſh, and cruel People, much given to Witchcraft. They look upon themſelves to be all of noble Extraction, and contemn thoſe as Slaves who labour the Ground. Their Oſtriches are ſaid to be as high as a Man on horſeback. The Arabians eat the Fleſh, ſell the Feathers, make Portmanteaus of their Skins, uſe their Hearts in conjuring, their Fat as Medicine, and make Pendants for their Ears of their Talons.

Tafilet is a Kingdom in the Weſt part of this Country. The Capital is of the ſame Name, Lat. 29. Weſt Long. 10 Minutes, conſiſts of about 2000 Families, and is defended by a Caſtle.

Some reckon Segelmeſſe one of the largeſt and beſt Provinces of Biledulgerid, place it Eaſt of Tafilet, and ſay the Rivers overflow it as the Nile, does Egypt; that it has ſeveral Cities, and above three hundred wall'd Villages.

Tegorarin lies Eaſt of it; is ſaid to have fifty wall'd Towns or Boroughs, and about an hundred and fifty Villages. For the reſt we refer to our Map, becauſe we have no Deſcription of the other Diviſions but what is there.

That call'd the Deſart of Barca, on the Eaſt, was the Inner Libya of the Antients; has no Towns, but ſome Villages, and among others Ammon, famous antiently for a Temple and Oracle of Jupiter.

IV. The DESARTS of SARA, or BARBARY,

LIE South from the Country ſo called; have the Province of the Ludayes on the Weſt, which reaches to the Coaſt of the Atlantick, and is ſaid to contain eighty thouſand fighting Men, and a Tribe of Arabs conſiſting of ten thouſand Men. Theſe Deſarts are inſupportable becauſe of the Heat of the Sun, which reflects from the Sands; and the Drought is ſo great, that no Water is to be found in five or ſix Days Journey. 'In the Deſart of Azavad there are to be ſeen the Tombs of a rich Merchant, and a Carrier, from whom the Merchant bought a Cup of Water, as before mention'd. Here are great Numbers of Lions, Tygers, Oſtriches, and monſtrous Animals. The Arabs, who inhabit ſome part of theſe Deſarts, make War on their Neighbours, the Negroes, and ſell them as Slaves in the Kingdom of Fez; and on the other hand, the Negroes cut them to pieces when they have an opportunity. This Country is infeſted with Scorpions, which obliges the Arabs to wear Boots, to prevent their biting their Legs. Theſe Arabs live under petty Princes call'd Cheques, who impoſe a Tribute on Caravans that paſs thro their Country; and ſubſiſt chiefly by ſelling Camels and the Skins of wild Beaſts.

That Part of it call'd the Kingdom of Senega, or Zanhaga, which reaches to the Atlantick, is in ſome Parts full of Moraſſes; in other Parts they have Woods, which produce ſtore of Gum: And at Arguin, on the Coaſt, South of the Tropick of Cancer, they trade in Gold Duſt.

V. NIGRITIA, or NEGROLAND,

HAS the Deſarts of Sara on the North, Nubia and Abyſſinia on the Eaſt, and Guinea on the South and Weſt. 'Tis a Country of vaſt Extent, being almoſt 1700 Miles Eaſt and Weſt, and 1320, where broadeſt, South and North. 'Tis in general very barren, only in ſome Places it produces Rice, Flax, and Cotton. Their chief Commerce is in Skins, Ivory, Gum, Ambergreaſe, Gold Duſt, but eſpecially in ſelling Slaves, whom they take from their Neighbours; and when they have none ſuch, they ſell their own Wives and Children. The Spaniards and other Europeans tranſport great Numbers from hence to work in their Mines, &c. in America. Some aſcribe their black Complexion to the exceſſive Heat of the Sun; and others to their being deſcended of the curſed Race of Cham, or Canaan, becauſe Strangers in this Country preſerve their white Complexion, and ſome Aſians and Americans, who live in the ſame Zone, are nothing ſo black. Thoſe who live in Towns are a Mixture of Mahometans and Pagans; but thoſe in the Deſarts ſeem ſcarce to have any Religion or Law at all. They are dull, brutiſh, impudent, and lazy; whence the Proverb, That if you would have a Negro to ſerve you well, you muſt give him enough to eat, enough to work, and bang him often. This Country is water'd by the Niger, the greateſt River in Africk. It riſes in Lat. 9. Long. 25. in that call'd the Kingdom of Mujac, and falls into the Atlantick at Senegal Bar, Lat. 16. Long. W. 16. after a Courſe of 2800 Miles in a direct Line, without including Windings and Turnings. It increaſes and decreaſes at the ſame time and in the ſame manner as the Nile, and fructifies the Country when it overflows; whence ſome old Geographers thought 'twas a Branch of the Nile. Some aſcribe three principal Mouths to it, viz. the River of Senegal, the River of Gambia, and the Niger, or great River, call'd otherwiſe the River of St. Domingo; but by the Maps it appears to be without any certain Foundation. The Mouths of it are full of Sand, ſo that they can't be enter'd but at a high Tide, which flows twenty five Leagues within the Country. The chief Habitations of the Negroes are on the Banks of this River.

Negroland is divided into many Kingdoms. The moſt conſiderable are,

1. Tombut, the Weſtermoſt part of it, which is ſaid to produce Gold in great Quantities, Ivory, and good Tin; and its King is ſaid to have always a Guard of 3000 Horſe, and a prodigious Number of Foot. The Capital is of the ſame Name, Lat. 15 ½. Long. E 15. The People are reckon'd of a mild Temper, and are much pleas'd with Dancing.

2. Eaſt and North-eaſt from hence lies the Kingdom of Agades, which produces the beſt Sena. The Capital is of the ſame Name, Lat. 20. 50 Min. E. Long. The Country abounds alſo with Cattel.

3. The Kingdom of Canum, Eaſt from that, has a Capital of the ſame Name, Lat. 20. Eaſt Long. 10. 26. one of the beſt Towns in Negroland. The Country produces Cattel, Corn, Rice, Cotton, Fruit, and has freſh Water-Springs; but in the South-eaſt part there are Deſarts haunted by Robbers.

4. Eaſt from that lies the Kingdom of Bournou, where the People live in common, and the Men reckon thoſe their Children that reſemble them.

5. The Kingdom of Gaoga lies Eaſt from that. The Inhabitants are Mahometans and Pagans; and their King is the Deſcendant of a Negro Slave.

6. North from thence lies the Country of Kovar, the Capital Keuen, a populous City, South of the Tropick of Cancer.

7. South from that lies the Kingdom of Gorhan, where they have a particular Language. Emeralds are ſaid to be found in the Mountains on the South-ſide of it.

8. The Kingdom of Mujac lies South from Gorhan. Their King is very powerful, and is frequently at War with the great Macoco, whoſe Dominions lie to the South.

9. In an Iſland of the Niger, betwixt Lat. 10 & 13. and Long. 15. lies the Kingdom of Gangara, or Ouangara. The Country is rich, and abounds with Gold and Sena, which, with Numbers of Slaves, are brought from hence. The Capital of the ſame Name lies on the South-ſide of the Niger. Their King is abſolute; and his Troops are much eſteem'd by the Negroes.

10. The Kingdom of Terman lies Weſt of it; and the Inhabitants are ſaid to be Cannibals.

11. The Kingdom of Bito lies Weſt of that, and the People are ſaid to be very rich.

12. The Kingdom of Gago lies South from Tombut, abounds in Gold, Corn, Rice, Fruit, and Cattel. The King is abſolute, and ſells his Subjects for Slaves when they diſpleaſe him.

Weſt from Negroland, to the Coaſt of the Atlantick, about the Niger and the River Gambia, the Country is divided into ſeveral Kingdoms: The moſt conſiderable of which is Maadinga, or Manjinga, betwixt Lat. 10 & 15. 'Tis above two hundred Leagues in Length, and abounds with Gold. Their King is a ſort of Emperor, who has ſeveral Kings of Guinea ſubject to him. The Natives are call'd Souſo's, and their Capital conſiſts of about 6000 Houſes. 'Tis ſaid he has ſeveral good Men of War, and a good Body of Cavalry. In the South-weſt Part of this Country is the Kingdom of Melli, where, 'tis ſaid, are many fine rich Towns.

VI. GUINEA, or that called Upper or Proper Guinea,

IS South and Weſt from Negroland, upon which it formerly depended. It lies betwixt Negroland and the Equinoctial, is about two thouſand two hundred Miles Eaſt and Weſt, and five hundred and fifty, where broadeſt, South and North in the Eaſt part, but the Weſt is much indented by the Ethiopick Sea. It lies betwixt the Equator and the North Lat. 10. The Air is extremely hot, and the frequent Rains make it very unhealthful, eſpecially to Strangers. It is water'd with ſeveral ſmall Rivers, which make it very fruitful, ſo that in ſome Places they have two Harveſts in a Year. They have two Summers, and two Winters; the latter are only diſtinguiſh'd from the other by continual Rains, which, with the Cool of the Nights, make the Country habitable. The Product is Rice, Barley, long Pepper, and Sugar. Here are abundance of Elephants, Leopards, Tygers, Peacocks, Parrots, and Apes; the latter divided into ſeveral ſorts: Thoſe call'd Bari's are reckon'd the ſtrongeſt and moſt cunning: When taken young, and bred up, they are made uſe of as Servants to bring in Water, to turn the Spit, and ſerve at Table. Here are alſo Mines of Gold. The principal Things tranſported from hence are Gold Duſt, Ambergreaſe, Skins, Slaves, Ivory, and Wax, in exchange for Linen and Woollen Cloth, Arms, Glaſs-work, and Hard Ware. The Natives are witty, dextrous, and ſtrong; but proud, cheating, revengeful, cowardly, lazy, and great Thieves. They are very black, go naked, and eat raw Fleſh with the Guts. Their Women are very nimble and laſcivious. They have ſeveral Kings, who, as well as their Subjects, are Pagans; but ſome of them live in a ſort of Republick. The Country is divided into,

1. Malaguette, ſo call'd from the long Pepper with which it abounds. It reaches from Cape Sierra Leona on the North-weſt, to Cape Palmas on the South-eaſt, about five hundred and twenty five Miles. Little of it is known but the Coaſt. Places of Note are, Tomba the Capital, near the Mouth of the River Sierra Leona, ſaid to be a pretty large Town. The French have a Settlement here, which they call Little Diep; and there are two other Ports call'd Great Ceſtre and Little Ceſtre, frequented by Europeans. The Dutch call the South Part of this Country the Grain Coaſt. 'Tis ſubject to the King of Sangwin. Great and Little Ceſtre lie Weſt of Cape Palmas, in Lat. 5. Weſt Long. 5. 18.

2. Into Guinea Proper, divided into the Tooth Coaſt and Gold Coaſt, becauſe of their reſpective Products of Elephants Teeth and Gold Duſt.

There's no conſiderable Town on the Tooth Coaſt but Jamo, or Gamo, on the Weſt-ſide of the River Suero, which divides it from the Gold Coaſt, Lat. 5. Long. Weſt, 28 Minutes. This Coaſt is pretty populous, and has ſeveral Ports. The Portugueſe have a Fort call'd Archiem upon a River near the Cape of Three Points.

The Gold Coaſt has ſeveral Gold Mines, and abounds with Gold Duſt. The chief Settlements here are,

1. The Caſtle of Mina, alias St. George del Mina. It belongs to the Dutch, is the fineſt and moſt conſiderable on the Coaſt, and has a Village of the ſame Name adjoining to it. Here the Dutch land and unload the Goods they bring from Europe in the Magazines within the Fort. It was built by the Portugueſe, but taken by the Dutch in 1631. It is very ſtrong, and well built, with good Batteries of Cannon within, and on the Outworks. On the Land-ſide are two Ditches cut out of the Rock, which preſerve the Rain-water for the Gariſon and Ships. There are alſo three great Ciſterns full of good Water. They have a Battery of Iron Guns at the Mouth of the Harbour to ſalute Ships, and have ſeveral others mounted with Braſs Guns. The Caſtle is able to contain 1200 Men, and has Apartments for the General and chief Officers of the Factory. The neighbouring Village is large, the Houſes well built, of hard Stone; but 'tis not ſo populous as formerly, many of the Men having been cut off by the Small Pox. It lies in Lat. 5. Long. Eaſt, 10 Minutes. There's a River near the Vil-

Village whose Water is much salter than Brine; and they make Salt of it, which turns to a good account.

The other Dutch Forts on this Coast are,

2. Conradsburg, upon the Mountain of St. Jago, in the Neighbourhood of El Mina. 'Tis a square Fort with four large Batteries, besides four lesser ones upon the Ramparts. Below the Fort there's a River, into which the Sea enters, and makes very good Salt.

3. Nassau, East of Cape Coast, near the Village of Mouree. It was their chief Fort till they took El Mina, and has the highest Walls of any in this Country.

4. The Fort of Amsterdam, or Cormantyn, Lat. 5. which was taken from the English by Admiral Ruyter in 1665. It is pretty large, and has four Batteries mounted with twenty Guns.

5. Apam, in the Kingdom of Fantyn, East of El Mina. 'Tis call'd the Fort of Patience, because they met with much Opposition from the Negroes when they set about building it in 1697. It stands on a Hill, is small, and only mounted with eight Cannon.

6. Crevecœur, at Acra, or Acara, Lat. 6. E. Long. Min. 15. so near that of the English, that they may fire upon one another. This is a Place of good Trade, and a profitable Post for the Governor.

7. They have a large Factory at Fida, about Lat. 6. West of the Isle of Curamo, Long. 5. with three Warehouses, a fine Court, and many Chambers.

The English Settlements on this Coast are,

1. Sherboro, with a Fort on the East End of the Island of Massacoya, at the Mouth of the River Torre, Lat. 7. W. Long. 15. where there's a good Trade in Camwood, us'd by Dyers; and the Island abounds with Palm-Wine, Rice, Honey, and Sugar-Cane.

2. Dickys-Cove, East of Cape Three-Points, a square Fort with eight Guns, kept as a Place to provide Lime, Plank, and Timber, for repairing our other Forts on that Coast.

3. Cape Corse, or Cape Coast, Lat. 5. E. Long. 15 Min. 'Twas taken from the Dutch, and is the largest and finest Fort on the Coast, next to St. George del Mina, and the best belonging to the English. The Houses within are well built; and there's a high Tower for the Inhabitants to retire to when attack'd by the Negroes. It has five Batteries well mounted with Guns. Under the Castle there's another Fort, and a Tower behind the Town, mounted with Guns, to defend the Negro Inhabitants against their Enemies. 'Tis the Seat of the Governor, and other chief Officers that superintend the English Trade in Guinea.

4. Anamabo, or Charles-Fort, Lat. 6. E. Long. Min. 20. 'Tis very neat, has ten Guns, and a small Garison. The Harbour is good, well frequented, and has a good Trade in Slaves and Gold. The Negroes have a large Town in the Neighbourhood; and upon any Disgust confine the English to the Fort.

Queen Anne's-Fort, in the Neighbourhood, is a Tower with six Guns, and a few Men.

The Danes have a Fort at Acara call'd Christiansburg, about a Cannon-shot below the Dutch Fort; 'tis beautiful and strong, has four Batteries and twenty Guns. The Authority of each Nation is confin'd within their Forts, and they must only be on the Defensive; for to attempt any thing against the Natives would be certain Destruction. The English, Dutch, and Danes, do no hurt to one another here; for each of them have Goods which the other has not; and there's Gold and Slaves enough for 'em all, there being more Gold sometimes received here, than on the whole Coast besides.

The King of Prussia has two Forts on this Coast call'd Tacrama and Fredericksburg, North of the Cape of Three Points, but we have no Description of 'em.

The Kingdom of Benin lies East from Guinea Proper. Its King is reckon'd the most powerful Prince of Guinea, and has several neighbouring Kings for Vassals. The Natives are more polite than the other Negroes. The Air is more wholesome than that of Guinea Proper; so that People live here to above an hundred Years. They go naked from the Girdle upwards. They own a God, who created the Heaven and Earth, and is a good Being; therefore they give him no Worship, but adore the Devil, that he may do them no hurt. They have many Idols, and some of the Natives are addicted to Magick. Slaves and Jasper are brought from the North Parts of this Country; and towards the North-east there's a wicked People nam'd Calbongo, who are very treacherous and cruel to their Neighbours. The Capital of this Country is Benin, Lat. 8. Long. 9. reckon'd one of the most considerable Towns of Africk.

VII. NUBIA.

WE return to the East-side of Africk, where we have Nubia, alias, the Kingdom of Semar. It has Egypt on the North, Abyssinia on the South, part of Nigritia on the West, and the Red Sea on the East. The greatest Extent South and North is six hundred sixty Miles, and the greatest East and West is seven hundred and fifty. This Country is little known. The Air is so hot, that it produces little, except on the Rivers Nile, &c. The Commodities brought from hence are Gold, Musk, Ivory, Sandal-Wood, and Sugar. It yields a Poison which operates very quick, and is so dear that they sell it for a hundred Ducats per Ounce to strangers; but not without first taking an Oath that they won't use it in that Country. Here are also a great many Horses and wild Beasts. Their chief Traffick is with Cairo in Egypt. They are govern'd by a King, who is said to be very powerful, and to have conquer'd Semar from the Emperor of Abissinia. The Natives are brave, cunning, civil, and said to be rich. As to their Religion, some say they are a sort of Christians, like the Abyssines, and others, that they are a Mixture of Jews and Mahometans. The chief Towns of this Country are reckon'd, 1. Dancala, or Dongola, on the East-side of the Nile, Lat. 19. East Long. 29. It contains about 10000 Houses. 2. Jalac, on the same River. Both said to be Places of considerable Trade.

VIII. ABYSSINIA, ABASSIA, or ETHIOPIA,

IS reckon'd the greatest Dominion in Africa under one Prince. It has Nubia on the North, Gingiro, Alaba, and Ajan on the South, Negroland on the West, and the Red Sea on the East. The greatest Extent South and North is about nine hundred Miles, and East and West nine hundred and fifty. It is divided into many Kingdoms, which we can't insist on. 'Twas formerly of a much greater Extent; and some still include in it all the Country as far South as the Line. The Galles, who lie betwixt it and the Line, have subdued a considerable part of it; and the Turks have taken Arqua, or Arquico, which was the only Port they had on the Red Sea. This Country has abundance of Mountains, which are reckon'd its chief Defence. The Air on those Mountains is temperate; but 'tis very hot in the Valleys. Here are many Mines of Gold, Silver, Copper, Iron, Lead, and Sulphur; but the Inhabitants know not how to improve them. Upon the Rivers they have Millet, Flax, Cotton, Salt, Sugar, and Fruits of all sorts. Here's also store of Honey and Wax, and all sorts of tame and wild Beasts. Their Emperor is call'd the Grand Negus, and not Prester John, tho many Authors have run into that Mistake. He dwells with his Court under Tents, which he removes as occasion requires; and his Camp is reckon'd the Capital of the Empire. The Natives are very black, or tawny, but much handsomer than the Negroes. They are said to be witty, affable, and hospitable; but very idle, and take little care of what is to come. They are very loyal to their King, respectful to their Clergy, and devout in their way. They pretend that they were instructed in the Jewish Religion by their Queen Maqueda, who went to see Solomon; and in the Christian Religion by their Queen Candace's Eunuch, who was baptiz'd by Philip. They were afterwards tainted with the Errors of Dioscorus, are now of the same Religion with the Cophti's, and have a Metrapolitan subject to the Cophti Patriarch, who lives at Cairo, and calls himself Patriarch of Alexandria. Some reckon their Emperor is able to raise a Million of Men; and that his standing Army consists of 35000 Foot and 5000 Horse. His Camp takes up a vast Tract of Ground, because the Suttlers and others who attend are more numerous than the Soldiers. 'Tis so well order'd, that it looks like a City with regular Streets: His Tents or Palace with Chappels and Appartments for the Queen and Ladies, lie in the middle; and all his Subjects are oblig'd to bear Arms, except Mechanicks and Husbandmen. There's a famous Mountain in the Kingdom of Amira, towards the South of this Country, where all his Children and nearest Relations are kept in a sort of Confinement till he dies, that they may not disturb the Government. Some say there are no Towns in this Country; but 'tis so full of Villages, that it looks like one continued Town. Others say there are several Cities; but give no Description of 'em.

The Countries which lie betwixt Abyssinia and the Line, are,

1. The Kingdom of Galles, whose Inhabitants have withdrawn from the Obedience of the Grand Negus.

2. The Kingdom of Gingiro, where there's an Emperor who has under him fifteen Tributary Kings.

3. The Kingdom of Machida, reckon'd a powerful Nation, under a King of their own, who is of the Family of the Grand Negus, but always at War with him.

On the East-side of this Country, next to the Red Sea, lies that call'd the Coast of Abex, at the North-east Corner of which the Turks have a strong Town call'd Suaquem, Lat. 20. Long. 39. with a Pearl-Fishery in a neighbouring Island. The Turks keep a strong Garison here, that they may be Masters of the Red Sea, and of the Passage from Egypt to Mecca.

We come now to that Part of Africa which lies South of the Line, where we have,

IX. CONGO,

IX. CONGO, or Lower Guinea.

'TIS a vaſt Country divided into many Kingdoms; is 1100 Miles South and North towards the Coaſt, and about 820 where broadeſt on the North, but much contracted towards the South. It lies betwixt the Line and South Lat. 19. The Air is extremely hot; but the Soil very fruitful in Rice, Millet, Long Pepper, and Sugar Canes. It has the ſame ſort of Animals as Guinea; and the Inhabitants are Idolaters for the moſt part, except where the Portugueſe have fix'd Colonies, and made Converts. It is water'd by many Rivers, the chief of which are the Zaire or Coango, Coanza, and Cunenis. The two former run into the Ethiopick Ocean, but their Fountains are not known; and neither the Fountain nor Mouth of the latter is yet diſcover'd. The Natives are black, but not ſo deform'd as thoſe of Nubia and Upper Guinea. 'Tis reckon'd that 25000 of them are annually tranſported for Slaves.

The principal Diviſions or Kingdoms of this Country are,

1. Loango, which lies South of the Line, and along the Coaſt. It abounds with Corn, Palm-Wine, and excellent Fruits. The Capital Loangiri is in Lat. 6. near Long. 15. and poſſeſs'd by the Portugueſe, who trade in Slaves and Ivory.

2. The Kingdom of Congo Proper lies South from Loango, and abounds with Ivory, Coffee, and Tamarinds. Their King was formerly very powerful, and had ſeveral others for his Vaſſals, who have now ſhook off his Yoke. The Inhabitants are reckon'd the blackeſt of all the Negroes. The Portugueſe have ſeveral Settlements here; and the Mulattoes of their Extraction are tawny. This Kingdom is divided into ſeveral Provinces, ſome of which lie upon the Sea, and others within Land. The Capital St. Salvador, where the King reſides, is in Lat. 6. Long. 19. contains 100000 People, and the Portugueſe have a Factory here.

3. The Province of Songo, which lies on both Sides of the River Zaire, has a Port call'd Palmarinho, on the Weſt-ſide of the River, and abounds with Apes and Parrots.

4. The Province of Bamba lies South of it, and abounds with Elephants, Deer, Buffaloes, Tygers, Civet-Cats, and Parrots.

5. The Kingdom of Angola lies South of Bamba, is of a large Extent, and has rich Silver Mines poſſeſs'd by the Portugueſe; who, with the Dutch, tranſport great Numbers of Negroes from hence, reckon'd the ſtrongeſt in Africa. They have them in exchange for Woollen and Silk Stuffs, Cloth, Lace, Wine, Brandy, Oil, Spice, and Hard Ware. The Natives are Idolaters, except a few converted by the Dutch and Portugueſe. Their Arms are Bows, Arrows, Zagayes, and ſome uſe Scimiters; but they know not the Uſe of Fire-Arms. Places of chief Note here are, (1.) Loanda, Lat. 12. Long. 15. 'Tis a good Harbour, and defended by a Caſtle, where the Portugueſe Governor reſides. 'Tis alſo the See of a Biſhop. The Coaſt abounds with fine Shells, which paſs in this Country for Money. The King of the Country reſides uſually at Mapongo on the River Coanza. (2.) Benguela Nova, or St. Philip, Lat. 8. Long. 15. is a Factory belonging to the Dutch.

6. The Kingdom of Macaco, or Anzico, is a large Country on the N. E. of Congo. Part of it lies North of the Line, inhabited by a People call'd Bakke-Bakke, ſaid to be Dwarfs: And thoſe in the North-weſt Parts are Cannibals, who eat one another without diſtinction of Sex or Kindred. The Portugueſe trade to the South Parts of it for Cloth made of the Bark of Trees.

X. CAFRERIA.

WHICH contains all the moſt ſoutherly Part of Africa, from Cape Negro, on the Borders of Congo, and the Line, to the Cape of Good Hope, except Zanguebar and Ajan, &c. on the eaſtern Coaſt: ſo that it extends 2800 Miles S. E. and N. W. and is about 1750, where broadeſt, Eaſt and Weſt; but contracted towards the South and North. 'Tis divided into many Kingdoms, the chief of which we ſhall deſcribe in their places.

The Air is in moſt Places temperate; but the Country ill inhabited, tho the Soil is good, and produces good Corn and White Wine. The People are tawny, ill ſhap'd, have flat Noſes, thick Lips, and frightful Looks, and are for the moſt part ignorant and ſavage, except thoſe who are civiliz'd by the Portugueſe and Dutch. In ſome Places they are Cannibals, and not diſtinguiſhable from Beaſts but by their Form and Speech. They have ſtore of Beeves and Sheep, which they exchange on the Coaſt for Tobacco and Brandy. They employ themſelves chiefly in hunting Elephants, Elks, Rhinoceroſſes, Tygers, Lions, and Buffaloes. They don't value Clothes of Linen or Woollen, Looking-Glaſſes, &c. which the Negroes are ſo fond of; but value Iron, Copper, Latten, Hatchets, Knives, and Coral. Here are many Mountains and Rivers. The Coaſt, from Cape Negro, on the Borders of Congo, near S. Lat. 15. to Cape Das Voltas, near Lat. 30. is little known. The Inland Kingdoms of Chicova and Abouta, betwixt Lat. 12 & 20, and Long. 20 & 27. are ſaid ſaid to have rich Silver and Gold Mines.

The Hottentots Country is the moſt noted Place on the weſtern Coaſt, where we have the Cape of Good Hope, Lat. 35. Long. 21. 'Twas ſo call'd, becauſe when the Portugueſe doubled it in 1498, they hoped ſoon to arrive at the Eaſt Indies. 'Twas formerly call'd the Cape of Tempeſts, which are very frequent in its Neighbourhood. The Dutch Fort is in Lat. 34. and was founded in 1651, when they bought from a petty King a League of Ground, for which they paid in Brandy and Tobacco. They rais'd a Woodden Fort at firſt, and put a hundred Men in it, with fifteen Guns; but in 1680 they made it a regular Fortreſs of hewn Stone, with five Baſtions, on which they planted above ſixty Guns. Within Muſquet-ſhot there's a Village of about two hundred Houſes, handſomely built, after the Dutch way. Here's a fine Garden belonging to the Governor, with all the curious Trees and Plants of Europe, Africa, Aſia, and America. Above an hundred and fifty Ships, moſt of 'em Dutch, put in here annually for Refreſhments, where they have good Water, Mutton, Fowls, and Wine. The Dutch have extended their Plantations above ſeventy five Miles into the Country, and encourage Planters, who live in Eaſe and Plenty, eſpecially abundance of French Refugees. The Governor lives in great Splendor, is ſerv'd in Plate, and has the beſt Wines and other Rarities the World affords.

The Hottentots, who live in the neighbouring Country, are miſerable Savages. They know nothing of Agriculture or Fiſhing, live chiefly on Roots, Cockles, or what dead Fiſh they find on the Shore, and eat the Skins, Heads, and Entrails of Animals, without cleaning them. They wear the Skins of Sheep, &c. like Mantles, and cover their Privities with Sheeps Tails. Thoſe of better faſhion wear Rows of Tripe or Guts about their Necks, with a Knife in a woodden Sheath hanging to them, and Bracelets of Copper or Iron. Such as have any Command among 'em carry a Stick in their Hands, with a Fox-Tail at the end. They have no Houſes, but lodge at Night among Shrubs, under a ſorry Tent made of Skins.

Table-Bay lies North of the Dutch Settlement. The Mountain over it, and from whence 'tis nam'd, looks like a flat Table, is 1350 Foot perpendicular from the Shore, and ſeen above twenty Leagues at Sea. The Bay is about ſix Leagues round, has good Anchorage, freſh Water in plenty, and ſafe Riding; and Ships may go in and out with any Wind, except the North-weſt.

Soldania Bay lies North from this about thirty Miles, abounds with freſh Water, has ſafe Riding from four to ſix Fathom deep, and plenty of Fiſh. The Engliſh frequently put in here. The Air is wholeſome, the Soil fit for Engliſh Plants, and the neighbouring Country fruitful and pleaſant. The Natives have a Village about five Miles from it, and exchange their Commodities for Veſſels or Pieces of Braſs.

South-eaſt from the Cape of Good Hope there are two other Capes: One call'd Cape Falſe, becauſe 'tis often miſtaken for that of Good Hope; and the other the Cape of Needles, becauſe the Compaſs has very little Variation here.

The Eaſtern Coaſt of Cafreria from the River St. Eſprit, Lat. 25. to Lat. 10, is more fruitful than the other Coaſts, and contains ſeveral Kingdoms; among others that of Sofala, with its Capital, Lat. 20. Long. 34. poſſeſs'd and fortified by the Portugueſe, who have a great Trade here in Gold and Elephants Teeth; the Mountains of Manca, where there are Gold Mines, being above two hundred Miles South-weſt diſtant from it.

The other Dominions in the North and Eaſt of Cafreria are,

I. The Empire or Dominions of Monomotapa, North from the Country of the Hottentots. Authors differ about its Extent and Boundaries. The Air is hot, and the People very black; but more handſome, witty, and much better Soldiers than their Neighbours, and ſo nimble, that they run as faſt as Horſes. They are Pagans, govern'd by an Emperor, who has many Tributary Kings under him, and is reckon'd one of the moſt powerful Princes in Africa. Here's a Country ſaid to be inhabited by Women, who are Warriors like the old Amazons, and make the beſt part of the Emperor's Militia, who has a Guard of them always about him. There are ſo many rich Gold and Silver Mines, and ſo much is found in the Sands of the Rivers, in his Country, that the Portugueſe call him the Golden Emperor. The Soil is fat, abounds with Rice, Millet, Fruits of all ſorts, and Sugar Canes. Here are alſo great Numbers of Oſtriches, Elephants, and Black Cattel; but few Horſes.

There are but few Towns in the Country. Monomotapa, the Capital, is in Lat. 22. Long. 31. 'Tis large, handſome, and the Houſes built of Wood, like Steeples, but 'neat without and within. Zimbao, or Moſſapa, about a hundred and twenty Miles further South, is another City where the Emperor uſually reſides, and has a ſtately Palace.

II. The Empire of Monoemugi lies North of Monomotapa, as far as the Line, from Lat. 15. is 900 Miles long, and 760 broad. 'Tis little known; but is ſaid to abound with Silver, Gold, and Ivory. The People in many Places are ſaid to be Cannibals. There's a Range of Mountains in the South Parts, which the Caffres call the Backbone of the World; and on the Eaſt-ſide of 'em a River, that runs South into the great River Couama, by which the Caffres, in Alliance with the Portugueſe, drive on their chief Trade.

Chicova, in the Country of that Name, Lat. 16. Long. 25. is ſaid to be the Capital of the Empire, and the Reſidence of the Emperor, to whom his Subjects pay divine Worſhip. The Portugueſe have a Fort on a little Iſland call'd St. Martin, in the Mouth of the great River Cumana, or Zembeſe, near the North Branch of it, nam'd Killimana River; but they have not much Footing in the Country.

XI. ZANGUEBAR.

LIES North of Monomotapa, from which 'tis divided by the River Zembeſe, and Eaſt from Monoemugi, along the Coaſt of the Indian Ocean, from South Lat. 18. to the Line, 180 Miles in Length, but of a very diſproportionable Breadth, being a narrow Slip, except on the South, where the greateſt Breadth is about 650 Miles. 'Tis divided into ſeveral Kingdoms, and full of Marſhes, which make the Air unhealthful, and the Country barren in many Places; but in others there's ſtore of Rice, Millet, Citrons, and Oranges. The chief Riches conſiſt in Gold and Ivory, in which they drive a great Trade with the Portugueſe and other Europeans. The Natives are black, and of a more tractable Temper than their Neighbours; but moſt of 'em Mahometans or Pagans.

The chief Kingdoms or Provinces are,

1. Boror, South of the River Zembeſe, a populous and fruitful Country, in Alliance with the Portugueſe, and three little Kingdoms Eaſt from it on the Coaſt.

2. Mozambique, which ſome place in the Kingdom of Mauruca, and others make a diſtinct Kingdom. 'Tis fruitful, has ſome Gold Mines, and abounds with Elephants. Here's a Fig-Tree which dies and revives annually: The Figs are four times as large as ours, and one of the Leaves will cover two Men. The King and moſt of his Subjects are Mahometans; ſome of them are Pagans, and others Savages, who live in the Woods. The Capital is Mozambique, in an Iſland of the ſame Name, at the Mouth of a River, Lat. 16. Long. 40. The Iſland is unhealthful and barren, but populous becauſe of the Trade with the Portugueſe, to whom it belongs. The Town is defended by a good Fortreſs, and has a commodious Harbour, where the Portugueſe Ships put in and refreſh, as they come from and go to the Eaſt Indies.

3. Mongale, North-weſt of Mozambique. The King and People are Mahometan Arabs, and trade in Gold.

4. Quiloa, North from Mongale, is very fruitful, but the moſt unhealthful Country in Zanguebar. The King and moſt of the People are Mahometans, but ſome of 'em Savages. The Capital lies in an Iſland of the ſame Name, Lat. 12. Long. 39. 'Tis a fine City, divided into Old and New; the Houſes are high and magnificent, and the People numerous and rich. The Portugueſe took it in 1505; but not being able to endure the Air, reſtor'd it on condition of 1500 Marks of Gold per Ann. which the King pays 'em.

5. Mombaza, North of Quiloa, a large Country, well water'd and fruitful. Their King turn'd Chriſtian in 1510, after the Portugueſe took their Capital; but in 1631, tho the King pretended to be a Chriſtian, and married one, he took the Citadel of Mombaza from the Portugueſe by Storm, put 'em all to the Sword, and turn'd Turk for the Protection of the Mahometans. The Town lies on an Iſland, Lat. 7. Long. 40. 'Tis large, well built, has a ſtrong Fortreſs, and a commodious Harbour well frequented.

6. Melinda lies North of Mombaza, a ſmall Kingdom under Protection of the Portugueſe. The Capital of the ſame Name is Lat. 8. Long. 41. upon the Coaſt, is large, handſome and rich, has a good Harbour, and is defended by a Citadel that commands the Port. 'Twas built by the Portugueſe, who have ſeventeen Churches in the Town where the King reſides. He and moſt of his Subjects are Mahometans.

7. North from hence, near the Line, are the petty Kingdoms and Towns of Lamo, Pate, and Sian, whoſe Princes are Tributaries to the Portugueſe. And juſt under the Line is Baraboa, a trading Town with a good Harbour.

XII. AJAN.

THE Coaſt of Ajan lies North from the Line as far as the Mouth of the Red Sea. The Country abounds with Gold, Ivory, Wax, Ambergreaſe, and good Horſes. Moſt of the People are white, and either Mahometans or wandering Savages. 'Tis divided into,

1. The Republick of Brava; and the only one on this Coaſt. 'Tis of ſmall Extent, but very fruitful, and has a great Trade in Ambergreaſe, Gold, and Silk Stuffs. The Capital of the ſame Name is in South Lat. 1. Long. 45. a handſome, ſtrong and populous Town, under protection of the Portugueſe, to whom they pay an annual Tribute of Gold.

2. The Kingdom of Magadoxo, North of Brava. 'Tis very fruitful, and abounds with good Horſes, Gold, Ivory, and Wax. The Capital of the ſame Name is in North Lat. 2. Long. 44. has a good Fortreſs and Harbour, and formerly commanded all the Coaſt. 'Tis frequented by Merchants from Cambaya and Aden, who trade hither with Spices, Drugs, and Silk Stuffs. The River Magadoxo, which falls into the Sea near this Town, overflows and fructifies the Country annually. Bandel Velho, on the ſame Coaſt, North from Magadoxo, is alſo a good Town and Harbour.

The North Part of this Coaſt, as far as the Mouth of the Red Sea, is call'd the Deſart-Coaſt, being very little inhabited, and produces nothing but Herds of wild Beaſts.

3. The Kingdom of Adel, or Zeila, lies Weſt from this Coaſt on the Frontiers of Abaſſia, and reaches to the Red Sea. 'Tis remarkable for little but Aucagazela, the Capital, North Lat. 10. Long. 45. and Zeila, a Harbour on the Red Sea, Lat. 12. Long. 44.

XIII. The African Iſlands,

ARE divided into thoſe of the Atlantick and the Indian Ocean. Thoſe of the Atlantick are,

I. The Maderas, off of the Coaſt of Morocco, Lat. 33. betwixt W. Long. 14 & 18. The chief Iſland, which gives Name to the reſt, lies four hundred Miles Weſt from Cape Cantyn in Morocco. 'Tis about ſeventy ſix Miles long, and thirty four broad, was diſcover'd by Robert Manchin, or Maſham, an Engliſhman, in the Reign of Edward III. Anno 1344. As to which there's this remarkable Story: He was Captain of a Ship; and when going on his Voyage, carried off with him from Briſtol a handſome young Woman call'd Anne Iffet. He was drove in here by Tempeſt, where the unfortunate Lovers, and thoſe that landed with them, died of Famine: for ſoon after they landed, they went aſhore, and the Ship was drove from her Anchor by a furious Tempeſt, and caſt away on the Coaſt of Morocco. The Crew was put in Priſon there, where they found a Spaniſh Pilot call'd John de Morales, to whom they told their Diſcoveries, and particularly of this Iſland. Some time after, Morales fell into the Hands of the Portugueſe, and John Gonzalve Zalco being employ'd by Dom Henry, Infant of Portugal, to make Diſcoveries, made uſe of Morales, who carried him to Madera in 1420. They found a ſort of a Tomb, that Maſſam had erected for his Miſtreſs, who died firſt, with his Name and an Account of his Adventure. The Iſland was deſart, and ſo woody, that in order to make it habitable, they ſet fire to the Woods, which burnt ſeveral Years before they could be conſumed; and the Aſhes did ſo fructify the Iſland, that when they ſow'd Corn there, it yielded at firſt ſixty for one, but decreas'd gradually, and now does not yield above twenty five for one. It has been in poſſeſſion of the Portugueſe ever ſince, and is one of the moſt pleaſant and fruitful that belongs to them. The Air is temperate, and the Soil water'd by ſeven or eight little Rivers. It produces excellent Sugar and Wine, which yield the King of Portugal a conſiderable Revenue. It alſo abounds with good Wheat, Citrons, Oranges, Pomegranates, Fowl, Honey, Wax, and Dragons-Blood. Moſt of the Inhabitants are Portugueſe, and of a more tractable Temper than thoſe of the Canaries. The Capital is Fanzal, on a Bay in the South-ſide of the Iſland. 'Tis about a Mile long, and three quarters broad, well fortify'd, and the Works mounted with Cannon. 'Tis the Seat of a Governor, and the See of a Biſhop, Suffragan to Lisbon. 'Tis defended by three Fortreſſes. The Harbour is good, lies in form of a Creſcent, and Ships ride within Piſtol-ſhot of the Town. On the Right of the Harbour there's a Rock, upon which there's a Fort, built for defence. There are many Churches in the Town, and about thirty ſix Pariſhes in the Iſland, with ſix or ſeven thouſand Houſes, and a great many built for Pleaſure. Some reckon the Number of Inhabitants at 25000. In the Mountains there are wild Boars, Partridges, Pigeons, and Quails. Beſides the Churches, there are five Cloiſters, four Hoſpitals, and eighty two Hermitages in the Iſland. The Jeſuits have the chief Rule here, and are the greateſt Merchants, and ſole Maſters of the Malmſey Vineyards. The Iſland is reckon'd to produce 20000 Pipes per Ann. The Grapes are ſuppos'd to have been firſt tranſplanted hither from Candy.

The other remarkable Iſland is Porto Santto, which lies about 50 Miles North-eaſt from Madera. 'Tis about eight Leagues round, is pretty well inhabited, and the Product much the ſame with that of the great Iſland. The leſſer ones are not worth taking notice of.

II. The Canary Iſles lie South from Madera, from which Teneriff, the chief of them, is about 200 Miles. The moſt Eaſterly are about 125. from Cape Non on the Coaſt of Africk. Their Situation is betwixt Lat. 28. and 30. and Long. 22. and 10. They are generally ſuppos'd to be the Fortunate Iſlands of the Antients. The Air is healthful, the Soil fruitful, and they are well peopled. They are about ten in number, but ſeven only are conſiderable. They were diſcover'd at ſeveral times. The chief Product is excellent Wine and Sugar, and Singing-Birds, which have their Names from the Iſlands. We take them in order as they lie, and begin with Fer, or Fero, which is the moſt Weſtern, and therefore has been long us'd as the firſt Meridian, becauſe 'tis the moſt Weſterly part of our Hemiſphere. 'Tis 22 Leagues in Compaſs, but barren. 'Twas diſcover'd in 1445. This Iſland is chiefly remarkable for a wonderful Tree, which the Spaniards call Holy. A Cloud hangs perpetually about it, from whence the Leaves of the Tree diſtil Water in ſuch abundance, that being receiv'd into a great Baſon, it ſerves all the Inhabitants. This Tree is 40 foot high, the Trunk 12 in Diameter, and the Branches 120. It bears a ſort of a Nut, which has an excellent Aromatical Taſt. Monſieur du Pleſſis, whoſe Geography was publiſh'd at Amſterdam in 1700, denies there ever was ſuch a Tree, and ſays, that the Inhabitants and modern Travellers ſay they could never hear nor know any thing of it: But as it is mention'd and deſcrib'd very particularly by Herbert, Sir Richard Hawkins, Mandelſloe, Le Croix, whoſe Accounts of Africa were publiſh'd at Lyons in 1688, Luyts, Jackſon, and others, and particularly by Monſieur du Fer in his ſhort Method of Geography, printed at the Hague in 1706; we can ſcarce think it a Fable, tho perhaps the Phenomenon has been magnify'd in ſome Circumſtances; for Monſieur le Maire, whoſe Voyages were publiſh'd at Paris in 1695, ſays, he was inform'd by the Natives, that tho they knew nothing of any one Tree which furniſh'd ſo much Water, they own'd there were Trees of that ſort which did furniſh Water, tho not in ſuch Quantities.

2. Gomera Iſland lies Eaſt from Fero, and near the Coaſt of Teneriff. 'Tis 22 Leagues round, has many deep good Roads, and abounds with Corn, Fruit, Sugar, good Wine, and Dragons-Blood. The Capital is of the ſame Name, and has a good Harbour. The Spaniſh Fleets bound to America uſually put in here for Refreſhments.

3. Palma, lies North-Weſt from Teneriff about 26 Miles, is 26 Leagues round, abounds with excellent Wine, Fruit, and Sugar. The Capital, Santta Cruz, is a pretty good Town, with a commodious and well-frequented Harbour. There are ſeveral Villages, and a Vulcano, in this Iſland.

4. Teneriff lies betwixt the laſt mention'd Iſlands and the Grand Canary, from which 'tis about ten Leagues South-Eaſt. 'Tis the largeſt and richeſt of all the Canaries, and about ſixty Leagues round. It furniſhes 28000 Tuns per Annum of the beſt Canary-Wine, and has a Foreſt of Laurels full of Singing-Birds. Here is that moſt famous Pike, one of the higheſt in the World, which is ſeen forty Leagues at Sea. 'Tis very ſteep, and always cover'd with Snow at the top, tho none ever falls at the bottom, where it never freezes. The Dutch fix their firſt Meridian at this Mountain. It has a Vulcano on the top, which ſometimes throws out Flames. This Iſland is very populous. The Capital is Laguna on the Eaſt-ſide, and the Reſidence of the Governor. St. Croix, a little Town, lies on the Eaſt Point, and has a Harbour. Here was a terrible Earthquake in 1704, which began in December, laſted two Months, deſtroy'd Thouſands of People, ſwallow'd up ſome Towns, and overturn'd others.

5. Grand Canary gave Name to the reſt, and lies in the middle of them. 'Tis about forty Leagues round, produces abundance of Fruit, Wine, and Corn, of which they have two Harveſts a year, one in February, and the other in May. Here is alſo ſtore of Cattel, Wild Beaſts, and Fowl. The Capital is of the ſame name, and by ſome call'd The City of Palms. 'Tis a fine Town, has a good Caſtle on a Harbour, and is the See of a Biſhop, Suffragan of Seville.

6. Fonteventura lies about 17 Leagues Eaſt from the Grand Canary, is about 56 round, produces abundance of Olives, Wheat, Barley, Maſtick, Balm, fine white Salt, and Oricella, which ſerves for Dying. It has no Towns, but only ſome Villages of ſmall Note.

7. Lancerota lies North-Eaſt from Ferteventura, from which 'tis ſeparated by a narrow Channel. 'Tis about 24 Leagues round, and has the ſame Product as Forteventura. The other Iſlands are ſo ſmall, that they deſerve no Deſcription.

III. The Azores, or Terceras Iſlands, lie North-Weſt from Madera, betwixt Lat. 35. and 43. and betwixt Long. 23. and 32. They were diſcover'd by the Portugueſe in 1449. The Dutch call them Fleming Iſlands, becauſe they alledge the firſt Inhabitants of Fayal were Netherlanders. The Air is pretty temperate, ſo that the Inhabitants are ſubject to few Diſeaſes, except Impoſthumes. Their Rocks, that are not ſo much as cover'd with Earth, produce ſtore of Vines, which thrive better than in the Valleys, but the Wine is not ſo good as that of the Maderas and Canaries. Here's plenty of Wheat, which they ſend to Portugal, and therefore are call'd the Granary of that Country. Pears, Apples, Citrons, Oranges, Peaches, Cherries, Plumbs, Walnuts, Cheſnuts, Pot-Herbs of all ſorts, and Potatoes, which are much eſteem'd in Portugal, abound here. Here's plenty of Fiſh, Cattel, and all ſorts of tame Fowl, and ſmall Birds; but they have no Wild Fowl nor Veniſon. Cedar is ſo common, that the Inhabitants uſe it for Fuel, and other ordinary Occaſions. Theſe Iſlands are of great Uſe to the Portugueſe in their Paſſage to the Eaſt Indies and Brazil, for their Ships generally put in here for Proviſions. Here are no Harbours, but open Bays ſubject to Winds and other Dangers, and the Anchorage is not good. Storms begin in Auguſt, and commonly laſt nine Months, ſo that the Seas here are reckon'd the moſt inconſtant in the World. The Inhabitants are laborious, and excellent Husbandmen. Luyts ſays, theſe Iſlands are very ſubject to Earthquakes, and that in 1614, the Towns of Angra and Praya were almoſt ruin'd by one; and in 1628, the Iſland of St. Michael was terribly ſhaken, and a new Iſland, about a League and a half long was puſh'd up ſixty Fathom above Water, at a ſmall Diſtance from it. He adds, that there are ſeveral hot Baths and Springs, which turn Wood into Stone. Ortelius ſays, that as ſoon as Ships paſs the Azores for America, the Bugs, Fleas, Lice, and all ſuch Vermin die immediately. There are nine of theſe Iſlands, which are moſt taken notice of.

1. Corvo, a ſmall Iſland, Lat. 41. Long. 30. The Spaniards ſay it roſe out of the Sea in a Storm. The Harbour is not good; the People are poor, and infeſted by Pirates. Some take it to be the moſt natural Place for the firſt Meridian, becauſe the Needle here points directly North without Variation.

2. Flores, South from Corvo, in Lat. 40. It abounds with Cattel and good Paſture, and has a Town called Santta Cruza.

3. Fayal lies South-Eaſt from Flores, is ſeventeen or eighteen Leagues round, inhabited chiefly by the Poſterity of the Flemings, who diſcover'd it, and abounds with Fiſh and other Proviſions, which they carry to the other Iſlands. They alſo ſell much Dyers Wood. The chief Town is by ſome called Dorta, and by others Fayal. It has been ſeveral times taken by the Engliſh and others, who plunder'd it, but 'tis ſtill a handſome Town, with a Caſtle and Gariſon. The Houſes are well built of Lime and Stone, wainſcotted with Cedar, and every Houſe has a Garden planted with Vines, Figs, Peaches, Oranges, Lemons, Quinces, and ſome Tobacco.

4. Pico, South-Eaſt from Fayal, ten Miles round. 'Tis ſhap'd like a Pyramid, and the Top uſually cover'd with Fogs. The Soil is for the moſt part ſulphureous, and there are many Places, from which proceed Smoke, Flame, and Brimſtone; but there are pleaſant Shades and Streams in the Valleys. 'Tis reckon'd more fertile than the other Iſlands, and abounds with Cedars and large beautiful Trees, call'd Teco, whoſe Wood is very hard, red within, wav'd without, and allow'd to none but the King's Officers. They make very fine Cabinets, much eſteem'd in Portugal. Here are two little Towns, call'd St. Sebaſtian, and Callota de Neſquin, both upon the Eaſt Coaſt.

5. St. George's Iſland, Eaſt from Fayal, is about twelve Leagues long, and three broad. It has Foreſts of Cedar, which are ſold to thoſe of Tercera, where it is made up by Joiners, &c. into ſeveral Utenſils, and tranſported. Here's Plenty of Proviſions, and a Town of its own Name.

6. Gracioſa, North from St. George, is about five or ſix Leagues round, very pleaſant, and has Plenty of Fruit, which they ſell in great Quantities. The chief Place is call'd La Plaia, which is pretty ſtrong.

7. Tercera, South-Eaſt from Gracioſa, reſembles three Iſlands, from whence the Name. It abounds with Wine, Oil, Corn, Wood, Apples, Lemons, Oranges, Cabbages, Turnips, Pot-Herbs, and excellent Potatoes. Their Black Cattel are larger than ours, have exceſſive long Horns, and are very tame. Sir William Monſon ſays, 'tis ſtronger by Nature than any of the other Iſlands, and is encompaſs'd with high Clifts, a few Bays excepted which are fortify'd. Tho their Corn be good, it will not keep, unleſs ſtor'd in Vaults till after Chriſtmas, and then kept in Cheſts of Bulruſhes. The chief Town is Angra on the South Coaſt. It has the beſt Harbour of all the Iſlands, inclos'd by two Mountains in form of a Creſcent, which are ſeen fourteen Leagues at Sea, and defended by ſeveral Forts, which make it impregnable, but the Anchorage is not good. 'Tis the See of a Biſhop, Suffragan of Lisbon, and the Seat of the Portugueſe Governor. 'Tis encompaſs'd by Walls and ſharp Rocks, and the Town and Forts are well gariſon'd. About three Leagues from it lies Villa Praya, another Town well wall'd and built, but thinly inhabited, and of no great Trade.

8. St. Michael's Iſland, lies South-Eaſt of Tercera, is the largeſt of the Azores, about 32 Leagues round, and abounds with Wheat. The chief Town is Punta del Gada; and tho the Anchorage be not good, the Harbour is more frequented than Angra, becauſe Strangers can go and come in when they pleaſe, which they can't do there. It was plunder'd by the Earls of Eſſex and Cumberland in Queen Elizabeth's time, when they found vaſt Sums of Money and rich Goods here.

9. St. Mary's, lies South-Eaſt of St. Michael, and is the moſt Southerly of the Azores, has a Town of the ſame Name, and is ſo ſtrong by Nature, Nature, that it needs no Garison. 'Tis chiefly noted for Provisions and Potters Ware.

IV. The Islands of Cape Verd, are so call'd from the Cape of that Name in Africa, from which they lie West 115 Leagues. Their Situation is betwixt Lat. 15. and 18. and betwixt West Long. 20. and 25. They are ill peopled, because the Air is unwholesome, and the Soil barren. Some take them to be the antient Hesperides, but without much Ground. They are about twenty in number, but no more than ten are commonly taken notice of. The chief is that of St. Jago or James, in Lat. 16. Long. 24. 'Tis about eighty Leagues round. The Capital, Ribeyra Grande, on the South-East Corner of the Island, is the Residence of a Portuguese Governour, and the See of a Bishop, Suffragan of Lisbon. The chief Riches of this, and the other Islands, consist in Skins of Goats and Deer, of which they have great Flocks, and in Salt, that is form'd naturally of the Water left by the Tides, and loads annually above a hundred Ships. (2.) St. Nicholas, about twenty Leagues North from St. Jago, is the largest next to it, and has the same Product. (3.) St. Lucia, lies North-West, separated from St. Nicholas by a narrow Channel, is the best inhabited next to St. Jago, and has a Port call'd The English Harbour. (4) St. Anthony, ten Leagues North-East, has Vines and other Fruit-Trees, which bear twice a year, and abounds with Wild Fowl, Goats, Hogs, Musk, Water-Melons, Oranges, Bananas, Potatoes, Limes, Tobacco, and Indian Corn. The Natives are very poor, and exchange their Commodities for Clothes and other Necessaries, sooner than for Money. 'Tis the Seat of a Deputy-Governour. (5.) St. Vincent, near the South-West Point of St. Anthony, has a good Harbour, and abounds with Tortoises, which are very good Meat, Goats, &c. so that Ships put frequently in for Refreshment. (6.) The Island of Sel, or Salt, 26 Leagues East from St. Nicholas, has its Name from the great Quantity of very good Salt found here. 'Tis about 18 Leagues round. (7.) Bonavista, ten Leagues South from the Isle of Salt. It has an agreeable Prospect at a Distance, from whence it had the Name. 'Tis about twenty Leagues round, barren, and produces little but Goats, Tortoises, and Fish. The Inhabitants are but few, and employ themselves chiefly in Hunting. (8.) The Isle of May, East from St. Jago three Leagues. 'Tis small, and the Coast full of Shoals, but has a great Trade in Salt and Goats, with which it abounds. The Inhabitants are Negroes, Papists, and subject to the Portuguese. Their Fruits are only sorry Figs and Water-Melons. Their Beasts are Black Cattel, Asses, Goats, and Wild Horses. The rest are not worth mentioning.

V. Islands belonging to the French on the Coast of Africa near Cape Verd.

1. Goree Island, Lat. 14. Long. 17. lies about a League from Cape Verd, and was so call'd by the Dutch, because it resembles an Island of that Name in Zealand. 'Tis very small, and belongs to the French Company of Senegal, the Governor whereof resides at a Village in the Continent, a League from thence. It was first possess'd by the Portuguese, and then by the Dutch, from whom the French took it in 1677.

2. St. Lewis's Island lies in the middle of the River of Senegal, five Leagues above its Mouth, Lat. 16. Long. 16. 'Tis a League in Compass, and has a Factory belonging to the French Senegal Company. The Negroes traffick here in Skins, Ivory, Slaves, and Ambergrease; and the Moors sometimes bring hither Gum-Arabick, for which they receive in exchange Linen, Cloth, Cotton, Copper, Pewter, Iron, Brandy, and Earthen Ware. The Skins, Ivory, and Gum, are sent to France; and the Slaves to the French Islands, to be employ'd in their Sugar-Works.

VI. The Islands on the Coast of Guinea, and in the Ethiopian Ocean, of any Note, are,

1. That of Fernand Po, who was the Discoverer. It lies on the South Coast of the Kingdom of Benin, about seven Leagues from the Shore, North Latitude 2½. Long. 11. The Natives are Savages. 'Tis about 18 Leagues long, and 12 broad, produces Mandhoca, Rice, Tobacco, and some Fruit, and abounds with Fowl, Fish, and Wild Beasts. The Portuguese have a Fort at the North-end, and several Villages.

2. Prince's Island, 25 Leagues South West from Fernand Po. It was so call'd, because assign'd to the Prince of Portugal for part of his Revenue. 'Tis about twelve Leagues long, and eight broad, abounds with Rice, Millet, Oranges, Cocoes, Lemons, Bananas, Sugar-Canes, Cotton, Hogs, Poultry, Fish, Tobacco, and Ginger. The Portuguese have a Fort, and a considerable Town here, where their Ships to and from the East Indies put in to refresh. The Inhabitants have Provision enough to furnish their own Ships, and to sell to others.

3. The Isle of St. Thomas, lies twenty Miles South-West, under the Line, is about eighteen Leagues long, and twelve broad. From hence the Gulph on the Coast has its Name. The Portuguese discover'd it on St. Thomas's Day in 1405. The Air is very healthful. The Product is Wheat, Rye, Barley, Millet, Pot-Herbs, Figs, Sugar-Canes, Melons, and Cucumbers. Here are great numbers of Partridges, Quails, Blackbirds, Parrots, Fish, and Hogs. The Portuguese have a Town on the East-side, called Povoasan, or St. Thomas. It is well fortify'd, is the Seat of the Governor, and the See of a Bishop, Suffragan of Lisbon. The Portuguese Ships to and from the East Indies put in here for Refreshment.

4. Annobon, 32 Leagues South from it, South Lat. 2. W. Long. 8. It was named so by the Portuguese, who discover'd it on New-Year's-Day. 'Tis small, but fertile, inhabited by Portuguese, and well stock'd with Cattel. The Fruits are Cocoes, Oranges, and Lemons, very cheap. It has a small Town slightly fortify'd. There are inaccessible Hills in the Middle. The Portuguese have Negro Slaves here. The Inhabitants are exceeding wicked, addicted to Thievery, and the Women common.

5. St. Helena, so call'd by the Portuguese because they discover'd it on St. Helen's Day. It lies in Lat. 16. near West Long. 5. five hundred fifty Leagues West from Cape Negro in Congo, or Lower Guinea, and farther from the Continent than any Island in the World. 'Tis small, but fruitful and healthful, because the Heat of the Sun is temper'd by the Dews and Winds; and they have seldom any Storms, Thunder, or Lightning. It abounds so with good fresh Water, that 'tis called the Mariners Inn. It was formerly possess'd by the Portuguese, from whom the English took it. 'Tis thirty Miles round. All the Landing-places are fortified, and mounted with Cannon, besides Alarm-Guns, which are planted on the Hills: So that four hundred Men are able to defend it against the greatest Fleet and Army. The chief Town, lies in Chappel-Valley, near James's Fort, and consists of forty or fifty Houses. All Things are dear to Strangers, except Roots and Lemons. They have 1500 Black Cattel, with plenty of Hogs, Goats, Turkeys, and other Poultry. They sell their Turkeys for a Dollar a piece, a small Ox for six Pounds, and Kidney-Beans, which is their chief Grain, from eight to twelve Shillings a Bushel. The common People subsist chiefly on Potatoes, Yams, Plantanes, Pulse, Horse-Mackarel, Conger-Eels, Water-Snakes, &c. and if they have Flesh once a Week, reckon it good Living. They are much infested with Rats and Mice, and pester'd with Flies, Gnats, and Bugs. The English East India Company have a Governor, Deputy-Governor, and a Storehouse Keeper, with standing Salaries, and a publick Table well furnish'd, to which all Commanders, Masters of Ships, and Passengers of Note, are welcome. The Governor, and some others, have Gardens well stock'd with Plantanes, Bananas, and other choice Fruits, brought from the East. The Inhabitants are loud. The Company allows a Minister here a hundred Pounds a Year, besides Gratuities from the People. Mr. Ovington says, that one Cause of the Poverty of the Place is, that the Inhabitants are not permitted to trade with so much as one single Vessel. The Governor with his Council are absolute, and the People have no Representatives; so that they must apply to the Company for redress of Grievances. Dampier says, the Houses of the Town are meanly furnish'd, and for the most part empty, except when Ships arrive, because the Owners have Plantations in other Parts of the Island. They exchange their Commodities for Clothes, Arack, Sugar, and Lime-Juice. Their common Drink is Water, or Mobby, which is little better. Most of the Islanders are poor; but keep Punch-Houses, and have comely Daughters, who often marry Seamen or Passengers, that they may see the World. The Planters have Blacks for Slaves, who frequently hide themselves among the Rocks by Day, and rove abroad at Night for Provisions. Here are Drugs, and plenty of wild Tobacco on the Hills. The Inhabitants are supplied with Necessaries twice a Month out of the Company's Store-House, at six Months Credit. The chief Commodities for Sale here are Cherry and Spanish Brandy, Spirits, Cyder, Madera and Canary Wines, Batavia Arack, Sugar, Sugar-candy, Tea, Fans, China Lacker'd Ware, Silks, Chints, Ribbons, coarse strip'd Ginghams, ordinary Muslins, coarse Chints, blue and brown Long Cloths, Salampores, and all sorts of coarse Callicoes. A Crown-piece goes for six Shillings in Accounts here; but the Shillings are of the same Value with ours. A Spanish Dollar is six Shillings, and a Venetian Ducat nine.

VII. The Islands on the East-side of Africa, in the Indian Ocean, are,

1. Madagascar, about sixty five Leagues East from the Coast of Zanguebar. 'Tis three hundred forty Leagues North-east and South-west, and a hundred and twenty in the Middle where broadest; but much contracted towards the North. The Situation is betwixt S. Lat. 25 & 11. and betwixt Long. 43 & 52. Some reckon it the largest Island yet known. The Portuguese call'd it St. Lawrence, because they discover'd it on that Saint's Day. The French, who settled in the South part of it in 1665, call'd it the Dauphin's Isle. The English and Dutch made also Settlements; but we have no Account of any European Settlements now subsisting here. The Air is temperate, and the Soil abounds in Rice, Fruits, and Pasturage. Here's store of Black Cattel very cheap, and all sorts of European Animals, but with some difference; and their Sheep particularly have very large Tails. White Pepper grows here in abundance, with Cotton and Sugar, and plenty of Salt; and many of their Mountains are cover'd with the finest Ebony in the World. Here are Tortoises so large, that 'tis said their Shells will cover a dozen Men. Here are Mines of Gold, Silver, Copper, and Iron; and Rocks of Chrystal, many good Roads, and commodious Harbours; but the Natives conceal the Mines from Strangers. Little of this Island is known but the South Parts. The Natives are divided into Whites and Blacks; are witty enough, but perfidious, revengeful, and cruel. Their Religion is a Mixture of Paganism, Jewism, and Mahometanism. The Island is divided into many Provinces, govern'd by petty Princes, who live in Towns built of Timber, and encompass'd with Palisadoes and Ditches; but the Country People live in wooden Huts, which they transport at pleasure. Their Language is somewhat like Arabick. The French made the best Settlement on the South-east Corner of the Island, where they built Fort Dauphin; but encroaching upon the Natives, they attack'd the Fort, and cut off all the Garison in 1673, but a few who escap'd on board a Ship in the Road. Captain Avery and his Pirates settled on the North-east Coast of the Island; but nothing has been heard of them lately.

2. The Isle of Mascaren, or Bourbon, in Lat. 20. Long. 55. a hundred and twenty Leagues East from Madagascar. 'Tis almost round, and about sixty Leagues in Circuit. The Air is clear; and the Soil produces all Necessaries for Life. Here's plenty of Game, and very large Tortoises, that are excellent Meat. Here are many Lakes and small Rivers, whose Water is very good, Forests of Ebony, and Palm-Trees. In the Middle of the Island there's a Range of high Mountains; one of them a Vulcano, which issues Fire and Smoak, and has destroyed the East Part of the Island; which is therefore call'd the Burnt Country. The Coasts are infested by Hurricanes, which drive every thing before them. This oblig'd the Portuguese and the Dutch to abandon it. The French settled here in 1654, and call'd it the Isle of Bourbon; but afterward deserted it, and since that time we have no further Account of it.

3. The

3. The Isle of Maurice lies E. N. E. from the Isle of Bourbon, a hundred and eighteen Miles, Lat. 20. 'Tis forty Leagues round; is fruitful, abounds with Fowl, Tortoises, Ebony, good Water; and has a commodious Harbour, with a Fort built by the Dutch to defend it.

4. The Isle of Diego Rodriguez, in Lat. 20. two hundred and seventy Miles East from Maurice, is of the same Nature, and belongs to the Dutch.

5. The Isles of Comorro lie betwixt the North Part of Madagascar and the Continent of Africk. They are four in Number, fruitful, and inhabited partly by Mahometans, and partly by Pagans, under Princes who are tributary to the Portuguese.

The most remarkable of these Islands is call'd Joanna, or Anjuan. It lies next to Madagascar in S. Lat. 14. Long. 45. Mr. Ovington says, 'tis thirty Miles long, and fifteen broad; and so fruitful, that all European Ships bound to Surat put in here for Refreshment. It has plenty of Black Cattel, and large fat Goats, Fowls, Rice, Pepper, Yams, Plantanes, Bananas, Potatoes, Oranges, Lemons, Limes, Pine-Apples, &c. store of Honey and Sugar-Canes; and the Climate and Soil is fit for Grapes, Tobacco, and Cotton. The Natives chuse what Parts of the Island they please to plant in; for all Things are common, except their Coco-Walks, which are assign'd to particular Proprietors. They formerly offer'd this Island to the English for a Settlement; and they have such an Affection to the English, that 'tis a common Proverb among them, A Joannaman and an Englishman are all one. Ovington, who was here in 1690, says, they were govern'd by a Queen Dowager; but her late Husband's Brother was chief in the Administration, and spoke English. He gave Audience to Mr. Ovington under a shady Tree, was attended by six of his Nobles, but none of them had Arms. He invited Mr. Ovington to sit down by him, and was highly pleas'd with a Present of Bread and Cheese; for his People knew not how to make any. He enquir'd into the English Affairs, and of the Welfare of King William; of whom Mr. Ovington gave him a Picture, which he receiv'd very gratefully. After Mr. Ovington had given him an Account of the Power of the English Arms, and the Valour of our King, he wish'd that he were nearer his Dominions, that he might have his Assistance against the King of Mohila, who frequently invaded him. Mr. Ovington says, he saw this Prince's Armory, which consisted only of two Guns and one Pistol, and those out of order. Yet he was as happy as the greatest Monarch, being of a pacifick Temper, and well beloved by his Subjects. The Queen is never expos'd to publick View, and is cover'd by a thin piece of Silk when she speaks to her People. She was very affectionate to the English, and took care that some of them who were shipwreck'd here should be provided with all Necessaries. Their chief Places were those call'd King's-Town and Queen's-Town, which were tolerably built. The King is absolute; and when any of his Subjects die, he seizes all their Effects to his own Use. Sometimes the King and Grandees make large Entertainments, to which they invite all the neighbouring Inhabitants, who are very moderate in their Diet; but love strong Drink, tho Mahomet's Law, which they own, forbids it. The Women marry at eleven or twelve Years of Age, when they make great Feasts for seven Days; and they do the like at their Funerals. They have very gross Ideas of Religion; and are under constant Apprehensions of the Appearance of the Devil, whom they call Gregory; say they often meet him in the Highway and the Streets; and when it thunders, say, Gregory is abroad, and none dares stir out of Doors. Their chief Trade is to the neighbouring Continent of Africa.

Nangasia, or Mangasia, is the greatest of those Islands, and the nearest to Africa, abounds with Kine, Goats, Cocoes, and the like Fruits with the other Island, is sixteen Leagues long, and four broad; but being encompass'd by Rocks, 'tis dangerous to approach it without a native Pilot. They are govern'd by petty Kings; and sometimes quarrel with one another, when they throw Stones and Sands, and their chief Weapons are Sticks burnt at the end. They are very civil to the English; but cautious in their way of dealing, and had rather exchange their Commodities for Paper, white Cloth, and Knives, than for Money.

6. Admiralty Islands lie in South, Lat. 5. betwixt Long. 50 & 65. There are only seven of 'em taken notice of, which are remarkable for little, but only that they have some Trade with Mombaza, on the Coast of Africk, opposite to them.

7. Socotora, or Dioscorides's Island, at the Mouth of the Straits of Babelmandel, or the Red Sea, East from Cape Gardafu, and about fifty Leagues round. The Approach to it is dangerous without a Pilot of the Country. The Air is extremely hot, and would be insupportable were it not temper'd by Breezes from the Sea. The Soil is mountainous, dry, and barren, except in some Valleys, where they have Flocks of Cattel. It produces abundance of Dates, Incense, Dragons-Blood, and Aloes, reckon'd the best in the World. The Inhabitants are Mahometan Arabians, brave, but perfidious, and apt to cheat Strangers. They are under a Prince who is tributary to the Cherif of Mecca, or, as some say, to the King of Caresen, in Arabia, and his Deputy resides at Tamaret, the only Town in the Island.

AMERICA.

AS far as is yet discover'd, lies betwixt S. Lat. 56. and North Lat. 78 ½. So that the Length is about 8070 Miles. The Longitude is betwixt 35 & 140 West from London. But the Breadth very unequal, being much contracted both in the South and North Parts, and in the Middle. The greatest Breadth of North America, from the West-side of California to the East-side of Newfoundland is 2460 Miles; and the greatest Breadth of South America, from the West-side of Peru to the East-side of Brasil, is 1800. The most Northerly Part lies in the fourth Climate of Months; so that the longest Day is above four Months: And the most Southerly Part lies in the eleventh Climate of Hours; so that the longest Day there is seventeen Hours and a half.

It has the Northern unknown Ocean and Country on the North, the unknown Southern Land and Ocean on the South, that call'd the South-Sea on the West, and the Atlantick on the East. 'Tis compos'd of two Peninsula's, the one call'd North, and the other South America, join'd by the Isthmus of Darien. All that is said of its being known to the Antients of our Hemisphere is founded on mere Conjecture, and Arguments at best very inconclusive: Therefore 'tis properly enough called the New World by us. Some are of opinion that it joins to Asia on the North; and what supports the Conjecture is, that the Natives of North America have a great Resemblance in many Things to the Tartars: But there is such a vast Difference between them and the Inhabitants of South America, that some are of opinion the South may have been peopled from some part of Asia. But however that be, 'tis certain that both North and South America were Inhabited many Ages before either of them were discover'd by Europeans: This is evident from the Multitudes of People and large Cities, the great Structures and other Improvements of Art found here; and that they were form'd into regular Governments in Mexico and Peru.

Christopher Columbus, a Genoese, was the first European who discover'd this Country, under the Auspices of Ferdinand V. King of Arragon, in 1492. But it was more fully discover'd by Americus Vesputius, a Florentine, 1497, and from him call'd America. This is what generally obtains, and is most certain. Yet Powel, in his History of Wales, says, That a War happening in that Country, Ann. Dom. 1170, about the Succession, upon the Death of their Prince Owen Guinneth, and a Bastard having carried it from his lawful Sons, one of the latter, called Madoc, put to Sea on new Discoveries; and sailing from Spain, discover'd a new World of wonderful Beauty and Fertility uninhabited; and upon his Return, carried a great Number of People thither from Wales in three Voyages, according to Hakluyt. The Places he discover'd seem to be Virginia, New England, or the adjacent Country. Peter Martyr, Decad. 7. cap. 3. seems to support this, when he tells us that those of Virginia and Guatemale us'd to celebrate the Memory of one Madoc, a great and antient Hero. And hence 'tis suppos'd came those old British Words, which modern Travellers have met with in North America.

Whatever there is in this Story, 'tis certain that the English have a very good Plea for being the first European Discoverers of North America: For Sebastian Cabot, or Gabato, who, some say, was a Venetian, and others, of Genoese Extraction, and born at Bristol, was sent out on Discoveries by our King, Henry VII. in 1498, and several London Merchants sent Adventures with him in three or four small Ships. Hollinshed quotes Sir Humphrey Gilbert's Discovery for a new Passage to Cataya, wherein that Knight says Cabato describ'd and set forth that Passage in his Charts, which were then to be seen in the Privy Galleries at Whitehall; that he sail'd very far West on the North-side of Terra di Laborador, till he came to N. Lat. 67 ½. and finding the Seas still open, would have gone to Cataya, had it not been for the Opposition of the Mariners and Masters of the Ships. He went to a Nation that appear'd more like Beasts than Men; and upon his Return, in 1502, presented Henry VII. with three Men taken in the new-found Islands, who were cloathed in Beasts Skins, eat raw Flesh, and spoke an unknown Language. Sir William Monson, in his Naval Tracts, commends Cabot as a sharp solid Man, who applied himself to imitate Columbus, and had a hearty Desire to enrich the English Nation by his Discoveries; for which he was chose Governor of the Merchant Adventurers for the Discovery of unknown Lands, and had a Pension assign'd him in the Reign of King Edward VI. We proceed to the Geography, and begin with,

The English Empire, Discoveries, and Settlements, in North AMERICA.

I. Baffin's-Bay lies as far North as Lat. 79. where the furthest Point yet discover'd is call'd Sir Thomas Smith's Bay, which was found out by William Baffin, an Englishman, in 1613, 1622, and 1624. It lies betwixt W. Long. 74. & 48. has Groenland on the East, and those call'd Alderman Jones's and Sir James Lancaster's Sounds on the West. But Baffin despairing of a Passage that Way, he return'd, and we have no further Account of it.

II. Davis's-Straits had their Name from Mr. John Davis, who made three Voyages in 1585, 1586, and 1587, to find out the North-west Passage. These Straits lie in the South-east Corner of Baffin's-Bay, have James and Cumberland's Isles on the West, New Groenland on the East, and reach as far South as the Arctick Circle. He found a barbarous People in several Parts of the Country, clad with Skins of Seals or Birds with the Feathers on. They had Canoes which they row'd with Oars, and were arm'd with Darts. They barter'd Skins of Seals, Stags, Hares, and Fish, for Knives, &c. and some of them had Tents of Seal-Skins; but were very thievish, and particularly fond of Iron. Some of them had Slings from whence they threw Stones against the English. In some Parts of the Country he found Woods of Fir, Pines, Elder, Yew, Withy, and Birch, with store of wild Fowl, like those in Europe. Some of the Natives were very barbarous, and kill'd several of his Men. His further Discoveries were prevented, because the Fishing-Ships abandon'd him contrary to promise; so that not finding them at Lat 61. 12. he was forc'd to return for want of Provisions.

III. Sir Martin Frobisher's Straits lie betwixt Groenland and some Islands South of it, about Lat. 61. They were discover'd by Sir Martin in 1576. The Natives resembled the Tartars in Complexion and Features, and were clad with Seal-Skins. They took a Boat with some of his Men. He return'd that same Year, and brought a piece of black Stone, which being essay'd by some Refiners, they found contain'd a good Proportion of Gold; so that he made another Expedition thither in 1577, found more of that Ore, which contain'd good Quantity of Gold; but was drove from the Place by Ice, and could not bring off much Ore. The Natives had Huts of Whalebone, cover'd with Seal-Skins. They trapann'd some of his Men. He return'd, brought home some of the Ore, which being tried, and promising well, he went on a third Expedition, and advanc'd as far as Warwick Sound, at the East-side of Forbisher's Straits; but could not again find either the Inhabitants or the Ore.

IV. Hudson's Straits lie betwixt Terra di Laborador, or New Britain, and James's Island, Lat. 60 & 65. They were discover'd by Henry Hudson, an Englishman, in four Voyages in 1607, 1608, 1609, and 1610. When he came to the Island of Desolation, he was stopp'd by contrary Winds and great Shoals of floating Ice. It appear'd by his Chart, that he had enter'd a hundred Leagues further into those Straits than any Englishman had done before him; but had the Misfortune of a mutinous Crew, who put him and eight others into a Sloop with very little Provisions; so that he was never more heard of. The Leaders of the Mutiny came to miserable Ends; and the Ship was brought home by one Pricket, who gave an Account of the Affair.

V. Hudson's Bay had its Name from the same Person, who first discover'd it; but a further Discovery was made by Sir Thomas Button, from whom the North-west Part of it was call'd Button's Bay, and the Coasts on the West-side were call'd New North and South Wales. This Bay lies betwixt Lat. 52 & 66. The greatest Length is about 840 Miles, and the greatest Breadth 540. The best Account of it is given by Capt. James, who sail'd hither from Bristol in 1631, gave his own Name to the South part of it, and winter'd there at an Island which he call'd Charlton. His Account of the Tempests, Shoals and Mountains of Ice, and the Barrenness of the adjacent Country, with what he and his Men suffer'd, by which many of 'em died, was enough to deter any other from going thither again: Yet in 1667 one Gillam enter'd this Bay, and sail'd as far South as Lat. 51. to a River, which he called Rupert's, where he corresponded with the Natives for Furs, &c. built a Fort which he call'd Charles, after King Charles II. who gave a Patent for the Bay and Straits to Prince Rupert and the Owners of Gillam's Ship in 1670. This laid the Foundation of the Hudson's-Bay Company, who erected several Forts, and dealt with the Natives for Bever-Skins. The French seiz'd it in 1682; but the English recover'd it. The French from Quebec seiz'd all in 1686, but Port Nelson. It was several times after taken and retaken by the French and English, but restor'd to us by the Treaty of Utrecht in 1713.

VI. Terra di Laborador, or New Britain, has Hudson's Straits on the North-east, Hudson's Bay on the West, the Ocean on the East, and Canada and Newfoundland on the South. It lies betwixt Lat. 50 & 63. is of a vast Extent, and claim'd by the English, as discover'd by Cabot, together with Newfoundland, in the Reign of Henry VII. The French claim it as part of Canada, and have civiliz'd some of the Inhabitants, who dwell for the most part in Caves, and subsist chiefly by fishing and hunting. The Country is mountainous, and abounds with wild Beasts.

VII. Newfoundland is separated from Terra di Laborador by the Straits of Bell Isle on the South, has the Gulph of St. Lawrence on the West, the Ocean and the great Bank on the East, and the Atlantick on the South. 'Tis of a triangular Figure, reckon'd as big as Ireland, and three hundred Leagues in Compass. The greatest Length is 345 Miles, and the greatest Breadth 211; but it contracts to a Point in the North and South Parts. It lies betwixt Lat. 45 & 52. and Long. 55 & 50. It has many excellent Harbours and Bays on the East-side. Some of them run twenty Leagues within Land. Trinity Bay, in Lat. 49. is very convenient for Ships in bad Weather, and has three Branches large enough for many Hundreds of Vessels to anchor in. That of Trepassez, near the South-east Corner of the Island, is bold, safe, and convenient for Ships in Distress, as they pass to or from Virginia, New England, &c. We have not Room to insist on the History of the Island, and of the Actions betwixt us and the French there; but only that it was restor'd to us by the Treaty of Utrecht, tho with such Concessions to the French to fish and cure there, by the thirteenth Article, as were much objected against, because they were allow'd to fish and dry in the best Part of it, tho we are at all the Expence of the Forts and Garisons.

The Climate here is very hot in Summer; but so cold in Winter, which lasts six Months, that there's scarce any stirring abroad; and the Inhabitants of the North Parts are forc'd to remove from the Harbours into the Woods, where they build Cabins, and provide themselves with Firing from the Woods. The Island is full of inaccessible Mountains and Forests. What they call their Meadows, are Heaths cover'd with a sort of Moss, and the Soil is a Mixture of Gravel and Stones. Here's Fir and other Trees fit for Masts, building of Ships, &c. Deer, Hares, Foxes, Squirrels, Wolves, Bears, Bevers, and Otters. The Seas and Rivers are full of Fish, viz. Cod, the Staple Commodity of the Country, Herrings, Mackarels, Salmon, and Flounders, and abundance of Trouts. Here are no Indians but what come from Laborador or Eskimaux, by the Way of the Straits of Bell Isle, for Fishing and Plunder.

The Fishery here is reckon'd one of the most beneficial Trades in the World; for a Ship of a hundred and fifty Tun, and twenty Men, provided with Victuals and Fishing-Tackle, will in a good Year cure 3000 l. worth of Fish. The English and French seldom load less than 500 Ships per Ann. with Cod and Poor-John to Europe. The Banks are vast Shoals of Sand, at several Distances from the Shore. The great Bank is near a hundred Miles East from Cape Race, and reckon'd three hundred Miles long, and seventy five broad. There is two hundred fathom Water all round it; and those call'd the Little Islands of Cod-Fish, which lie South from Newfoundland, and over against Cape Breton Island. The Water above it at Flood is several Fathoms deep, and the largest Ship may venture over, except at a Place call'd the Virgins, where several have been cast away. The next is that call'd the Vert, or Green Bank, South from Newfoundland, about eighty Miles long, and forty broad. The fishing Season is from Spring to September, when there's frequently seven hundred Sail fishing at a time. They fish always by Day; for the Cod don't bite by Night. They also draw off Train-Oil from the Livers of the Fish, which yields great Profit. The neighbouring Sea is often pester'd with floating Islands of Ice. Lowthorp, in his Philosop. Transf. mentions one a League long, and higher above Water than the Main-Mast of a Ship.

The English Settlements here, before the last War with France, were reckon'd to consist of two hundred and sixty seven Families, and about four thousand People. The most remarkable Plantation is at St. John's, about fifty five Miles North from Cape Race, in Lat. 47. The Harbour is about half a Mile broad, defended by a Battery on the North-side, and another on the South, with a Boom which they lay across the Bay. Here's also a Fort and Outworks mounted with fifty Guns, a handsome House for the Governor, and Barracks for the Soldiers.

The French Settlements lay on the South-end of the Island. The chief of them was Placentia, in a Bay of the same Name, Lat. 47. where they had a Town and Fortress, which was surrender'd to the English by the Treaty of Utrecht. La Hontan says, it was a Harbour of the greatest Consequence which the French had in those Parts of the World.

VIII. Cape Breton, or Gaspe Island, lies East from Acadia, from which 'tis separated by the Straits of Canseaux, and South-west from Newfoundland, from which 'tis separated by the Straits or Passage up to the Gulph of St. Lawrence. La Hontan says, the Straits of Canseaux is a better Passage to Canada, if Ships set out early from Europe, than that call'd the Channel of Cape Ray, betwixt Newfoundland and Cape Breton Island, which is often cover'd with Ice in April, whereas the other is clear in all Seasons. This Island is about a hundred and ten Miles long, and sixty where broadest. 'Tis indented by many Bays, particularly by one on the East-side, that runs in from North-east to South-west, and almost divides it into two. This Island was always reckon'd a part of Nova Scotia, included in it by King James the First's Patent, and demanded as such by the late Duke of Shrewsbury, according to Queen Anne's Instructions; but 'twas given up to the French by the Treaty of Utrecht, tho a Place of such Importance, that in case of a War with France, it endangers our Trade in Newfoundland, New England, &c. commands the Entrance into St. Lawrence's Bay or Gulph, and by consequence covers all French Canada.

IX. Acadia, or Nova Scotia, lies West from Cape Breton Island, South from French Canada, North-east from New England, and has the Sea on the South. It lies betwixt Lat. 42 & 46. is about 448 Miles East and West, and 230 North and South, where broadest; but indented in the Middle by that call'd the Bay of Fondi, or the French Bay. The first Discovery was claim'd by the French; but Sebastian Cabot having been there before them, it was claim'd by the English; and King James I. by his Patent, dated September 10. 1621. did, by Advice of his Council of Scotland, grant this Country to Sir William Alexander, Secretary of State for that Nation, to be held of the Crown of Scotland, and govern'd by the Laws of that Kingdom. We cannot insist on the Controversy betwixt the two Crowns about it, and its being several times taken and retaken by the French and English, but shall only take notice that it was restor'd to the English by the Treaty of Utrecht. La Hontan says, 'tis extreme cold here for three Months in Winter; but the Climate is otherwise pretty temperate, the Air good, and the Water clear and light. It has good Accommodations for Fishing, Hunting, and Fowling, is as well furnish'd with Materials for building Ships as Norway, and their Oak is reckon'd better than that of Europe. It abounds with Bevers, Otters, and Sea-Calves. The Coast is inhabited by Savages, many of whom were in the Interest of France, and us'd to invade our Colonies in time of War.

The only Place of Note here is Port Royal, now call'd Annapolis Royal, on the East-side of a Bay, Lat. 45. Long. 63. The Town is little, and contains only a few Houses of two Stories high: But here's a fine Basin two Leagues long, and one broad, capable of 1000 Ships. It has sixteen or eighteen fathom Water on one side of the Entrance, and six or seven on the other, and is divided by the Isle of Goats in the middle. There's good Anchorage all over the Basin; and at the bottom there's a Point of Land which separates two Rivers, where the Tide rises ten or twelve Foot. On the Banks of those Rivers are pleasant Meadows, which in Spring and Autumn are cover'd with all sorts of Fresh-water Fowl. The chief Trade here is in Skins, which the Natives truck for European Goods. Here are six or seven other good Harbours on the Coast. Long Island lies off of Port Royal at a small Distance. Some say it has a Silver Mine, and one of Copper, so rich, that the French reckon it contain'd much Gold. They also found Diamonds here, and blue Stones as good as Turquoises.

X. New England has Acadia on the North-east, New York on the South-west, the Country of the Savages on the North, and the Sea on the South and East. It runs 350 Miles along the Coast, without reckoning the Angles, which make it much more. It lies betwixt Lat. 41 & 46. and betwixt Long. 66 & 77. The greatest Breadth is about 250 Miles, and in other Places 'tis not above 80.

Sir Francis Drake landed here in 1586, when he staid some Days, and traffick'd with the Natives for Necessaries. Captain Gosnold made a Settlement in 1602; and finding that English Corn grew very kindly here, several Gentlemen of Plimouth did, upon his Report, obtain a Grant of the Country in 1606, from Lat. 38. to 45. The Patentees sent some Ships, Men, and Stores hither in 1608, settled a Plantation, and built St. George's Fort; but the Planters broke up, and return'd to England. In 1611 a new Attempt was made; but an Interloper having incens'd the Savages against the Adventurers, they were forc'd to return: Yet the Trade in Furs was so beneficial, that some private Gentlemen made Peace with the Indians, and continued it; and Captain Smith, whom they set out, made so good a Voyage, and brought such Maps and Accounts of the Country, that King Charles I. in 1614, gave the Country the Name of New England. The two following Years several Ships traded hither to Advantage. But the first successful Attempt for a Plantation was made by some Dissenters, who retiring to Holland in King James the First's Time because of their Nonconformity, join'd with many of their Brethren there, and agreed with the Company for a large Tract of Land in the South-west Parts of New England, to which they set out in 1620. But the Dutch Pilot being brib'd, he carried them further North, and landed them at Cape Cod; whereas they design'd to have landed at Hudson's River, which runs thro New York. This made the Company's Grant of no Use to them, because Cape Cod was not included in it. Yet they declar'd themselves Subjects to the Crown of England, and founded a Fort and Town, which they call'd New Plimouth; but suffer'd so much by Sickness, &c. that from 150, they were reduc'd to 50 Men. We refer, for the particular History of this Colony, to the Reverend Mr. Mather's History of New England; and shall only take notice that by the Severity towards the Nonconformists in the Reign of King Charles I. many Dissenters retir'd hither from England, and by degrees brought the Colony to what it now is. The Climate is so agreeable to the English, that 'tis the most numerous and flourishing Colony we have now in America. The Soil is generally fruitful, and produces Indian and English Wheat, Oats, Beans, Pease, Flax, Hemp, and other useful Grain, besides Fruit-Trees and Shrubs, of which scarce any sort is wanting. The Woods and Swamps abound with Elm, Ash, Cypress, Chesnut, Pine, Cedar, Aspin, Beach, Spruce, Sassafras, Sumach, and Savin. Here's also a Berry which breeds Flies, equal in Colour to those of Cochineal, and superior in medicinal Virtue. There's also a Tree with little Knobs in its Bark, that yield a sort of Turpentine, good against Worms. Here are also Mines of Iron and Copper; and Oaks and Firs in such plenty, as might furnish Materials for our Navy. They have all sorts of European Cattel, and particularly serviceable Horses. They have some Lions and Musk-Cats, abundance of Bears, Foxes, Deer, Racoons, Otters, Bevers, Hares, Rabbits, Moses, wild and tame Fowl. Their Sea and Rivers abound with Grampuses, Sturgeons, Sharks, and other great and small Fish common to us; but there are not so many Whales or Star-Fish as formerly. The best Season for fishing is from March to June. Their Insects are Rattle-Snakes, and others common to America. They are infested with several sorts of Flies; and some Years ago there came a Swarm of Maggots out of the Ground, which turned to Flies with a Sting in their Tails, by which they poisoned and destroyed Multitudes of Trees.

The Natives consisted of above forty Nations, who were gross stupid Idolaters. There are the Remains of above twenty of them still within the Limits of New England, who differ only in Dialect. Their Language is so barbarous, that 'tis not easily learned by Europeans. By the unwearied Endeavours of the English Planters, abundance of 'em are converted; so that they have now twenty four Churches and Ministers of their own Nation, besides four English, who preach to them in their native Language. The Converts and their Offspring were a few Years ago reckon'd at about 4000. They are well treated by the English, and conform to their Customs. Apartments are allowed them at Harvard College in Cambridge, for breeding their Youth. Where the Indian Converts are the Majority, as at Nantucket Island, &c. they are allow'd to chuse their own Magistates and Courts, to determine Causes of less than 400 l. Value, with Liberty of Appeal to the English. The first Convert was a mean Native of Martha's Island, call'd Jakoomes, who in ten or twelve Years converted Hundreds of his Countrymen, became their Pastor, and was succeeded by other Natives: But their chief Apostle was Mr. Elliot, a famous Minister, who applied himself to learn their Language, into which he translated the Bible, and several practical Pieces.

The English Inhabitants have much the Advantage of our other Colonies, as to Learning and Religion. Most of 'em are Presbyterians and Independants, who adhere to the Westminster Confession; and in difficult Cases make use of Synods. Their Ministers are ordain'd by Presbyters; and they have ruling Elders in their Congregations. There are some other Denominations, as Church-of-England Men, Anabaptists, &c. who have the free Exercise of their Worship.

Their way of raising Taxes and making Laws is like ours. Their Laws are very severe against Immoralities, and in general well executed. Every Town of fifty Families is oblig'd to have a School for Reading and Writing; and if of an hundred, a Grammar School, to fit Youth for their University of Cambridge.

Their chief Trade here is in building Ships, selling Naval Stores, and all manner of Provisions, with Pipe-Staves and Hoops to the Sugar Islands, &c. from whence they have in return Sugar, Molosses, Rum, Ginger, Indico, Tobacco, and Cotton; and what they don't consume at home, they export to England, from whence they are furnish'd with their chief Materials for Apparel, Tools for Mechanicks, and Hard Ware, &c. Yet they can furnish themselves with most sorts of Clothing at home. Their Trade in Peltry, for which they exchange Cattel with the Indians, is very much decreas'd by the Disuse of Bever and other Skins that were us'd by Feltmongers. They have a Mint at Boston, where their Money is the same with ours, and with the Spanish Coin, is enough for Retail, but not for their other Commerce; which obliges them to deal much in Barter. The Number of People in the whole is reckon'd about 160000, and of them 30000 are fighting Men; so that they are an Over-match for the Remains of the twenty Indian Nations, who are not able to raise 10000 fighting Men, and are suffer'd quietly to possess their small Teritories, being very useful in cultivating the Ground, and furnishing the English with Peltry, &c. Such of them as continue Pagans are very much civiliz'd, and affect to imitate the English.

The Country is divided into three Colonies, or Provinces, which are subdivided into Counties and Parishes, &c. as follows:

1. Massachusets Colony retains its Indian Name, is the largest and most populous, being a hundred and ten Miles long, and eighty where broadest. The Counties here are,

(1.) Main, in which there are five Towns, and four Ministers.

(2.) Cornwall, in which there are five Towns and Ministers. Scarborough Fort lies on Saco River in this County, and is a Curb upon the French Indians. At the Mouth of Pemmaquid River here, lay Fort William and Mary, built by Sir William Phipps, and was the best and strongest which the English had in America, but betray'd to the French, who demolish'd it in 1696. There are several Islands on this Coast, some of 'em ten Miles long. York, Dover, and Wells, are the most considerable Towns on the Frontiers of these two Counties against the Indians, and are fortified to prevent their Incursions. In the East Part of these Counties are high Mountains and large Forests; but upon the Rivers, and towards the Coasts, there's plenty of Corn and Pasture The chief Trade here is in Bever, Lumber, and Fish.

(3.) Essex County has seventeen Towns, and twenty Ministers. The Capital is Salem, which has a weekly Market, and two Fairs per Ann. and lies pleasantly betwixt two Rivers. Lyn is another Market-Town here. The East-side of the County is water'd by the great River Meermack, which is navigable about forty Miles.

(4.) Middlesex County has one and twenty Towns, and eighteen Ministers. The Capital is Cambridge, on the North Branch of Charles River, about seven Miles from Boston. It has several fine Streets and Houses, is the Seat of the County-Court, and of the University, which consists of Harvard-College and Stoughton-Hall. It is a Corporation made up of a President, or Rector, two Fellows, and a Treasurer; the Governor, Deputy-Governor, and Magistrates of the Colony being Visitors. The Colony advanc'd four hundred Pounds towards building the College, and Mr. John Harvard, a Minister, left eight hundred Pounds towards carrying it on, for which 'twas called by his Name. Mr. Stoughton built the Hall which bears his Name: and in both there are about four hundred Students. The Income of Charlton-Ferry is settled upon it, and several Gentlemen both in Old and New England have contributed towards its Revenues and Library. Several Men of Eminence have had their Education here. They have a Printing-Press, and give the same Degrees as our Universities in England.

Other Towns here are, 1. Charles-Town, which was the Mother of Boston, from which it lies about a Mile cross the Harbour, betwixt two Rivers. It has a handsome large Church, a Market-Place on the Bank of the River, and two large Streets that lead down to it; and the County-Court is sometimes kept here. 2. Waterton has two noted Fairs in June and September. 3. Reading, a populous Town, on the Banks of a great Lake. This County being well water'd with small Rivers, abounds with Pasture and Cattel of all sorts, and exports great Quantities of Beef, Pork, &c.

(5.) Suffolk County has thirteen Towns and nineteen Ministers; and many small Rivers, that make it fruitful. Towns of Note here, are, 1. Boston, the Capital of the whole, and the largest in America, except some belonging to the Spaniards. It lies on the Coast conveniently for Trade, and is defended by a strong Castle in an Island at the Mouth of the Harbour, and on the Shore, by Forts on neighbouring Hills, which command the Avenues. Here are many fine Buildings, both publick and private, as the Court-House, the Market-Place, Sir William Phipps's House, &c. It has several handsome Streets, and the Inhabitants are reckon'd about 12000. Here are four Companies of Militia, and three Parish Churches, besides a French Church, and two Meeting-Houses, one for Church-of-England Men, and another for Anabaptists. It is the chief Part of the Colony, and loads three or four hundred Ships in a Year with Lumber, Beef, Pork, &c. for Europe, and other Parts of America. The Harbour is good, and capable of five hundred Sail. Here's a Market every Tuesday, and two Fairs, in May and October, which last three Days each. 'Tis the Seat of the Governor, of the Assembly, and of the Courts of Justice, and is a very flourishing City; and for the Beauty of its Structures and great Trade, gives place to few in England. 2. Dorchester, at the Mouth of two little Rivers, near the Sea, is the next to Boston for Largeness, and has two Fairs per Ann. 3. Roxburgh, noted for a Free-School. 4. Weymouth, the eldest Town in the Province; but not so considerable as formerly.

(6.) Hampshire has eight Towns, and six Ministers. Being within Land, and hilly, 'tis not so fruitful as the Maritime Shires.

2. Plimouth Colony is the oldest, is about an hundred Miles long, and fifty broad, and divided into three Counties:

(1.) Plimouth County has six Towns and seven Ministers. The Capital is New Plimouth, on the Gulph of Patuxes, which consists of three or four hundred Families, and has one Church. Scituate, another Town in this County, is larger, and has two Churches. The Country about Cape Cod is barren; but as populous as most in New England, because of the Fishery.

(2.) Barnstaple County has six Towns and six Ministers. Barnstaple, the chief Town, lies in a Bay of the same Name: And on the Coast there are two Islands, 1. That call'd Martha's-Vineyard, which has two English and several Indian Ministers, most of the Natives being Indians. 2. Nantucket, inhabited by Indians, who have Ministers of their own.

(3.) Bristol County has four Towns and three Ministers. Bristol is the chief, and has most Trade. Swanzy is also a Town of some Note. Rhode Island belongs to this County, and has two Churches. Elizabeth Island, at the Mouth of Monument Bay, belongs also to this County.

3. Connecticut Colony is about seventy Miles long, and fifty broad, and divided into four Counties:

(1.) New London has nine Towns and eight Ministers. The East Part of the Shire is pleasant and fruitful; the West swampy and mountainous, but has good Trade in Furs and Lumber. Saybrook is the oldest Town, on the West of Connecticut River, which is very large, divided into several Branches, and Navigable for fifty Miles. New London lies on a River called Thames, which receives several others.

(2.) Hartford County has eleven Towns and twelve Ministers. In the West Part are several Ridges of Hills and thick Forests, with plenty of Timber and Game. Hartford, the chief Town, has two Parish Churches. There's an Island here in Connecticut River, thirty Miles above its Mouth.

(3.) New Haven County has six Towns and six Ministers. The chief Town is of the same Name: And near Brentford there's a small Iron-Work.

(4.) Fairfield County has nine Towns and nine Ministers. Here's no navigable River but Hudson's, which divides it from New Jersey.

XI. New York has East and West Jersey on the West and South, Long Island on the North, and New England on the East. 'Tis separated from the Jerseys by Hudson's River, and from New England by a Line betwixt Rochford and Greenwich. 'Tis about a hundred and seventy Miles long, and twenty broad. 'Twas formerly call'd New Belgia, and possess'd by the Dutch, when 'twas much larger than now, and became a flourishing Colony: But their Title being disputable, our King,

King, Charles II. granted this Country to his Brother, the Duke of York, in 1664, when Sir Richard Car reduced it and gave it the preſent Name. The Duke granted that Part now called Eaſt and Weſt Jerſey to Under-proprietors. It lies betwixt North Lat. 41 & 45. The Climate is more temperate than that of New England; yet hotter in Summer, and colder in Winter, than any European Countries in the ſame Latitude. The Soil is ſo fruitful, that one Buſhel of Engliſh Wheat has produc'd a hundred.

Places of Note here are,

1. New York, the Capital, which was built by the Dutch, and call'd New Amſterdam. The Houſes are of Brick and Stone, handſomely built, and cover'd with red and black Tile. The Situation being high, it makes a very fine Proſpect. It conſiſts of about 1000 Houſes, and has one Engliſh Church, which is a large and beautiful Structure, a Dutch, a French, and a Lutheran Church. James-Fort commands the River and Town, and lies in an Iſland, Lat. 41. fourteen Miles long, but the Breadth not proportionable. This Town is the Seat of the Governor, has a Mayor, &c. like our Corporations, and is the Place where the Aſſembly meets.

2. New Albany, formerly Fort-Orange, till the Name was chang'd according to the Duke of York's Scotch Title. 'Tis in Lat. 43. about a hundred and twenty Miles North from New York, and us'd to have a good Gariſon, being the Place where the Governor uſes to confer with the Indian Kings.

3. Kingſton, about 50 Miles North-weſt from New York, a pretty well built Town, inhabited by about two hundred Engliſh and Dutch Families.

4. Schenectada, 20 Miles from New Albany, conſiſted of a hundred Houſes, inhabited by Engliſh and Dutch; but 'twas deſtroy'd, and the People maſſacred by the French after our Revolution. 'Twas rebuilt, is grown more populous ſince, and defended by a Fort. The Country betwixt this Place and New York is very fruitful, but thin of Engliſh Inhabitants; and the Indians here are not induſtrious.

On the Coaſt of this Province lies Weſt-Cheſter County, which has ſeveral Towns and Pariſhes, and but one Church.

Long Iſland, belonging to this Province, is a hundred and fifty Miles long, and twelve broad. It has convenient Habours, and ſeveral deſart Iſlands on the Eaſt Coaſt. The Dutch call'd it Naſſau, and made as good Earthen Ware here, as at Delph. It has ſeveral fruitful Valleys: And all ſorts of Engliſh Corn and Fruits, Roots, Herbs, Flax, and Hemp, yield good Increaſe. Here's plenty of Black Cattel, Horſes, Hogs, &c. and ſtore of Whales, Grampuſſes, and Seals, of whoſe Oil the Inhabitants make conſiderable Profit. 'Tis divided into Queen's, Suffolk, and Richmond Counties. Queen's County has a fine Breed of Horſes; and their Militia Regiment is compos'd of Horſemen. Here are only two Churches. Suffolk County has only two ſmall Towns, of about fifty Houſes each. 'Tis chiefly inhabited by Independents and Quakers, and has no Church-of-England Congregation. And Richmond County has but one Miniſter.

The Engliſh in the Province of New York are reckon'd about 8000, and the Natives ſcarce 1000. They are more friendly to us than the French, and never diſturb'd our Colony. They furniſh the Engliſh with Skins of Elks, Deer, Bears, Bevers, Otters, Racoons, and other Furs, and ſupply them with Veniſon, Fiſh, and Fowl very cheap. The Engliſh trade from hence to the Sugar Iſlands with Horſes, Beef, and Pork, for Sugar, Moloſſes, Rum, &c. and drive a profitable Commerce to Madera and the Azores with Pipe-Staves and Fiſh for Wine and Brandy.

XII. New Jerſey has New York and the Sea on the Eaſt, Penſilvania and part of Maryland on the Weſt, the Indians Country on the North, and the Sea on the South. 'Tis divided into Eaſt and Weſt, is about two hundred and ſixty Miles South and North; but the Breadth not proportionable. 'Twas firſt diſcover'd by Captain Hudſon, from whom the River on the Eaſt is call'd. It was included in the Grant of New York by King Charles II. to his Brother the Duke, who afterwards granted it by Charter to the Lord Berkley and Sir George Carteret. They aſſign'd it to William Pen and three other Gentlemen, and it was afterwards ſhar'd out to other Purchaſers. The Natives are reckon'd about 200, and are helpful to the Engliſh, who are reckon'd about 12000, of whom 2000 are fit to bear Arms. The chief Trade of the Country is in exporting Proviſions, Furs, Skins, and Tobacco to the Sugar Iſlands, England, Portugal, Spain, and the Canaries.

Places of Note are,

1. Berghen, Capital of its County, which lies furtheſt North, and contains three hundred and fifty Inhabitants, moſt of 'em Dutch. And there are 10000 Acres of Land aſſign'd within its Precinct to Tenents in Fee, and the like Number to others in the Country.

2. Elizabeth Town, in Eſſex County, South from Berghen, has 250 Families, and 40000 Acres of Ground. The Proprietors have a Plantation; and the chief Trade of the Colony is here, this Town being the Seat of the Government, of the Aſſemblies, and Courts of Juſtice.

3. Newark, the moſt compact Town in the Province, ſeven Miles N. from Elizabeth-Town, contains 100 Families, and has 50000 Acres of Land.

4. Piſcataway lies in Middleſex County, which is the moſt populous and flouriſhing. It has 80 Families, and 40000 Acres of Land.

5. Woodbridge, eight Miles from Piſcataway, has 120 Families, and 30000 Acres of Land.

6. Perth-Amboy has about 40 Houſes, and 1070 Acres. 'Tis a commodious Place, has a Harbour capable of 500 Ships, where Veſſels of three hundred Tun may come up Raritan River in one Tide to the Merchants Doors; and Ships may be built here cheap and conveniently. The Country all along this River is thick of Plantations.

7. Middleton, in Monmouth County, on the other ſide the River, has 100 Families, and 32000 Acres.

8. Shrewsbury, the chief Town of its County, has 160 Families, and 30000 Acres. There's an Iron-Work and a Church betwixt this Town and Middleton.

9. Freehold has 40 Families, and 30000 Acres.

Weſt Jerſey is not divided into Shires, nor ſo well planted as Eaſt Jerſey. Moſt of the Inhabitants in Cape May County are Fiſhermen, and there's a Whalery on both ſides the Bay.

Places of Note here are,

1. Cohanzy, a Town on a River of the ſame Name, conſiſting of about eighty Families. The Bay and River of De la War waters all the South-eaſt and South-weſt Parts of this Country; and the Plantations on this Bay are ſo thick, that they reſemble Towns.

2. Fort Elſingburg, at the Mouth of De la War River.

3. Salham Town, on a River of the ſame Name, is chief of its County, and has about a hundred and twenty Families.

4. Glouceſter, chief of its County, lies pleaſantly, and has a hundred Houſes.

5. Burlington, Capital of the Province and its County, the Seat of the Aſſembly and Courts of Juſtice. The Houſes are moſt of Brick, well built; and here's a good Market for Proviſions.

6. Maidenhead, a Town of fifty Families.

The Soil of this Province in general is fertile; and there's a Communication betwixt it, New York, and Maryland, by Rivers.

XIII. Penſilvania lies Weſt from New Jerſey, has the Indians Country on the North and Weſt, and Maryland on the South. It had the Name from the late William Pen, a famous Quaker, Son to Sir William Pen, who was Admiral for the Rump, and afterwards commanded under the Duke of York in the firſt Dutch War in 1664. In conſideration of this Service, Mr. Pen obtain'd a Patent of this Country in 1680, which the Engliſh had taken from the Dutch in 1655. Mr. Pen's firſt Grant from King Charles II. and his ſecond from the Duke of York, out of that formerly called New Belgia, make about three hundred and thirty Miles in Length, and two hundred in Breadth, and is divided into ſix Counties, each of which ſends ſix Members to the Aſſembly, who, with the Governor's Conſent, make Laws. And the other Parts of the Government are like that in England, by Sheriffs, Quarterly and Monthly Seſſions, &c. The Inhabitants are of ſeveral Religions and Nations, but the Engliſh moſt numerous; and the greateſt religious Body of one Denomination is Quakers. The Europeans and their Negroes are reckon'd 35000, and the native Indians about 6000. Scarce a thirtieth part of the Province is inhabited; but what is ſo, is better clear'd than any other part of America poſſeſs'd by the Engliſh.

The Inhabitants ſend Corn, Beef, Pork, Fiſh, Hides, Tallow, Sheep, Wool, and Pipe-Staves, to our Sugar Iſlands, in exchange for their Growth, which they carry to England, and make their Returns in Engliſh Goods. So that Mr. Pen, the Proprietor, in his Account of this Colony, ſays, it conſumes about 18000 l. per Annum of Engliſh Growth, and makes ſuch Returns directly, and by way of the Iſlands, as augments the Revenue of the Crown 30000 l. per Annum. They likewiſe export Horſes, and other live Cattel to our Southern Plantations for Furs, which they alſo have from the Indians, and export to the beſt Markets. He adds, that they have alſo loaded fourteen Ships in a Year with Tobacco for England.

The ſame Author ſays, the Climate and Soil are like thoſe of Virginia and New York; that the Air is ſweet and clear, like the South Parts of France. The Autumn begins about the 24th of October, laſts till the beginning of December, and is like a mild Spring in England; but ſometimes they have extreme Froſts and Cold, yet the Air is always clear and dry. The Spring laſts from March to June, without Storms of Wind, and the Sky is clear, except when there are gentle Showers. The Heat is extraordinary in their Summer Months, which are July, Auguſt, and September, but qualified by cold Breezes: ſo that, except it be for about a Week, 'tis not much hotter than in England. The Wind blows then South-weſt; but during the Spring, Fall, and Winter, it is generally North-weſt. Miſts and Fogs are occaſion'd here by Eaſt and South Winds, which ſeldom laſt above two Hours at a time.

In ſome Places the Soil conſiſts of a yellow and black Sand, in others of a loomy Gravel, and in ſome of firm fat Earth, eſpecially on Rivers and Brooks within Land, where the Soil is generally richer than on navigable Rivers; and in many Parts of the Province there's a black Mould, and a ſtony Bottom, where the Soil is fruitful, and eaſy to be clear'd, becauſe the Roots of Trees don't lie deep there. The Soil in general is ſo fruitful, that it commonly yields from forty to ſixty-fold.

The moſt remarkable Shrubs and Drugs are Sumach, Snake-Root, Sarſaparilla, Calamus Aromaticus, Jalop, and Spruce Cranberries, with Variety of other Medicinal Plants; and the Woods and Fields are adorn'd with many different ſorts of Flowers.

The Trees of moſt Note are the Black Walnut, Cedar, Cypreſs, Cheſnut, Poplar, Gumwood, Hickory, Saſſafras, Aſh, Beech, red, white, and black Oak, Spaniſh Cheſnut, and Swamp, which is the moſt durable of all the reſt. The Fruits that grow naturally in the Woods are white and black Mulberries, Cheſnuts, Walnuts, Plums, Strawberries, Whortleberries, and Grapes of ſeveral kinds, particularly that call'd the Fox-Grape, which is large and red, taſtes like the Frontiniac Grape, and, as Mr. Pen thinks, would make as good Wine. Here's alſo a Muſcadel-Grape, with ſmall black ones, and vaſt Quantities of good Peaches. They have all ſorts of European and Indian Corn, and the ſame Fruits, Roots, and Garden-Stuff as we.

Black Cattel, Horſes, Sheep, Elks, Deer, larger than ours, Bears, which when young are reckon'd good Meat, Rabbits, Racoons, and Squirrels, abound here. Their Furs are the Skins of Wolves, Bevers, Panthers, Otters, Foxes, wild Cats, Minxes, Muskrats, and an Animal call'd Fiſher. They have plenty of Land-Turtle, and all ſorts of Fowls common in Europe.

Their Rivers and Bays have all ſorts of Fiſh. The Water is good, the Ground of the Rivers being generally Gravel and Stones; and no Country is better furniſh'd with navigable Rivers and Creeks; and near to Philadelphia there are Mineral Springs of the ſame Nature with ours at Barnet and North-hall. The Country has many Mines, and Samplars of moſt ſorts of Ore are found here.

The Rivers of moſt Note are De la War and Suſquahannaugh. The former is navigable three hundred Miles by ſmall Veſſels, riſes Weſt in the Iroquois Country, and falls into the Bay of its own Name, at Lat.

A Scale of 70 Miles in a Degree.

Lat. 40. The other rises in the same Country, and falls into the great Bay of its own Name, about the same Latitude; and Ships bound for Pensilvania do sometimes sail this Way.

The West-side of De la War Bay is inhabited by Swedes and Dutch. The Marshes are drain'd and fruitful. Here's a Town call'd Oxford, consisting of 150 Houses. It has a Church-of-England Congregation, supplied by Ministers from Philadelphia.

Other Places of Note are,

1. That call'd the Falls-Town, which consists of thirty Houses, and is the only one in Buckinghamshire.

2. Bristol, Capital of its County, has fifty Houses, and Mills of several sorts, and lies over-against Burlington in North Jersey.

3. Pensberry, a Mannor belonging to Mr. Pen, with a good Seat, fine Orchards, and large Gardens, which produce as good Apples as any in England. It lies in an Island form'd by the De la War River. There are ten or twelve more little Towns in this County.

4. Philadelphia, Lat. 41. Long. 77. the Capital of the Colony and its County, lies commodiously betwixt the De la War and Schoolkill, which is navigable by Boats 100 Miles above the Falls. The Plan of the Town is so form'd, that it fronts both Rivers for a Mile in length, it being two Miles from one River to the other. There's a Street along the Schoolkill, three quarters of a Mile long, with good Houses, many Warehouses, and convenient Wharfs. The Town consists of 1200 Houses, which are generally well built, have large Orchards and Gardens, and are inhabited by rich Traders. The High-Street and Broad-Street, which lie in the middle of the City, are a hundred Foot broad: The former runs from the middle of the one Front to the other. All Owners who have 1000 Acres of Ground and upwards, have their Houses in the High-Street, or in those which front the two Rivers; every Owner of 5000 Acres has about an Acre in Front; and the lesser Purchasers about half an Acre in the Back-Streets. In the Centre of the Town there's a Square of ten Acres for the Stadthouse, Market-House, School-House, and Quakers Meeting-House. Those of the Church of England have a large Church, and are reckon'd about 700. Their Minister has 50 l. per Annum, and the School-Master 30 l. The Swedes have a Church, and the Presbyterians and Anabaptists have Meeting-Houses. This Town is the Seat of the Assemblies, of the Courts of Justice, and of the chief Trade and Business in the Colony. Here's a fine Key above 200 Foot square, where Ships of 500 Tun may lie. They have a Dock for building of Ships, form'd by an Inlet of De la War River; and several Creeks run into the City from the two Rivers. Here are two Fairs a Year, and two Markets a Week.

5. German Town is reckon'd the most considerable in the County, next to Philadelphia. 'Tis a Corporation of High and Low Dutch, is a very pleasant airy Town, and has above two hundred Houses, with Beech-Trees planted before the Doors for a Mile together.

On the other side of Schoolkill River the Welshmen have planted a Tract of 40000 Acres of Land, which is populous and thick of Townships. They are industrious, wealthy, have many fine Plantations of Corn, and breed abundance of Cattel. Their chief Town is Radnor, which is well situate and built, consists of about 40 Families, and has a Church-of-England Congregation, but no settled Minister.

Philadelphia County in general is remarkable for excellent Gravel, which is very rare in America; and the first Lime-Stone found in this Continent was dug at Montjoy, a Mannor in this County belonging to Mr. Pen's Daughter.

6. Chester, or Useland, the Capital of its County, which is so call'd, because its first Planters were Cheshire-Men. It stands near 20 Miles South-west of Philadelphia. It has 100 Houses, and so fine a Road, that the whole Royal Navy might ride in it; the De la War being three Miles over here. It has a Prison, a Court, and a Church dedicated to St. Paul, the Minister of which has 50 l. a Year. There are several other little Towns and navigable Creeks in this County.

7. Newcastle, Capital of a County, is a fine Town on the De la War, seven or eight Miles South of Chester. The Dutch, who were its first Inhabitants, call'd it Amstat. Both they and the English have Churches here. 'Tis reckon'd the next Town for Business to Philadelphia, consists of 300 Families, and about 2500 Souls. Iron-Hill, in the Neighbourhood, is so call'd from the Ore found there. There's a Creek below this Place, call'd Philpot, big enough for the Royal Navy.

8. Dover, Capital of that call'd the County of Kent, 68 Miles South of Philadelphia. 'Twas formerly call'd St. John's, and stands on the Bay of De la War. Here's a Church-of-England Congregation, whose Minister has fifty Pounds a Year. The County has several Creeks, and many Tracts of excellent Land, which is very fruitful, but not so well planted as the rest.

9. Lewes, a handsome large Town, eight Miles to the South-east, lies on the Bank of a River that runs to De la War Bay, which forms the Harbour. 'Tis Capital of the County of Sussex, whose Plantations lie very scatter'd, and which has few Towns.

XIV. Maryland has Virginia on the South, Pensilvania on the North, unknown Countries on the West, and the Atlantick on the East. It lies betwixt North Lat. 37 & 40. It was so call'd in honour of Mary, Queen to King Charles I. when he gave the Patent of it to the Lord Baltimore. It was before reckon'd part of Virginia: But this Patent gave that Lord and his Heirs all the Royal Jurisdictions, to be held of his Majesty and his Heirs in common Soccage, paying yearly for the same two Arrows of the Country at Windsor-Castle, (of which Honour it was reckon'd a part) and the fifth Part of all Gold and Silver Ore found in the Province. The first chief Adventurers were Popish Gentlemen of England, who expected full Liberty under the then Proprietor, Lord Baltimore, one of their own Religion. Many of the English at first died of Agues here; but after the Country was clear'd by cutting down the Woods, the Distemper was neither so epidemical nor mortal. The Country is divided into ten Shires. The Colony throve so well, that in 1665 it had 16000 Souls, and all the Indian Nations about submitted to the Governor's Protection. After the Revolution, Protestant Governors were appointed instead of the Popish Lord Baltimore, who was nevertheless allow'd to enjoy his Estate here, and the Duty settled on him by the Assemblies. The Governor with his Council and Lords of Mannors make a House of Lords; and the Lower House is form'd of Representatives sent from each County. The chief Court of Judicature is held at St. Mary's, where the most important Causes are tried; and the Lord Proprietor, or his Lieutenant, and Council are Judges. In particular Counties other inferior Courts are held six times a Year, for Trial of Causes not above the Value of 3000 l. Weight of Tobacco, with Liberty of Appeal to the Provincial Court.

Dr. Bray, being sent over as the Bishop of London's Commissary in 1692, fix'd Libraries here, and dispers'd many thousand practical Books. The same Year the Assembly divided the Counties into thirty Parishes, sixteen of which are supply'd with Ministers who have about a hundred Pounds a Year, by Taxes of Tobacco upon the Inhabitants. Besides the Churches, there are several Chappels, Protestant Dissenters Meeting-Houses, and some Papists. There are no Towns here for want of a Number of Mechanicks, tho in 1708 the Inhabitants were computed at 30000. The Tobacco here, of which 'tis thought the Country produces as much as Virginia, is that call'd Oronoko, stronger than that of Virginia, and preferr'd to it in the East and North Parts of Europe.

The Natives are so diminish'd by Civil Wars, that 'tis thought they do not now amount to above five hundred fighting Men. They live for the most part in two or three little Towns on the Eastern Shore, and are generally employ'd by the English to hunt Deer. There's little or no Woollen Manufacture made, but in Somerset County. There's good Syder here, which is the common Drink of the English. They have French and Madera Wines, Malt and Beer from England, and Rum from Barbadoes.

The Soil is generally sandy, and free from Stones. The Climate, Product, and Animals, are much the same with those of Virginia. 'Tis well water'd and woody; and they have plenty of Deer, Water and Land-Fowl, all sorts of Fish, and choice Herbs and Roots, both for Food and Physick. They have various Kinds of Timber for Building, as red, white, and black Chesnut, Water, Spanish, and Live-Oaks, white and red Cedar, very large Cypress, black Walnut-Trees of an extraordinary Grain and Colour, and a sort of Poplar that makes good white Planks, and bears a Flower like a Tulip. They have plenty of Pine and Dogwood, Sassafras, Locust-Trees, red and white Hickory, Elms, Sugar-Plants, a sort of Elder whose Bark is thorny, Laurel which bears a Tulip, and several sorts of Myrtle, one of which has a Berry that makes a sort of green Wax, very proper for Candles, if mix'd with Tallow.

Places of chief Note here are,

1. St. Mary's Town, Capital of its County, and the only City in the Province. It stands on St. George's River, near Chesapeak Bay, Lat. 38. Long. 76. has a Stadthouse, in which the General Court and Council is kept, sends two Representatives to the Assembly, and is govern'd by a Mayor, Recorder, Aldermen, and Council, tho it has not above sixty Houses. There are three Parishes in this County.

2. Annapolis, in the County of Arundel, is a Port-Town, and the Seat of the Government and Assembly, which was transferr'd hither from St. Mary's. Governor Nicholson built a Church here, with a Stadthouse and Free-School. It consists of about forty Houses, seven or eight of which are fit for Inns, and has two Markets a Week.

XV. Virginia lies betwixt North Lat. 37 & 40. and betwixt Long. 80 & 83. and the Breadth and Length are about two hundred and fifty Miles each; tho some extend the Boundaries as far as California. It has Corolina on the South, Maryland on the North-east, the Sea on the South-east, and the Country of the Natives and Apalachean Mountains on the North-west. It was so call'd, because discover'd by Sir Walter Raleigh in Queen Elizabeth's Time, when under this Name it included most of all our Plantations on the Continent. He obtain'd a Patent in 1584 to possess, plant, and enjoy, for himself and such Persons as he should name, and his and their Successors, all such Lands as they should discover, not then possess'd by Christians. The first Adventurers had no great Success; so that the Colony was abandon'd till 1602, when Captain Gosnold setting out from Dartmouth, met with an advantageous Trade in this Country; and returning with a good Description of it, the Merchants of Bristol fitted out more Ships, who traded there to advantage. We cannot insist upon the History; but none had the Courage to think of a Colony to any purpose till Capt. Gosnold obtain'd a Patent from King James I. in 1606, to establish two there: The first, call'd the London Adventurers; and the second, the Plimouth Adventurers. They encounter'd many Difficulties and Discouragements from their own Divisions, &c. till 1610 that the Lord De la War, who was made Governor and General, arriv'd with a Reinforcement of Men and Provisions. After which it prosper'd.

We come now to the Description of the Country: The Air is healthful, and agrees well with the English. Their Summer is in June, July, and August, when the Heats are excessive; but they have frequent refreshing Showers, cool Breezes, and shady Woods and Groves. Here are terrible Claps of Thunder sometimes, but they seldom do any harm. Their Winter is in December, January, February, and March, when the Frosts are severe, but short, and always attended with a clear Air.

The Soil in general is a rich fat Mould three Foot deep, with Loam under it, of which they make good Brick. The Ground is distinguished into High, Low, and Marshy, all of them mix'd with Sand, and warmer than ours.

Their Product is Tobacco, Rice, Hemp, Indian Corn, Grapes, Gums, Drugs, Plants, and fine Flowers. Here are three sorts of Cherries bigger than ours, such plenty of Peaches, that they give 'em to Hogs, those call'd Melacottoons are as big as Lemons, Cushaws, Macocks, Water and Musk-Melons, Gourds, and Pumpions: And white Plums of several sorts abound here; but English Plums do not ripen kindly. Here's a wild Fruit call'd Purchamines, of several sizes, which when ripe, is as delicious as an Apricock, but eaten green, causes Gripes and Convulsions. They formerly made Drink of Quinces; but now they have plenty of Syder and Perry for their common Drink, every Planter having Orchards. Figs grow here as well as in Spain; but Oranges and Lemons don't thrive. Besides common Acorns, they have a sort from which the Natives us'd to draw Oil to anoint themselves, and another which they dried for Winter-Food, when Corn was scarce. All sorts of Garden-Roots, Sallade, and Pot-Herbs grow here as in England. Here is also Snake-Root, and one call'd Musquarpern, with which the Natives paint their Bodies and Arms.

The Soil is capable of all ſorts of Corn. Flax, Hemp, and Cotton thrive well here: And there are abundance of Mulberry-Trees to feed Silk-Worms. Silk-Graſs grows alſo in many Places; and may be cut ſeveral times in a Year. Here's plenty of Paſture-Ground, Phyſick-Earth, Dyers Ware, Coals, Quarries of Stone, and Mines of Iron and Lead. Silver Ore has alſo been found near the Falls.

Their Trees are Cedar, Firs, Pines, Poplars, Cypreſs, Hockly, Sweet-Myrtle, Live-Oak, Cheſnuts, Walnuts, Elms, Aſh, and Beech of ſeveral Sorts. And their Oaks are commonly ſo large, that they are two Foot ſquare at ſixty Foot high. Here are alſo Dogwood, Elder, Hazel, Locuſt-Trees, Saſſafras, Chinkapins, Huckleberries, Cranberries, Gooſeberries, Strawberries, and Hickories. Here might alſo be Sugar enough, but they don't cultivate it; nor do they much mind to make Tar, Pitch, or Roſin.

The chief Beaſts peculiar to the Country are, the Aronghena, a ſort of Badger; a Water-Rat which ſmells like Musk; the Ulchunquois, a ſort of wild Cat; the Opaſſum, and a Flying-Squirrel. The Woods abound with Deer, larger and fatter than ours, Hares and Rabbits in plenty. Here are alſo Lions, Leopards, Panthers, Buffaloes, wild Hogs, Elks, Bears, Wolves, Foxes, Otters, Bevers, wild Cats, Racoons, Polecats, Weeſels, Martens, Minks, and a good Engliſh Breed of Horſes, and black Cattel; but the Sheep are few becauſe of the Wolves.

No Country has greater Variety of Birds; as, Rockbirds, which love Men ſo well, that when they ſee one, they will perch on a Tree by him, and ſing ſweetly; Hummingbirds, Blackbirds with red Shoulders, Nightingales with a Mixture of crimſon and blue-colour'd Feathers, large Herons, with variety of wild Fowl of all ſorts, Turkeys larger than ours, and in ſeaſon all the Year. Their Inſects are the ſame with thoſe in our other Plantations.

Fiſh of all ſorts abound in their Rivers and Seas. There's one ſort call'd Stingraſs, which is good Meat, but has a long Tail with a dangerous Sting; and another call'd the Toad-Fiſh, which when taken out of the Water, ſwells till it be ready to burſt. Here's plenty of Muſcles, and big Oyſters that contain Seed-Pearl. In the Spring the Creeks ſwarm with Herrings that come to ſpawn; and there are Whales, Sharks, and Porpoiſes on the Coaſt. Here's a ſort of Fiſhing Hawks, that catch large Fiſh, and fly to the Woods with them; but are frequently purſu'd by one call'd the Bald-Eagle, which makes 'em drop their Prey, and catches it before it falls to the Ground.

The Inhabitants are divided into Natives, and the Engliſh with their Slaves. The Natives, when the Engliſh came hither, were able to bring 20000 Men to the Field from their twenty Nations, but now cannot raiſe above 500; yet their petty Princes pleaſe themſelves with their Phantoms of Sovereignty, but are Tributaries to the Engliſh, on whoſe Frontiers they live, and who protect them againſt the more remote Indians, that hate them mortally. They are Pagans, and their chief Riches conſiſt in Furs and Pearl, which they ſell to the Engliſh.

In 1703, the Number of the Counties, Pariſhes, Acres, People, and their Quota's for the Militia was taken as follows:

The 6000 Inhabitants in Norther-Neck, and 1200 French Refugees, who live about Monacan, are not included in this Number: So that the Whole of the Engliſh, and thoſe who are ſubject to 'em in this Country, may be computed at 70000.

The Adminiſtration here is by a Governor ſent from the Crown, who with his Council, nam'd by the King, is entruſted with the executive Power; but the Legiſlature is in the Aſſembly, with the Governor's Conſent, ratified by the Prince. The chief Court next to the Aſſembly is that call'd the General Court, held by the Governor and Council, who are the Judges, and determine all Civil Cauſes without Appeal, unleſs the Matter in diſpute be above 300 l. and then there lies an Appeal to the King and Council in England. In Criminal Caſes there's no Appeal; and the Governor can pardon any Crime but Murder, for which he can only reprieve till the King's Pleaſure be known. He calls, prorogues, and diſſolves the Aſſembly; ſummons, and preſides in Council, and governs in manner of a Viceroy. He is Vice-Admiral by Commiſſion from the Admiralty of England, has a Salary of 2000 l. per Ann. and 150 for Houſe-Rent, which, with Perquiſites, makes it 3000 l. per Ann.

When the Governor or his Deputy are abſent, the Preſident of the Council has the Adminiſtration. His Salary is 500 l. per Ann. The Councellors have an equal Vote with the Governor at the Council-Table, are a Check upon him, and form the Upper Houſe in the Aſſembly. The Lower Houſe conſiſts of two Repreſentatives choſen by each County, and one for James City, which makes fifty one in all. Their Proceedings are after the manner of our Parliament: and the other Parts of the Government are like ours, by Sheriffs, Juſtices of the Peace, &c. The Revenues for the Support of the Government are about 5700 l. per Ann.

Moſt of the Inhabitants are of the Church of England; and there are forty nine Pariſhes, of which thirty four have Miniſters, who have their Salaries in Tobacco, beſides Perquiſites for Marriages, &c. The Churchwardens and Veſtry have the Preſentation of Miniſters; but the Induction is in the Governor: And the Biſhop of London has a Commiſſary here, with 100 l. per Ann. to inſpect the Clergy, and viſit the Churches. Here are only two Presbyterian, and three Quakers Meetings in this Country.

The Commonalty is divided into Maſters and Servants. The latter, if Whites, are for a Term of Years; but the Negroes and their Poſterity are Servants for ever. When the Time of the Whites is expir'd, their Maſters muſt give each of them fifteen Buſhels of Corn, and two new Suits of Linen and Woollen; and they buy Plantations at eaſy Rates. The Laws have provided that Servants be well uſed as to Diet, Clothes, and other Neceſſaries.

Proviſions are very cheap here. The better ſort have white Bread, and the others that of Maiz. Gentlemen brew Small Beer of Engliſh Malt; but Strong Beer and Wine they have from elſewhere. They diſtil Spirits from Apples, Peaches, &c. The Poor make Beer of Moloſſes and Bran, or Indian Corn dried in a Stove; and make ſeveral other Liquors that are wholeſome, and pleaſant enough. Their chief Firing is Wood, which is ſo plentiful, that they are not at pains to dig Coal. The Rich have their Clothes either of light Stuffs or Silks from England, and are very modiſh. In Summer the Men wear Jackets of Fuſtian or Linen, and the Women have Gowns of Linen or Muſlin. The Houſes are of Brick, Timber, or Stone, plaſter'd on the Out-ſide with Lime and Oyſter-Shells.

The better ſort divert themſelves by hunting Wolves, wild Horſes, Deer, Bevers, Hares, and wild Turkeys. 'Tis obſerv'd that the Engliſh Men are much more numerous here than the Women. Diſeaſes of the Climate are Colds, to which Strangers are liable, if not exceeding careful; as alſo to Gripes and Fluxes by eating the pleaſant Fruits too greedily. The Scurvy, Fevers, or Agues are pretty common; but for the two latter, they uſe the Jeſuits-Bark ſucceſsfully. Their Phyſicians are few, and for the moſt part uſe nothing but Simples.

They traffick among themſelves chiefly by Barter, for want of Coin, what they have being either Arabian Chequins at ten Shillings apiece, or Spaniſh, American, and Engliſh Gold or Silver. Their chief Trade is in Tobacco, which they have brought to ſuch Perfection, eſpecially the ſweet-ſcented, that 'tis reckon'd the beſt in the World, and is generally vented in England for home Conſumption. The Tobacco Trade is one of the moſt profitable Branches of our Commerce, and is reckon'd to employ from Virginia and Maryland two hundred large Ships every Year; beſides the many Thouſands of Hands it employs there and in England. 'Tis chiefly imported to London, Briſtol, and Liverpool, is ſuppoſed to bring in, one Year with another, above 300000 l. Cuſtoms. The Commodities ſent hither are Linen, Silks, Eaſt-India Goods, Wine, fine and coarſe Cloth, Serges, Stuffs, Bays, Hats, all ſorts of Haberdaſhery, Tools for Agriculture and Planting, Iron Ware, Clothes of all ſorts ready made, Biſcuit, Flower, &c. They drive a ſmall Trade in the Sugar and Leeward-Iſlands with Tobacco, Cattel, and Proviſions; and carry home Moloſſes and Sugar: But thoſe of New England and New York have got moſt of their Trade to the Maderas and Azores for Pipe-Staves, Hoops, &c.

The Situation of the Countries may be ſeen by our Map; ſo that we ſhall only take notice of the principal Rivers and Places. The Eaſt-ſide of this Country, as well as Maryland, lies on the great Bay of Cheſapeak, which is about fourteen Miles broad at the Mouth, in Lat. 37. but the Paſſage for Ships not above five, there being Shoals of Sand on both ſides. The Water in the Channel here is from ſeven to nine Fathom deep. This Bay receives abundance of navigable Rivers with large Mouths, on both sides, and has several small Islands, some of which are planted. The broadest Place of this Bay is at the Mouth of Patowmack River, in Lat. 39. where it is thirty six Miles over.

The first River where the English settled, and which lies furthest South, is James River, by the Natives call'd Powhatan. It falls into the Sea or rather the Bay of Chesapeak, in Lat 37. runs a hundred and forty Miles up the Country, and is about a Mile broad as high as James Town, which is thirty Miles up, and it receives several Rivers on both sides. The Town lies on the North-side of the River in a Peninsula, has about seventy Houses that lie scatter'd, and several publick Houses for Conveniency of Travellers. It is much diminish'd by Fire, and the Removal of the Courts of Justice and the Assembly to Williamsburg, about seven Miles further within Land, which consists but of thirty Houses. Colonel Nicholson remov'd those Courts hither, founded a College, a Stadthouse, and a Fort with ten or twelve Guns, and order'd several Streets to be mark'd out in form of a W, but it was never finish'd, it being the Humour of the Virginians to live in their Plantations. 'Tis not expected this Colony should abound with Towns, unless that Custom be alter'd.

2. York River lies North from James River, falls into Chesapeak Bay, is navigable sixty Miles by great Vessels, and ninety by lesser. The Country betwixt it and James River is a sort of Peninsula, in some Places not above five Miles broad. 'Tis the best inhabited, because of the Conveniency of those two Rivers.

In the West Boundaries of New Kent, Lat. 37. are Hills that yield a glittering Sand, which the first Adventurers mistook for Gold Dust. On the Shores of some other Rivers are found hard transparent Stones like Diamonds, which cut Glass. The Cliffs upon those Rivers are full of Veins of Iron; and the Mountains in some Parts of the Country seem to be a continu'd Rock of Iron.

XVI. Carolina has Virginia on the North, Spanish Florida on the South, the Apalachean Mountains on the West, and the Sea on the East: It lies betwixt Lat. 31 & 37. and Long. 78 & 85. The greatest Extent South and North is three hundred and sixty Miles, and the greatest Breadth East and West is much the same; but 'tis contracted by the Mountains and the Sea on the South. It was formerly reckon'd part of Florida, possess'd by the Spaniards, and then by the French, but was claim'd by the English as part of Cabot's Discoveries; but they never took formal Possession till the time of King Charles II. Yet in 1622, several English Families from Virginia and New England settled near the Head of the River May, converted many of the Natives, and among others one of their Kings. In 1653 Mr. Brigstoc, an Englishman, went to Apalacha, where he was honourably entertain'd by the English settled there, and wrote a Description of the Country.

In 1663, King Charles II. granted it by Patent to the Earl of Clarendon, the Duke of Albemarle, the Lords Craven, Berkley, and Ashley, afterwards Earl of Shaftsbury, Sir George Carteret, Sir William Berkley, and Sir John Colliton, to plant all that Territory from the North-end of Lucke Island in the South Virginian Sea, within North Lat. 36. to the West as far as the South Seas, and South as far as the River San Matheo, which borders on the Coast of Florida, within North Lat 31. and so West, in a direct Line to the said South Sea, for which they were to pay a Quit-Rent of twenty Marks per Ann.

The first Thing the Proprietors consider'd for advancing the Colony was, that Liberty of Conscience was absolutely necessary; and therefore they obtain'd a Clause accordingly in their Charter, which they inserted in their fundamental Constitutions, sign'd by all of them March 1. 1669. to be and remain the sacred and unalterable Form and Rule of Government there for ever. By those Constitutions a Palatine was to be chose out of the Proprietors, to continue during Life, and to be succeeded by the eldest of the others. Having no Room for the History, we proceed to the Description.

'Tis divided into North and South Carolina, which have different Governors, but the Proprietors are the same. North Carolina is divided into Albemarle and Clarendon Counties, and South Carolina into those of Craven, Berkley, Colliton, and Carteret.

The Country in general lies conveniently for Trade, and has a pleasant and safe Coast, not stormy nor frozen in Winter. Mr. Archdale, who has writ a Description of the Country, and was Governor of it in 1695, says, the Climate is very temperate and healthy; that the Soil is fruitful, and abounds with Vines on the Coast. The Air is always clear, and agreeable to European Constitutions; so that they have seldom any raging Distemper, but what is brought from the more Southern Parts. The Diseases most common are some Touches of Agues and Fevers in July and August, which happen chiefly to new Comers, and are generally occasion'd by Intemperance and Neglect. Here's such plenty of Nectarines, Apricocks, Apples, Pears, &c. that they feed their Hogs with them; and their Stone-Fruits generally come from planting the Stone to bear Fruit in four or five Years. European Grain thrives to admiration; and here's the best Rice in the World. The Country abounds so much with Provisions, that they furnish great Quantities to Jamaica, Barbadoes, &c. for their Winter being short, gives them an opportunity to apply themselves to raise all sorts of Product, which makes their Provisions cheap. Fowl and Fish of all sorts abound here, as do Cattel of all Kinds. Here are many Deer, Bears, and other Animals, that yield Furs. The Country abounds with navigable Rivers and Lakes; but they prudently settled on those first whose Mouths were narrow or shallow; so that Enemies or Pirates could not easily disturb them by Sea. The South Parts, all along Port-Royal River, in Lat. 33. have a more temperate Air and regular Seasons than the North, there being no Excess of Heat or Cold, and their Winter milder and shorter than on Ashley or Cooper Rivers, which lie about thirty Miles further North. All along the Banks of Port-Royal are stately Trees of various sorts, which are perpetually green, and present Landskips so fine, and so curiously diversify'd, as charm the Beholders. The Ground near most Parts of it is low, but rises gradually at a distance in little Hills, adjoining to fruitful Plains perpetually cover'd with Flowers and Greens, and well water'd with Brooks. Here are many Thickets which produce abundance of Simples made use of by the Indians against all Distempers. This River has a bold Ice, seven Foot deep at low Water on the Bar, forms a good Harbour, and runs into the best Country in Carolina. Here are great Quantities of Drugs, as Sarsaparilla, Cassia, Gums, Rosin, and excellent Balsams that flow from Trees, and inexhaustible Stores of Honey, of which they make choice Spirits and Mead. They have lately improv'd their Silks, employ the Negro Children to feed their Worms, and make fine Druggets mix'd with Silk and Wool. The French Protestants have set up a Linen Manufacture, make good Hats, and cultivate Vineyards.

Their Trees, Fruits, and Animals, are much the same with those of Virginia. The Pines Cedars, Cypress, and other fragrant Trees, are green all the Year, and yield store of Pitch and Tar.

The Inhabitants send their Product to other Places in America and Europe: But chiefly to Jamaica, Barbadoes, the Leeward Islands, and England, their Rice, Skins, Pitch, and Tar. The other Commodities which they chiefly export, are Beef, Pork, Corn, Pease, Butter, Tallow, Hides, Tann'd Leather, Pipe-Staves, Hoops, Cotton, and Silk.

The People are very prolifick, so that many Families have from ten to twelve Children apiece. The British Inhabitants are about 12000, besides Negroes. The Women are in general good Housewives, and their Children to work at eight Years of Age.

We come next to the Topography of the Counties:

1. Albemarle County borders on Virginia, and is water'd by Albemarle River, which, after a Course of two hundred and forty Miles, besides Turnings and Windings, falls into the Sea, Lat. 35. 'Tis full of broad Creeks but they don't run far into the Country. This County was at first better planted than any of the rest, and had about 300 Families; but most of 'em remov'd afterwards to Cooper River. Part of the Coast about Cape Look-out is inhabited by Indians.

2. Clarendon County lies S. of Albemarle, and is water'd by a River of the same Name, which falls into the Sea at Cape Fear, Lat. 34. The Indians of this Province are reckon'd the most barbarous in Carolina. Here's but one English Settlement taken notice of, call'd Charles Town.

South Carolina divided from the North by Santee River, which runs about a hundred fifty Miles, and falls into the Sea, Lat. 34. The first County lies Craven, on the South-side of the River, and is pretty well united by English and French. Here are also some Families from Newengland, who in 1706 beat off the French Invaders. This County sends ten Members to the Assembly. 2. Berkley County lies South from Craven. The North Parts are not planted; but the South abounds with Plantations, because of the two great Rivers, Cooper and Ash. The North-west Parts have several good Plantations upon Wando River. This County sends ten Members to the Assembly.

Charles Town at the Conflux of Ashley and Cooper Rivers, Lat. 34. is the Capital the Province. It lies on a Neck of Land between the Rivers, has two Creeks. 'Tis the only free Port in the Province; but Ships of above two hundred Tuns pass the Bar; which is a great Disadvantage to its Trade. 'Tis the Market, however, for the whole Product of the Country, and trades near a thousand Miles into the Content. The Fortifications are more for Beauty than Strength, and consist of six Bastions, with a Line round them. The adjacent Coury is fruitful and pleasant, and the Avenues extremely delightful, especially that call'd the Broad Way, which is planted for three or four Miles, and looks green all the Year. There are several fair Streets and Buildings in the Town, and the Church is large and stately. Here's a publick Library, a French Church in the chief Street, a Presbyterian and Baptist Meeting-House, and another in the Suburbs for the Quakers. The Inhabitants are about 3000. This Town is the Seat of the Governor, Assembly, Courts of Judicature, and all publick Offices.

(2.) Dorster, on the South Borders of this County, contains about three hundred and fifty People, and has a Meeting-House for Independents.

3. Colliton County lies South from Craven, and is divided by the River Stono from Berkley County. The North-east Parts are full of Indian Settlement and the Rivers form an Island below Charles Town, which is well planted and inhabited. Edisto River, in this Country, is also well planted on both Sides. New London lies on the West-side of South Edisto River, consists of about eighty Houses, and has several considable Plantations in the Neighbourhood. This County has two hundred Freeholders, and sends ten Members to the Assembly.

4. Carteret County is not yet inhabited, tho generally thought the most fruitful and pleasant Part of the Country. It contains the great River Cambaa and the May, which join together, and form the Island, or rather Peninsula Edelano, Lat. 32 ½. The Country upon the May has a pleasant Lake and Valley.

The ISLANDS in the West Indies belonging to the British Empire in America.

I. BERMUDAS, or Summer's Islands, Lat. 32. 25. Long. 58. 60. over-against the Coast of Carolina, about five hundred and seventy Miles East from Cape Carteret in that Country. Authors differ about their Number; but taking in all the little Rocks that deserve no Notice, they may be about four hundred. They had the present Name from Sir George Summers, who was shipwreck'd here in 1609; and 'tis said they were call'd Bermudas from the Name of a Child born of a Passenger, while Sir George staid here. Upon this Discovery the English made a Settlement here in 1612, and by Degrees brought it to the present Condition; so that the Inhabitants are now reckon'd about 10000, and are govern'd much after the manner of our other Plantations. The Climate is healthful, and the Soil fruitful. It was reckon'd one of the most healthful Places in the World for about eighty eighty Years after the Diſcovery; ſo that ſick People come hither from our Sugar-Iſlands to recover their Health: within theſe twenty Years, Hurricanes have much alter'd the Air: in general 'tis clear, temperate, and calm. But ſometimes they have dreadful Lightnings and Thunder which ſplit Rocks. The Storms come with the New Moon; and if Circles be ſeen about it, 'tis a preſage of a dreadful Tempeſt. The North and North-weſt Winds are moſt predominant, and turn Summer into Winter. They have ſeldom any Snow, nor are their Rains frequent, but violent, and the Sky is frightfully dark: Yet here ſeems to be a perpetual Spring, and Birds breed in theſe Iſlands moſt part of the Year.

The Soil is of ſeveral ſorts. Two or three Foot under the Mould there's a Subſtance like Chalk, porous like a Pumice-ſtone, and containing much Water. All that they have here is brought, except the Rain-Water they keep in Ciſterns for Uſe. Maiz is their chief Grain, which they ſow and reap twice a Year. Their beſt-time is July and December. Here's Tobacco, but not very good: with moſt other Plants found in America; and thoſe brought from Europe grow to Perfection. Their Trees are Palmetto's, Piemento's, and wild Palms, whoſe Fruit reſembles Damaſcens; and Silk-Worms breed in their Leaves, by which they might have Silk enough, did they mind it. Here's ſtore of odoriferous Trees which produce ſtyptick Berries, that cure Fluxes. Their Cedars are reckon'd the beſt, as good as Oaks for building Ships, which is one of the beſt Parts of their Trade. Here are fine Plantations of Oranges, reckon'd the laſt and beſt in the World, Mulberries, &c. which give the Country a beautiful Proſpect. Their Fruits are Dates, prickled Pears, Bear-Mulberries, and others of ſeveral ſorts, particularly one which grows on that call'd the Redweed, out of which come Worms that afterwards turn into Flies, which feed on the Berry, are bigger than the Cochineal, equal in Colour, and ſuperior in medicinal Virtue, ſays Lowe in his Philoſoph. Tranſ.

No venomous Creature can live here. They have large beautiful Spiders without Venom, whoſe Webs reſemble raw Silk, and catch Birds as big as Thruſhes. Here's a Plant call'd Poiſon-Weed, which reſembles Ivy: The Touch of it cauſes a Pain and Sting, which quickly goes off; and ſometimes the very Sight of it cauſes the Skin of one's Face to peel; yet it does not affect every one, ſome People chew it without harm. The Sea produces all our ſorts of Fiſh, and others not known in Europe; and on the Rocks under Water grows that call'd the Sea-Feather, which reſembles the Leaf of a Vine, with red Veins. The Whales which abound here in March, April, and May, feed on that Plant. Sperma Ceti and Pearls are ſometimes found on the Coaſt, and abundance of Tortoiſes of the beſt ſort. Their Fowl is what is common in Europe and America; and their only troubleſome Inſects are Muſkettoes, Bugs, and Ants. The Inhabitants are generally healthful: Many live to a hundred Years, but few above, and ſeem rather to die of Age and Weakneſs than of Sickneſs. The Houſes are generally cover'd with Palmetto-Leaves, eight or ten Foot long, and almoſt as broad. Theſe Iſlands lie moſt in form of a Creſcent, encompaſs'd for the moſt part by the greater, which is about twenty Miles long, but much indented by Bays on the North-weſt ſide. The main Iſland is fortified by Rocks, which extend themſelves round it a great way into the Sea; and this natural Strength is improv'd by Forts, &c. ſo planted with Cannon, as to command the Channels and Inlets. There are only two Places where Ships can ſafely put in, but not without a Pilot, becauſe of the hidden Rocks. Theſe two Harbours are ſafe for large Ships; and ſo forted, that an Enemy may eaſily be kept out. It ebbs and flows here about five Foot; and in moſt Places the Rocks appear at low Water. So many Ships were formerly wreck'd here, that the Spaniards call'd them the Devil's Iſlands.

The chief Town here is that of St. George, at the bottom of a Bay in the Iſle of that Name, in the North-weſt Corner of theſe Iſlands. 'Tis defended by ſix or ſeven Forts and Batteries mounted with ſeventy Cannon, ſo diſpos'd, that they can all be brought to bear upon any Ship before ſhe enters the Harbour. Here's a fair Church, with a good Library, and the Miniſter has 50 l. per Ann. and the Glebe Lands. The Town conſiſts of a thouſand handſome Houſes, and has a fine Stadthouſe for the Governor, Council, and Aſſembly. There are two other Miniſters who officiate in the Country, and have 40 l. per Ann. each, beſides their Glebes; and they have parochial Libraries. We refer to the Map for the Tribes into which theſe Iſlands are divided.

II. The Bahama, or Lucaye Iſlands, are the moſt Northern of the Antilles, and lie Eaſt and South-Eaſt from Spaniſh Florida, betwixt Lat. 23, and 30. and Long. 70, and 80. They are ſeparated from Florida by the Gulph of Bahama. Some reckon them four hundred in number, including all the little Rocks about them, tho it does not appear ſo by our Maps. Many of theſe Iſlands have a good Mould. The Air is wholeſome, and not ſo hot as in other Parts of the ſame Latitude. Moſt of their Coaſts are dangerous and ill to make; which is the Reaſon that they continu'd ſo long deſert. The Spaniards decoy'd or carry'd off moſt of the native Inhabitants, and uſed to trade thither for Guaiacum, Sarſaparilla, Saſſafras, Red-wood and Ambergreaſe, which with Maiz, Fowl, and a ſort of Rabbits, were the general Product. Bahama, which gives name to the reſt, lies nearer Florida, betwixt Lat. 26, and 27. is about ſixty miles long, but narrow. In the Strait betwixt it and Florida, the Current is ſo ſtrong, that frequently neither Wind nor Oars can prevail againſt it; ſo that tho the Wind be fair, Ships cannot enter it till a certain Seaſon; and if the Wind be croſs, they go with the Current. The Spaniſh Fleets muſt wait their Opportunity to paſs this Strait from the Havana homeward. Captain William Sayle, afterwards Governor of Carolina, being drove in hither by Tempeſt, diſcovered them to the Proprietors of Carolina, who obtained a Grant of them in 1662. The Engliſh kept poſſeſſion of them till about 1700, when the French and Spaniards from Petit Guaves, invaded them, took the Fort and Governor in the Iſle of Providence, plunder'd and deſtroy'd the Settlements, &c. carried off half the Blacks; and the reſt of the People who fled to the Woods retired afterwards to Carolina: ſince that time theſe Iſlands have been a Shelter for Pirates, whom Captain Rogers was ſent to reduce in 1717; but we have had no Account of his Succeſs.

That called the Iſle of Providence, of which the Captain is made Governor, is the moſt conſiderable, tho not the largeſt. Here it was where the Engliſh Governor reſided. 'Tis about twenty eight Miles long, and eleven where broadeſt. Captain Sayle gave it the Name, after he was a ſecond time drove upon it in his Voyage to Carolina. The chief Profits made by the Inhabitants were by Wrecks, or Proviſions for thoſe who were drove hither by bad Weather; for which end they kept Storehouſes, tho moſt of their Proviſions came from Carolina. While the Engliſh were in poſſeſſion, there was a Town here called Naſſau, of 160 Houſes, with a Fort. At the Entrance of the Harbour there is a Bar, over which no Ship of 500 Tun can paſs; but within there is room enough for a Navy Royal. The Iſland produces nothing but Salt and Braſiletta Wood, which they carry to Carolina, whither it is a Week's Sail, but ten days back, becauſe of the ſtrong Current in the Gulph of Florida. Peaſe come up here in ſix Weeks, and Indian Corn in twelve. Mr. Stafford, in his Account to the Royal Society, ſays, this Iſland abounds with variety of Fiſh, Fowl, Trees, and Plants unknown to us; and our Philoſophical Tranſactions, Vol. 2. ſay, Whales have been found dead on the Shore here, with Sperm over all their Bodies; that one ſuch Whale is reckon'd worth many Hundreds of Pounds; and that here's a ſort of Fiſh which cauſe great Pains, if eaten, but they go off after two Days Itching. They are hard to be diſtinguiſh'd, becauſe there are others of the ſame Shape, Size, Colour, and Taſte, that are harmleſs. The reſt of theſe Iſlands are not worth inſiſting on. The greateſt Advantage that can be expected from them, is, that they lie convenient in a Time of War to cruiſe upon the Spaniſh Plate-Fleet, in their Return homeward from the Havana, or to have Store-Houſes for the Relief of Ships drove hither by Streſs of Weather in their Way to and from the Gulph of Mexico.

III. Jamaica lies betwixt Lat. 17. 35. and 18. 40. Long. 75. 23. and 77. 53. is about ſixty Miles South and North, where broadeſt, and a hundred and fifteen Eaſt and Weſt where longeſt, the Form being almoſt oval. 'Twas taken from the Spaniards by the Engliſh in 1654.

The Climate is ſo temperate, that there's no Country betwixt the two Tropicks where the Heat is more moderate, the Air being cool'd by Breezes, frequent Rains, and nightly Dews. The Eaſt Breezes begin about Nine in the Morning, and grow ſtronger as the Sun riſes; ſo that People may work in the Fields all Day; yet the Weather is more variable here than in others of the Caribbees. The Eaſt and Weſt Parts are moſt ſubject to Storms of Wind and Rain, becauſe the Foreſts are not cut down, which make them leſs agreeable than the South and North Parts, that are clear'd of Woods. The Air in the mountainous Parts is cooler, and they have frоſty Mornings. May and December are wet Months. The Winter is diſtinguiſh'd from Summer by the more violent Rain and Thunder. The Days and Nights are almoſt equal; and the Tides ſeldom riſe above a Foot high.

The Product is Piemento, or Jamaica-Pepper, better than the Eaſt-India Spice, Sugar much better than the Barbadoes Muſcovado, which cures faſter here in ten Days than at Barbadoes in ſix Months; wild Cinnamon, many Drugs and Medicinal Herbs, as Guaiacum, China, Sarſaparilla, Caſſia, Aloes, Benjamin, Contrayerva, Sumach, Tamarinds, Venillo's, many ſorts of Miſletoe, wholeſome Gums, and Roots; the Cochineal-Plant, prickled Pears, or Indian Figs, Spirit-Weed, the Baſtard Cedar, Whitewood-Tree, Soap-Tree, Caſſavi-Roots, the Palm, Pine, and Manchineel-Trees; ſeveral ſorts of Dyers and Sweet Woods, Melons, Mangoes, Plane-Trees, Sower-Sops: and here are certain Fruit-Trees which, tho of the ſame kind, ripen at different Times. There's Tobacco here ſo much eſteem'd, that the Merchants buy it faſter than the Planters can make it; but that which grows on Salt-Petre Ground flaſhes as it ſmokes, and is apt to rot in Tranſportation. The Potatoes which grow on the ſame Ground ripen two Months ſooner than others; but muſt be immediately ſpent, becauſe they ſoon rot. Here are alſo good Ginger, Cotton, Prickle-Apples, Cuſtard-Apples, and many others; Plantanes, Anana's, Mammees, Sapata's, Sapotilla's, Avocata's, ſenſitive Plants, Oranges, Pomegranates, with the other Fruits, Roots, and Herbs common in England. And beſide Maiz, here are Peaſe and Beans, and one ſort call'd the Horſe-eye Bean, becauſe it reſembles the Eye of that Creature. Salt-Petre has been found in many Parts of the Iſland; and there are three good Salt-Pans. Some talk of Silver and Copper Mines.

There are many good Horſes; and there were Multitudes of large Beeves, but now ſo much diminiſh'd that the Inhabitants are ſupplied with Beef from other Colonies. The Sheep are generally large and fat, but the Wool good for nothing. Hogs, Goats, Aſſes, and Mules, abound here.

The Bays and Rivers have all ſorts of good European and American Fiſh, particularly Tortoiſes, reckon'd the beſt in America; ſo that Veſſels come annually for 'em from the Caribbee Iſlands. The Ponds and Rivers are infeſted with Aligators; and here are great Numbers of Manchinella's, ſhap'd like Craw-Fiſh.

Tame and Wild Fowl, and particularly Parrots, abound more here than in many of the other Iſlands. Inſects are the Fire-Flies, Wood-Lice, Cyrons or Chegos, that chiefly annoy the Negroes, get into their Feet and Legs, where they breed in Bags, and if not cut out by Chirurgeons, eat off their Toes, and ſometimes over-run the whole Body. Here are alſo Adders and Guana's, but neither of them venomous; and Gnats and ſtinging Flies, but chiefly in the Negroes Quarters.

The Inhabitants are Maſters, Servants, and Slaves. The Maſters of Families, or Planters, live here in as much Pomp and Eaſe as in moſt Parts of the World. Many of them have their Coaches and Livery-Servants; and 'tis obſerved that for Magnificence and Luxury they always exceeded our other Colonies. The Adminiſtration is in a Governor appointed by the Crown, and a Council, with the uſual Officers. The Laws are made by an Aſſembly, with the Governor's Conſent. It conſiſts of a Preſident, and thirty one Repreſentatives ſent from the Pariſhes. The People were formerly reckon'd 60000 Britiſh, and 100000 Negroes, but they have been much diminiſh'd by War, Earthquakes, and Diſeaſes. They have 7000 Militia Foot, and ſeveral Troops of Horſe; and the Engliſh able to bear Arms are reckon'd about 15000. Moſt of the Engliſh are of the Church of England.

Their Trade formerly to the Spaniſh Weſt-Indies, conſiſted chiefly in Negroes, Stuffs, and other Engliſh Manufactures, and they had a very beneficial Commerce in Campeachy Wood, from the Bay of that Name, but were always forc'd to have an armed Guard. The late Wars have made a great Alteration in their Commerce, which was very beneficial to England, becauſe it brought us Bullion. Their Product is generally the beſt of its kind in any of our Plantations, and they take off a great many of our Commodities. 'Tis reckon'd that two or three hundred Sail of ſtout Ships are conſtantly employed in this Trade, and that before the War their Number was greater.

The Country is divided into ſixteen Pariſhes, and is reckon'd to contain about five Millions of Acres, of which but one half are planted. They have ſpare Ground enough to raiſe Proviſions for themſelves, if they did not think it better to cultivate their other Commodities for European Markets. There are many Ridges of Hills, but the chief runs thro the Iſland from Eaſt to Weſt, and from it flow abundance of Rivers into the Sea on both ſides, which fructify the Country, and advance their Trade. The chief Pariſhes or Precincts are, (1.) St. Elizabeth, in the Weſt Part of the Iſland. It abounds with Plantations, and had ſeveral Spaniſh Towns, now demoliſh'd. North of Point Negril there is a large Bay, with a good ſafe Harbour, convenient in time of War with Spain for our Fleets to wait for theirs, as they come to or from the Havana. This Pariſh ſends two Repreſentatives to the Aſſembly. (2.) St. James's Pariſh, toward the North-Weſt End of the Iſland. It had ſeveral Spaniſh Towns, now demoliſh'd, is thinly inhabited, and ſends two Members to the Aſſembly. (3.) St. Anne's Pariſh lies Eaſt from St. James's on the ſame Coaſt, is mountainous, and thinly inhabited, and ſends two Members to the Aſſembly. (4.) St. Mary's Pariſh lies Eaſt from that, and ſends alſo two Members to the Aſſembly. (5.) St. George's Pariſh lies Eaſt from thence, and does the like. It is mountainous, and of little Note. (6.) St. Thomas's Pariſh, in the North-eaſt Corner, is alſo mountainous, ſends two Members to the Aſſembly, and has on the Eaſt-ſide a Harbour call'd Port St. George, formerly St. Antonio, which is one of the beſt in the Iſland. (7.) St. David's Pariſh is ſeparated from that of St. Thomas by the Blue Mountains, is well planted with Tobacco, has plenty of Cattel, Wood, and Water, a little Town at the Mouth of the River Morant, a Fort, and a Salt-Work. It alſo ſends two Members to the Aſſembly. (8.) St. Andrew's Pariſh lies Weſt from that on the South-ſide of the Iſland, noted for little but a Pariſh-Church, and ſending two Repreſentatives to the Aſſembly. (9.) Port Royal Pariſh, on the Eaſt-ſide of the Iſland, is the chief in the Country, and contains Port Royal the Capital, which lies in Lat. 17. 54. Long. 76. 4. and before it was deſtroyed by an Earthquake in 1692, and by a Fire in 1703, was one of the moſt beautiful and wealthy Towns of America, well fortified, and the Buildings ſtately. There was ſuch a Reſort of Merchants and others hither for Traffick, that it always look'd like a Fair; and ſent three Members to the Aſſembly. But the Market and Trade is now remov'd to Kingſton, on the other ſide the Bay, where the Quarter-Seſſions, other Courts of Juſtice, and the Offices of the Secretary, Receiver-General, and Naval Affairs, are now kept. It ſends three Repreſentatives to the Aſſembly, and contains ſeven or eight hundred Houſes. (10.) St. Catherine's Pariſh lies Weſt from Port Royal. It contains a little Town call'd Paſſage-Fort, of two hundred Houſes, about five Miles North-weſt from Port Royal, and has a Fort which commands the River. This Precinct ſends three Repreſentatives to the Aſſembly. (11.) Spaniſh-Town, nine Miles North-weſt from Port Royal, was the Capital of the Country when poſſeſs'd by the Spaniards, call'd St. Jago de la Vega, and gave Title of Duke to the famous Columbus. 'Tis ſtill the Metropolis of the Iſland, the Seat of the Governor and chief Courts of Juſtice lies very pleaſantly on a fine large Stream that runs by it, and contains about five or ſix hundred Houſes. The Inhabitants live in Pomp and Luxury, and take their Pleaſure in a neighbouring Savannah in the Evenings. It ſends three Repreſentatives to the Aſſembly, and is defended by a ſmall Fort. (12.) St. John's Pariſh lies North from Spaniſh-Town, is one of the moſt fruitful, pleaſant, and populous Places in the Iſland, and ſends two Repreſentatives to the Aſſembly. (13.) St. Dorothy's Pariſh lies South from St. John's, and Weſt from St. Catherine's. Here lies that call'd the Old Harbour, which is a good Road, and may equally ſerve Spaniſh-Town and Port Royal, being capable of four or five hundred large Ships. It ſends two Members to the Aſſembly. (14.) Vere Pariſh lies Weſt from St. Dorothy's on the Coaſt, has a ſmall Village nam'd Carliſle, with a ſafe Bay, and ſends two Repreſentatives to the Aſſembly.

IV. Anguilla, Lat. 19. Long. 59. 'Tis the moſt Northerly of the Caribbee Iſlands poſſeſs'd by the Engliſh, is level and woody, yet fruitful, yields pretty good Tobacco, and abounds with tame Cattel. The Inhabitants are reckon'd poor and lazy, live without Religion or Government, care for nothing but Food and Raiment, and take their Wives without Marriage. In 1666, the French attack'd this Iſland, when the Inhabitants ſet fire to their Houſes, and retir'd to the Woods; and in 1689, the French landed ſome Wild Iriſh here, who treated the Engliſh very barbarouſly.

V. Barbuda, Lat. 18. Long. 59. about ninety Miles South-eaſt from Anguilla. 'Tis thirty Miles long, and fifteen broad, produces good Indico and Tobacco, Citrons, Pomegranates, Oranges, Raiſins, Indian Figs, Cocoa-Nuts, whoſe Shells ſupply the Inhabitants with Cups, &c. and has about 1200 People, who make good Profit of their Cattel in the other Iſlands. They have ſeveral rare Kinds of Wood, Herbs, and Drugs, with Braſil, Ebony, Caſſia, Cinnamon, Pine-Apples, Cotton, Pepper, Ginger, Potatoes, and the Senſitive Plant. Here are Serpents of ſeveral ſorts: ſome very large, which deſtroy Rats, and are not poiſonous: others are ſo poiſonous, that if an Antidote be not apply'd in two Hours, the Wound is incurable. The Proprietor is Mr. Codrington.

VI. Antego lies twelve Miles South-weſt of Barbuda. 'Tis ſeventeen Miles long, and twelve broad. King Charles the Second granted it by Patent to Lord Francis Willoughby in 1663; but 'tis now reverted to the Crown. It produces good Muſcovado Sugar, and ſome Tobacco. The Heats are more exceſſive than in Barbadoes, and the Soil more ſandy. The Approach is difficult, becauſe of Rocks. Its want of Freſh-water Springs is ſupply'd by Rain-water, which they preſerve in Ciſterns. Here are wild Cinnamon-Trees, Ginger, and Indico. Colonel Codrington did very much improve this Iſland; but it ſuffer'd much by a terrible Hurricane in 1707, and likewiſe by the French in the late Wars. 'Tis divided into five Pariſhes, of which St. John's, Falmouth and Bridge-Town are the chief, and have little Towns of the ſame Name. It has alſo ſeveral good Ports: That of Falmouth is defended by a Fort; and Nonſuch Harbour is a ſpacious Bay. St. John's Town, the Capital, has about a hundred Houſes; and Falmouth is as big. The Number of Whites is computed at 8000, and the Blacks about 18000. The moſt common Fiſh here, are Sea-Breams, Sharks, Bucanes, a ravenous Fiſh whoſe Bite proves mortal, without immediate Application of an Antidote. There's another of the ſame Name, that is monſtrous, but eatable. The others are thoſe call'd Sea-Parrots, Urchins, Sword-Fiſh, &c. The Iſland abounds with Cattel, Veniſon, and all ſorts of Fowl.

VII. St. Chriſtopher's lies about ſixty Miles North-weſt of Antego, Lat. 17 ½. Long. 61. is about twenty five Miles long, and ſeven where broadeſt; but much contracted towards the South-eaſt. It had the Name from Chriſtopher Columbus, the Diſcoverer. Their chief Commodity is Tobacco; but the Soil is proper for Fruits of all ſorts, Sugar, Cotton, Ginger, &c. 'Tis well ſupply'd with Springs, and has ſeveral hot ones, proper for Baths. Here are alſo Salt-Pits. The Valleys and Sides of the Hills are fruitful, but the Mountains of a ſulphurous Compoſition, and for the moſt part over-grown with Palmettoes, Cotton-Trees, Lignum-Vitæ, and others unknown to us; nor had it any European ſorts till tranſplanted thither. The Air is exceeding hot; but ſo temper'd with Breezes, that 'tis healthful and pleaſant enough, when one is us'd to it. The Days and Nights are almoſt conſtantly equal, and the Seaſon looks for the moſt part like Summer; but ſometimes they have great Winds, Hurricanes, and Rain. From May to September they have ſtore of good Tortoiſes, Guano's, and Land-Crabs; and large excellent Prahms, but they muſt be immediately dreſs'd. Other ſorts of Fiſh abound here. Maiz, Pine-Apples, Plantanes, Apples, prickled Pears, and Peaſe, are here in plenty. And they have two ſorts of Pepper, one reckon'd better than that of the Eaſt Indies; two ſorts of Cotton, one of which is as good for Beds as Down. Here's alſo Indico, wild Sugar-Canes, Maſtick, Manchinel, and Locuſt-Trees; Gourds, Musk-Melons, Water-Melons, Lettuce, Parſley, and Purſlane; Obazberries of the ſize of a Muſquet-Bullet, that waſh as well as Soap, abundance of good Figs, and ſeveral other Fruits; a ſort of Nuts like our Filberts, which grow cloſe to the Ground; large Muſtard-Trees, which bear no Seed, but their Leaves make good Muſtard. Here's plenty of Cabbages, Caſſavy, Potatoes, and Radiſhes.

Their chief Birds are Flamengo-Pigeons, Turtle-Doves, Parrots, wild Hawks, and abundance of Sea-Fowl unknown to us. Their Land-Fowl are Oronoko Eagles with black Spots, and the Ends of the Wings and Tail yellow, Pintadoes, and Humming-Birds. There's one of an amphibious Nature, nam'd a Crane-Fowl, as big as a large Duck, is hideous to look at, has a Bag under its Neck that will hold two Gallons of Water, and lives chiefly on Fiſh. Here's an Animal call'd a Rocket, which has four Feet. The Skin is like a wither'd Leaf, with yellow or blue Spots. It leaps up and down perpetually, and loves to look upon Men. The Inhabitants have certain Prognoſticks of the Approach of Hurricanes. They ſuffer'd much by the French, during the late Wars, who inhabited a great part of the Iſland; but it was given to the Engliſh entirely by the Treaty of Utrecht.

VIII. Nevis, or Mevis, lies South-eaſt of St. Chriſtopher's, is about ſix Leagues round, and maintains about 4000 Men in the Sugar Trade; but they ſuffer'd much by a great Mortality in 1689, as it did in 1667 by a terrible Earthquake, and during the late Wars with the French. They ſuffer'd much likewiſe by a Hurricane in 1707. The Product is much the ſame with that of Antego. There's but one high Mountain, and that is in the middle of the Iſland, cover'd on the top with great Trees. The Plantations riſe from the Sea, and aſcend gradually, near the top of the Mountain, from which come ſeveral Springs of freſh Water. There are hot Baths here, as ſucceſsful as thoſe of Somerſetſhire or Bourbon. The Valleys are fruitful, but the riſing Ground ſtony. They have violent Rains, Tornadoes, and Hurricanes, generally once a Year. The firſt Engliſh here, were about a hundred old Planters who came from St. Chriſtopher's, who were forc'd to cut their Way thro the Woods, and were ſo ſcalded with the Dew or Rain that fell from the Trees, that they were almoſt mad with the Pain, till they bath'd in a neighbouring Pool. Such great Quantities of Sugar have been made here, as have laden fifty or ſixty Ships in a Year to Europe. Here are ſeveral ſorts of Lizards, and a ſtrange Creature call'd a Land-Pike, becauſe 'tis like that Fiſh; but inſtead of Fins, has four Feet, ſo weak, that it only crawls, and winds its Body like a Pike newly taken out of Water. 'Tis about ſixteen Inches long, and has a Silver-grey Skin, cover'd with little Scales. The Young-ones have been taken for Salamanders. They make a Noiſe in the Night under the Rocks, worſe than Toads or Frogs, and change their Notes according to the Variety of the Holes where they lurk. They are ſeldom ſeen but a little before Night; and thoſe that meet them by Day, are apt to be frighten'd at their Motion. Here's a pretty little Bird with four Legs, call'd a Fly-Catcher. They are of various and charming Colours. They come boldly into Rooms, and clear them in a trice from Flies and all Vermin. They alſo lie down on Planks, waiting for the Flies, put their Heads into as many Poſtures as they ſee the Flies ſhift Places, ſtand on their Forefeet with their Mouths half open, and when they ſee an Advantage, leap directly on their Prey, and ſeldom miſs it. They are ſo tame, that they will come upon the Table where People are eating, and catch the Flies that crawl upon it, or upon the People's Hands and Clothes. They are very neat and cleanly, lay Eggs as ſmall as Peaſe, which they cover with Earth, and leave to be hatch'd with the Sun; and like a Camelion, they aſſume the Colour of thoſe Things on which they ſtand or lie. Here are many curious Inſects; but we cannot inſiſt on them.

IX. Montſerrat is about thirty Miles South-eaſt from Nevis, three Leagues long, and almoſt as broad. The Spaniards gave it the Name from its Reſemblance to a Mountain ſo call'd near Barcelona. It was diſcover'd by Columbus: But the firſt European Settlement here was in 1632, when Sir Thomas Warner, who was its firſt Governor, brought a Colony hither from England, conſiſting generally of Iriſhmen. It had the ſame Governors afterwards as St. Chriſtopher's, and flouriſh'd more than Antego till the Time of Lord Willoughby. The Climate, Soil, Product, Animals, and Trade, are much the ſame with the other Caribbees; only this is fuller of Mountains cover'd with Cedar, &c. that make a lovely Proſpect; and the Valleys are fruitful, and better furniſh'd with freſh Water than thoſe of Antego. The chief Product is Indico, of which they us'd to export great Quantities to England. The Sugar was not ſo coarſe as that of Antego, nor ſo fine as that of Barbadoes. About eighty Years ago the Inhabitants built a very fair Church, and lin'd it with Cedar. They were then three or four thouſand Engliſh, Scots, and Iriſh; ſince which time the Number has encreas'd, and another good Church has been built. In the Reigns of King Charles II. and King James II. the Iriſh Papiſts traded, and got great Eſtates here. In 1667 the French, under Monſieur De la Barre, took this Iſland by the Treachery of the Savages, and made the Iriſh Governor, who was the firſt Man that ſubmitted, with his Family, and above 300 Engliſh Priſoners of War, took ſixteen Cannon, a great Number of Negroes and Cattel, and deſtroy'd above forty Sugar-Houſes, and ſeveral Ware-Houſes full of rich Merchandiſe. Monſieur De la Barre left five hundred Iriſhmen here, who took the Oaths to the Conqueror, and with their Families made up above two thouſand Souls. This Iſland was afterwards reſtor'd to the Engliſh; and by the Treaty of Utrecht, the Engliſh were to be compenſated for the Damages done them here by the French in the late War.

X. Barbadoes. This is reckon'd the chief of the Caribbee Iſlands. It lies in Lat. 13. Long. 58. is about twenty Miles from North to South, and almoſt fourteen in the middle, where broadeſt; but 'tis very much contracted towards the North-end. The Portugueſe, who diſcover'd it, came about 1624, and call'd it Barbadoes, becauſe they not only found it a woody wild Country, but believ'd it to be poſſeſs'd by Barbarians.

The firſt Engliſh Planters were Sir William Curteen and Mr. John Powel, who left his Son here as Governor. William Earl of Pembroke was the chief Adventurer. Firſt they ſow'd Potatoes, Plantanes, Indian Corn, and Tobacco, &c. but the latter would not turn to account; and Supplies from England not coming duly, they were often driven to Extremity. The Earl of Carliſle obtain'd a Grant of this Iſland from King Charles I. and it being pleaſant, ſoon grew populous. The firſt Settlement was made about the Bay of the Bridge-Town. The Colony proſper'd, and great Quantities of Indico, Cotton, Wooll, Ginger, and Tobacco, were ſent to London, from whence there came more Ships with Neceſſaries; and in 1646 it became a flouriſhing Colony. The firſt Planters of Note were Gentlemen from the Weſt of England; ſome of whom retir'd thither during the Civil War. The Royaliſts and Parliamentarians liv'd peaceably here for many Years, till the Death of King Charles I. when the former proclaiming King Charles II. who made Lord Willoughby of Parham Governor, the Parliament ſent Sir George Ayſcough, who reduc'd them, and was join'd by the moſt leading Men in the Iſland againſt Lord Willoughby. But a Treaty was ſoon concluded on honourable Articles for that Lord, who had an Indemnity for his Perſon and Eſtate, and return'd. The Government was ſettled about this Time in a Governor and ten Councellors. The Iſland was divided into four Circuits and eleven Pariſhes, who were each to ſend Repreſentatives to the Aſſembly. Miniſters were ſettled, Churches built, and the Inhabitants drove a great Trade, and grew rich.

They had Sugar Plants from Braſil; which multiply'd ſo faſt, that they ſet up a Mill, and learn'd to work their Sugars by Direction from ſome Dutch or Portugueſe, who had been there. Of 60000 or 70000 Negroes, ſuppos'd to be in this Iſland, 40000 are Natives, and very well affected; tho formerly they were ſo exaſperated by the Severity of the Engliſh, that they laid Plots, eſpecially in 1649 and 1687, when they appointed a Day to cut their Maſters Throats, and in 1707, when they deſign'd to burn the Bridge-Town, and ſeize the Forts. But they were all three timely diſcover'd: The Conſpirators were ſecur'd, and the Chief of them put to death. King Charles II. purchaſed this Iſland of the Earl of Carliſle's Heir for 1000 l. a Year, and reſtor'd Lord Willoughby to the Government. About 1685, it became a Cuſtom here to make Preſents to the Governors, which added to their Salary and Perquiſites, made the Place worth 4000 or 5000 l. a Year: But in 1703, a Stop was put to this by Orders from England, for the Eaſe of the Country: and to compenſate the Governor, his Salary was increaſed from 1200 l. to 2000 l. a Year; and there are ſome lawful Perquiſites beſides, which make his Government worth near as much again; and 500 l. a Year is paid by the Publick for his Houſe-Rent. His Title is, Captain-General, and Chief Governor of the Iſlands of Barbadoes, St. Lucia, St. Vincent's, Dominico, and the reſt of his Majeſty's Iſlands, Colonies and Plantations in America, known by the Name of the Caribbee Iſlands, lying and being to windward of Guardaloup. The neareſt Part of the Continent to this Iſland is Surinam, which lies but a day and a half's Sail from it. The Ground is in general a gradual Riſing, with ſome high Hills which are always verdant. There are ſeveral vaſt Caves here, to which the Negroes often fly from their Maſters, and hide themſelves for Weeks together. The Churches here in general are handſome Stone Buildings, and the Pews and Pulpits of Cedar. The private Buildings are not very lofty, tho the Planters are rich; for after the great Storm, which threw down ſo many in 1676, many, for fear of another, lower'd their Houſes. Yet there are ſome three or four Stories high, with lofty Rooms; but the Walls are too damp for Hangings. The Planters Houſes are more for Convenience than Splendor, cover'd with Pantiles, and their Outhouſes and Negroes Huts with Shingles.

'Tis computed that every Acre planted with Sugar, yields, one Year with another, ten Shillings a Year Profit to the national Stock of England, beſides what the Planter gets, and the Thouſands that are maintain'd out of it. The Trees, Plants, and Fields, are always green, and ſome or other of its Product always in Bloſſom and Fruit. The Inhabitants are conſtantly planting or ſowing; but eſpecially in May and November, which are the Seaſons for Indian Corn, Potatoes, Yams, &c. Sugar-Canes formerly thriv'd here in all Seaſons; but the Ground is ſo much worn out, that now the only time of planting them is from Auguſt to the end of January. Here's variety of Trees, Plants, Fruits, and Herbs, which we have not room to mention; but the Orange, Lemon, and Citron-Trees, are moſt noted, and as plenty here as Lime and Elm-Trees with us. Here's Ginger, two ſorts of red Pepper, and plenty of all ſorts of excellent Pulſe: but Apples, Pears, Cherries, Gooſeberries, Currants, and others of our Shrub-Fruits, don't thrive here. The Planters never ſow any Engliſh Wheat; and the Poor plant moſt of their Ground with Indian or Guinea Corn, which they ſell to the Richer from half a Crown to ten Shillings a Buſhel; the Dearneſs of which forc'd them to ſend for it to the Northern Colonies. Thoſe Parts of the Iſland call'd the Champion and the Thickets, are entirely planted with Corn; but many thouſand Acres lie uncultivate for want of Hands. This Iſland is ſaid to produce above two hundred Shiploads of Sugar, Indico, Cotton, and Ginger, in one Year.

The Heats here would be intolerable for eight Months, were it not for freſh Breezes from the Eaſt, or North-eaſt, which riſe and fall with the Sun: yet 'tis ſo moiſt here, that Iron will ſoon ruſt without conſtant uſe. The Sun riſes and ſets at Six a-clock all the Year round, except in October, when there's a little Variation; and 'tis dark three quarters of an Hour after Sun-ſet.

Their Land and Sea Animals are common to theſe Parts; ſo that we ſhall not inſiſt on them, but proceed to give a brief Account of its Inhabitants, Government, Trade, and Revenues.

This was the ſooneſt peopled of all our Colonies, becauſe of the Wealth acquir'd by the firſt Planters; and more Inhabitants of this Iſland have been Knighted by our Kings, than of all our other American Plantations. In twenty Years after the firſt Settlement, the Militia here was more numerous than that of Virginia is now, tho the Place is not a fiftieth part ſo big. There was then muſter'd 11000 Horſe and Foot, as brave Men as any in the World; and the Number ſo increaſed, that in 1676, when the Iſland was in its beſt Eſtate, there were 70000 Europeans by Birth and Deſcent, and 80000 Negroes; ſo that the Iſland was then reckon'd far more populous than England, in proportion. But in 1691, the Iſland was ſo depopulated by a fatal Sickneſs, that it had not above 7000 fighting Men, and 25000 Engliſh, nor above 70000 Negroes: but in 1708, the Colony grew healthier, and daily increaſed. Every Freeholder and White Servant, able to bear Arms, is liſted in the Militia, which conſiſts of 3500 Foot, and 1200 Horſe; beſides which, the Government can ſoon arm 10000 ſtout Negroes.

Thoſe born here of Engliſh Parents are nam'd Creoleans. The Maſters, Merchants, and Planters, live like petty Sovereigns, have variety of Dainties, keep their Coaches, Pleaſure-Boats, &c. and have more Attendants than any of our Nobility in England, ſome of 'em having no leſs than ſeven or eight hundred Negroes apiece, who with their Poſterity are perpetual Slaves. Their Drink is chiefly Water and Madera Wine, Lemonade, and Punch. They have all other ſorts of Wines, Malt Liquors, and Cyder, from England. The White Men-ſervants are ſold here for about twenty Pounds apiece, but for much more if they are Mechanicks; and handſome Women for ten Pounds. They are not only better treated than the Blacks during their Service, but when their Time is out, are their own Maſters; and if Britiſh Servants, they have five Pounds; if others, but forty Shillings. Female Sevants they have none, beſides Natives of the Country, and thoſe that are hir'd for Houſhold Service. There's great Care taken of the Negroes, tho they are perpetual Slaves, becauſe if one dies, the Owner loſes forty or fifty Pounds; whereas by the Death of a White Man he only loſes two or three Years Wages to another. A Slave that is a good Mechanick is worth a hundred and fifty or two hundred Pounds; and four hundred Pounds has been bid for a Boiler of Sugar. The Slaves are purchaſed by Lots out of the Guinea Ships, are all view'd ſtark naked, and are allow'd two or three Wives, that they may increaſe the Planter's Stock. The Women are very conſtant to him that paſſes for their Husband; and both Sexes, tho groſs Idolaters, reckon Adultery the worſt of Crimes. Their chief Fare is boiled or roaſted Plantanes, and twice or thrice a Week they are allow'd ſalt Fiſh, Mackarel, or ſalt Pork. Every Family of Negroes has a Cabbin built with Sticks, &c. round the Planter's Houſe, with a Garden, where they plant Potatoes, Yams, Caſſavy-Roots, &c. and they have a ſort of Food call'd Loblolly, made of Maiz. Both the White and Negroe Servants make Caſſavy and Potatoe Bread; but the Maſters eat white Bread of Engliſh Flower. The Servants drink a Water brew'd of Potatoes and Sugar, or Moloſſes, Water and Ginger, and another of Caſſavy-Root, which the old Women chew, and ſpit into Water. The Negroes, when at Work, ſupport themſelves with Rum and a Pipe of Tobacco. They are rung up at Six every Morning, and ſent out to the Fields, return from Work at Eleven, and after Dinner are rung at One, and work till Six. Both Sexes wear Monmouth Caps. On Sundays they generally divert themſelves with Dancing and barbarous Muſick; yet ſome work that Day for themſelves by making Ropes of the Rind of Trees, which they exchange with other Servants for Neceſſaries; and the Maſter allows them Ground, in which they ſow Roots and Plants, and breed Goats, Hogs, and Fowls for their own Eating, or for Sale: So that ſome of the induſtrious ones come to be worth Money, which they are ſo cunning as to hide from their Maſters. They are ſuch Lovers of Carrion, that the Planters are forc'd to hide their dead Cattle from 'em, leſt their eating it ſhould breed an Infection. Tho the Negroes out-number the Whites here, yet the Engliſh are Maſters of the Forts; and the Slaves hate one another ſo mortally, that ſome had rather die by the Hands of the Engliſh, than join with their Countrymen in a Mutiny: Beſides, none of 'em muſt touch Arms without the Maſter's Command, except the Creoleans, who all ſpeak Engliſh, and can exerciſe very well. The Engliſh Merchants ſend Perpetuana's, Guns, Powder, Flint, Tallow, and Spirits, in exchange for the Negroes. Some Planters have 20000 l. worth of Slaves; and many are undone in a Time of Mortality for want of Money to renew their Stock, which muſt be fill'd up every Year, becauſe a fourth part die in ſeaſoning. They recruit cruit every four or five hundred Acres once a Year with twenty or thirty Negroes. Every Infant-Negro is commonly valued at six Pounds. Every Plantation has a chief Overseer, with a hundred or a hundred and fifty Pounds a Year for Maintenance. The Country being not fit for Hunting and Hawking, they are oblig'd to such sedentary Diversions at home as Cards, Dice, Tables, &c. Those that drink abundance of Madera Wine here, find Sweating their best Relief. That Wine, contrary to its Nature elsewhere, will not keep in a cool Cellar here.

The Revenues are rais'd by Imposts upon Goods sent out, and brought in, and amount to about 39600 l. per Ann. of which the Crown has 10000 l. and the rest is appropriated to the Defence of the Island, as maintaining the Forts, Stores, &c.

All Church-Affairs are under the Direction of a Surrogate appointed by the Bishop of London, who is the Ordinary of all the English Colonies in America. There are eleven Parishes here, whose Ministers have a hundred and fifty or two hundred Pounds a Year; and he of Bridge-Town six or seven hundred Pounds. There's a Chappel of Ease in St. Peter's Parish.

Barbadoes trades with England for most of its Subsistence and Clothing; with New England and Carolina for Provisions; with New York, and Virginia for Bread, Pork, Flower, Indian Corn, and Tobacco; with Guinea for Negroes; with Madera for Wine; and with Terceras and Fyal for Wine and Brandy; with the Isles of May and Curassaw for Salt; and with Ireland for Beef and Pork. Before the last War it loaded four hundred Sail of Ships a Year for England, and two hundred and fifty during the War, which is more than all the other Sugar-Islands together. They export great Quantities of Ginger, Cotton-Shrubs, Lignum-Vitæ, Succats, Citron-Water, Molosses, Rum, and Lime-Juice, for England. The Goods which they receive from Great Britain or Ireland are Ozenbrigs for the Servants and Slaves, Linen of all sorts for their Masters and Families, Broad Cloth and Kerseys for the Planters and their Overseers, Silks and Stuffs for the Ladies and Houshold Servants, red Caps for the Slaves, Stockings and Shoes for both Masters and Servants, Gloves and Hats, Millinary Ware and Perriwigs, Laces of all sorts, Beef, Pork, and other Provisions, and Saws and other Instruments for the Sugar-Works and Agriculture; all sorts of Brass Ware, Lead Ware, Powder, and Shot. All sorts of India Goods and Toys, Coals, Pantiles, Hearth-Stones, Hoops, and every Thing proper for an English Market, will sell here. The Voyage hither is generally five or six Weeks from England, and six or seven homewards; but the Packets commonly make it in a Month.

Places of Note are,

1. Bridge-Town, the Capital, formerly call'd St. Michael's, from its Church. It lies in the South-west Corner of the Island, on Carlisle Bay. It has 1200 handsome Stone-Houses. The Streets are broad; and the Houses in Cheapside here, almost as high rented as those of Cheapside in London; and the Storehouses and Shops as well furnish'd. The Wharfs and Keys are very neat and convenient. The Bay is capable of five hundred Ships; and the Harbour safe against all Winds but the South and West. The Winds here generally blow East, which is therefore called the Windward, and the West the Leeward. The Harbour is defended by two Forts opposite to one another, and a Platform betwixt them, which commands the Road, and defends the Town. The Coast of Carlisle Bay is fortified by three Batteries, and a Line which runs South-east to Needham's Point, about a Mile and a half; and there's a Fort mounted with twenty Guns. From thence there are Lines which run along the Coast as far as Christ-Church, which is four Miles; and on the West-side of Bridge-Town, and all along the West-side of the Island, as far as Macock's Bay, which is about thirteen Miles, there are Lines and Forts which defend the Island where 'tis accessible; and the other Parts are so fortified by Rocks, that 'tis the strongest Island belonging to England, and is a great Defence to our other Islands and Plantations in the Neighbourhood. Sir Bevil Granville, when Governor, began a Citadel call'd St. Anne's Fort, about a Mile and a half South-east from the Town, which, if finish'd, would be the strongest in the Island.

To return to the Town: Here's a large Church with a fine Organ, a good Ring of Bells, and a curious Clock; a fine Council-House, large Taverns, and a Post-House. On the East-side of the Town there's a Magazine built with Stone, where the Powder and Stores for the Island are kept under a strong Guard; and about a Mile from the Town, towards the North-east, there's a stately House built for the Governor.

2. The Hole, or James-Town, in St. James's Parish, on the Coast, about six Miles N. from Bridge-Town, has a hundred Houses. It is a pretty Town, with several Streets, and in St. Thomas's Parish, which lies a little N. from it, there's a good Port defended by a Fort with twenty eight Guns, several Breast-Works, and a Battery of eight Guns at Church-Point. Here's a handsome Church; and the Monthly Sessions for St. James's Precinct is held in this Town. From hence a Line and a Parapet are carried on to Macock's Bay, about six Miles along the West Coast, in which Distance there are five Forts, which together are mounted with 48 Guns.

3. Speight's-Town lies on the West Coast, four Miles North from James-Town, and consists of four Streets, and three hundred Houses. 'Tis much frequented by Bristol Merchants, and upon that account call'd Little Bristol. The Planters in Scotland Precinct us'd to ship off their Goods here for England, which occasion'd the building of Storehouses, and made the Town flourish: But the Trade has been since remov'd to Bridge-Town. Here's a handsome Church, which has a fine Chappel of Ease at All-Saints, two Miles and half up the Country to the North-east. The Town is the Place of the Quarterly Sessions for St. Peter's Precinct, and is defended by two Forts with thirty nine Guns, besides that to the South, on Heathcote's Bay, one of which stands in the middle of the Town, and is mounted with eleven Guns, and the other at the North-end with twenty eight.

4. Christ-Church, at Ostines Town and Bay, otherwise call'd Charles-Town, about five Miles East from the Bridge-Town. The Bay is flanked by a good Fort on the Sea-side, and another on the Land-side, which have a Communication by a Platform. They are a strong Defence to the Town, which has one long Street, a Lane in the middle, and has a Monthly Sessions for the Precinct, a good Weekly Market, and Storehouses.

XI. Tobago Island, Lat. 11. Long. 58. is about twenty eight Miles long, and twelve where broadest. It had its Name from the Quantities of Tobacco planted here. It has many high Woody Mountains, from whence proceed about eighteen Streams, that fall into the Sea, several of which abound with Fish. The Air is so tempered by gentle Breezes, that they have a perpetual Spring. The vendible Commodities are Sugar, Tobacco, Indico, Ginger, Balm, Balsam, Sarsaparilla, Silk-Grass, Tar, &c. The Soil bears no English Grain but Pease and Beans; yet they have store of Guinea Corn, Bonevis, the Kidney and Pigeon Pea. Here are several sorts of Roots and Plants, as Potatoes, Eddies, Yams, English Roots, Tea, Cinnamon, Round and Jamaica Pepper, several sorts of Apples, Banana's, Cherries, Plums, Spanish Figs, Oranges, Lemons, Melons; but chiefly Cocoas, Macaw-Nuts, Physick-Nuts, Lignum-Vitæ, Brasil Wood, Ebony, Yellow Saunders, Cedar, Box, Sassafras, and many others. Here are numerous Herds of wild and tame Beasts, as wild Boars, Opassums, Javarises, Musk-Rats, Tatous, Agoutis, Aposta's, a Creature so in Love with Men, that it follows and delights to gaze on them, Armadilloes, Guanoes, Coneys, Deer, Horses, Black Cattel, Asinegros, Sheep, Swine, Goats, and Land-Tortoises. The Fish and Fowl here are common to those of the other Islands, and particularly the Billbird, so call'd because its Bill is as big as its whole Body. It has been several times taken and retaken by the French, English, and Dutch, but belongs now to the English.

II. The French Dominions in AMERICA are,

I. CANADA, or New France. French Authors bound it with Terra di Laborador, or New Britain, on the North, the Gulph of St. Lawrence, New England, and New Scotland on the East, Florida and New Spain on the South, and unknown Countries on the West. La Hontan extends it from Lat. 39. to 65. But the Boundaries of it are controverted by the English and Spaniards, and are therefore very uncertain: Only this may be said of it, That this Country, together with the Territories of the Natives that truckle to the French, is of a very great Extent. The French make the Length of it almost 2000 Miles, and the greatest Breadth 840; but then they reckon in a great many independent Countries possess'd by their Neighbours, to which they claim a Right. The Name came from a little Country on the North-side of the River of Canada, or St. Lawrence. It is full of Woods, Lakes, and Rivers, which make it colder than the Climate would otherwise be. The Soil produces only a little Corn, Flax, and Pulse, in those Parts which the French have clear'd. Their Forests are full of Elks, which are good Meat, and their Skin is prefer'd to that of Buffaloes. Their Lakes and Ponds abound with Bevers. La Hontan says, the Animals not common with us are, 1. Michi Bichi's, a sort of Tyger, which runs up Trees at the sight of Men. And when the Savages pursue Bears or wild Beeves, it sallies with Fury upon those Beasts; so that they take it to be a good Spirit that is friendly to Men, and therefore never kill it. 2. Red and White Bears, so fierce, that they attack Men in their Sloops. 3. Black and Silver-colour'd Foxes; the first so scarce that they are very dear. 4. Squirrels, that have black and white Streaks. 5. And wild Cats, so fierce, that the Natives call 'em the Devil's Children. The French truck Corn, and Flax, Hard Ware, Strong Liquors, Cloth, and Fire-Arms, with the Savages, for their Furs, Cod, and Whale-Oil.

The Savages are well enough shap'd, and would be white if they did not anoint themselves with Oil, which makes them tawny. They go for the most part bare-headed, and never cut their Hair. Their chief Delight is in Dancing, Feasting, smoking Tobacco, Hunting, and Fishing. Their Clothes are the Skins of the Beasts above mention'd. They wear coarse Stockings in Winter, and paint their Faces with several Colours. Most of 'em are idolatrous Pagans, except a few converted by the Missionaries. One Man has several Wives, who are for the most part barren; which is ascrib'd to their eating a certain Root, because their Husbands decline their Company when they are with Child. The young Women are very free of their Favours; and married Women are only chaste for fear of the severe Punishments inflicted by their Husbands, who mark them on the Face for the first Fault, cut a Piece out of their Forehead for the second, and kill them without Mercy for the third. The People with whom the French trade, besides those of Canada Proper, are the Hurons, the Algonquins, the Illinese, and Iroquese. They are all cunning and warlike, especially the latter. But the mix'd Breed, or Creolians, one of whose Parents is a European, are generally lazy and cowardly, unleſs animated by ſtrong Liquor, or when their Habitations are attack'd.

Their chief Rivers are,

1. The River of St. Lawrence, or Canada, which riſes, as ſome ſay, from a Lake call'd Piſcoutagami, in Lat. 52. Long. 85. at the Eaſt-end of which the French have a Factory, near another River which runs from thence into Hudſon's Bay, after joining with that call'd Albany River, which runs from the Lake Tabitibis, South of Piſcoutagami, with which it communicates.

2. The River of Canada falls into the Gulph of St. Lawrence, Lat. 50. Long. 60. and encompaſſes one ſide of the Country on the North of it like a Half-Moon, after a Courſe of above 2640 Miles, ſays La Hontan. It receives many other Rivers on both ſides, and has a Communication with all the great Lakes Weſt of it, as may be ſeen by the Map. But there are many Cataracts in thoſe Rivers; ſo that none but the Coureurs de Bois, a ſort of native Rangers or Pedlars, whom the French employ to bring them Furs, know how to trade in them, by having Canoes, or other little Veſſels, ready at the ſeveral Falls for their Goods and Paſſages. By theſe Rivers and Lakes the French have found out a Communication betwixt the River of Canada and that of Miſſiſippi.

The chief Lakes are,

1. That call'd the Upper Lake, or Nadouſſious, or Traci. It lies betwixt Lat. 49 & 52. and Long. 88 & 97. 'Tis ſix hundred Leagues in Compaſs, receives ten navigable Rivers, contains ſeveral Iſlands full of Elks and wild Aſſes, falls into the Lake of Hurons; but is unnavigable becauſe of its Rocks and rapid Stream. It is intolerably cold here half the Year, and freezes the Lake for ten or twelve Leagues over. 'Tis calmeſt from the beginning of May to the end of September; and the South-ſide is ſafeſt in caſe of a Storm, becauſe of many Bays and Rivulets. Several Northern Nations come hither in Summer to hunt and fiſh, and bring with them Bever-Skins to truck with the French Pedlars. The French had a Fort on the North-ſide, which, before they abandon'd it, did great Diſſervice to our Settlement in Hudſon's Bay, becauſe it hinder'd ſeveral Nations from tranſporting their Skins thither. There are Mines of very fine Copper about this Lake; and it abounds with Sturgeons, Trouts, and White Fiſh.

2. The Illinoveeks, Illineſe, or Lake Dauphin, lies betwixt Lat. 42 & 47 ½. and Long. 89 & 93. ſixty Miles South of the former, is five hundred Leagues round, falls into that of the Hurons, and lies in an admirable Climate, with Meadows, and fine tall Trees on its Banks, which are very ſteep. A River of the ſame Name riſes South from the Lake, and falls into that of Miſſiſippi. Its Banks abound with delicious Vines and other Fruit-Trees, Deer, Turkeys, and other Beaſts and Fowls.

3. The Lake of Hurons, Algonquins, or Orleans, Eaſt of the Illineſe, lies betwixt Lat. 42 & 48. and Long. 83 & 88. and communicates with the two former. It falls into the Lake of Erie, and is reckon'd 300 Leagues in Compaſs. It lies in a fine Climate, and has a Number of Iſlands on the North-ſide, which afford Shelter to the Canoes in bad Weather. The South-ſide is pleaſant, and abounds with Deer. Its chief Iſland is Manitoualin, twenty five Leagues long, and ten broad, whoſe antient Natives the Iroqueſe oblig'd to retire to Miſſilimakinac, a Country on the Banks of this Lake and that of the Illineſe. There's a River at the Eaſt-end of this Iſland call'd St. Francis, which is as broad as the Seine at Paris, runs about forty Leagues from Lake Nepiſerini, and has five Cataracts, which oblige Paſſengers to carry their Goods by Land. Here are abundance of Beeves, and ſuch vaſt Shoals of Fiſh, eſpecially Trouts as big as one's Thighs, about the Iſland Miſſilimakinac, on the North-weſt-ſide of the Lake, that the Natives catch great Quantities here both in Winter and Summer, and make Holes for their Nets in the Ice when the Channel is froze, which is often the Caſe, tho the Currents are ſo ſtrong, that ſometimes they ſuck in Nets two or three Leagues off. At certain Seaſons theſe Currents run three Days Eaſt, two Days Weſt, one to the South, and four to the North, more or leſs; and in calm Weather they vary to all Points of the Compaſs in a Day. There's a Ridge of Mountains that begins betwixt this and the Illineſe Lake, extends South 1140 Miles, almoſt to the Cape of Florida, and has Plains on the top like Terraſs-Walks, for 200 Miles long.

Places of Note belonging to the French in Canada are,

1. Quebec, the Capital, on the River of St. Lawrence, Lat. 40. 32. Long. 60. 40. three hundred Miles from the Mouth of the River. 'Tis divided into the Upper and Lower. The Merchants live in the latter for the ſake of the Harbour, upon which they have fine Stone-Houſes three Stories high. The Upper Town is as populous and fine as the other. Both together are a League round, commanded by a Caſtle on the higheſt Ground. The Way betwixt the two Towns is pretty broad, but ſteep, and adorn'd with Houſes on both ſides. The Situation is uneven, and the Houſes not uniform. The Governor lives in the Caſtle, where he has convenient Apartments. 'Tis alſo the Seat of an Intendant, and of a Sovereign Council, which meets four times a week at his Houſe, near which lie the Magazines for Ammunition and Proviſions. The Chapter-Houſe, where the twelve Prebendaries live, is a noble Structure. The Jeſuits Church is the like. They have a College for fifty Scholars, with convenient Apartments and large Gardens. There are three other Churches in the Lower Town, and ſix in the Upper. The Sovereign Council decides all Cauſes, and every Man pleads his own. Here's alſo a Lieutenant-General, both Civil and Military. The way of travelling in Winter is by Sledges over the Ice and Snow, drawn by Horſes or Maſtiffs, which run fifteen Leagues in a Day. In Summer they travel in Canoes. The Eaſt Wind commonly reigns here in Spring and Autumn, and the Weſt in Summer and Winter. There are two Indian Villages near the Town, inhabited by five hundred Converts.

2. The Iſland of Orleans, in the River, a League and a half North-eaſt from Quebec. 'Tis ſeven Leagues long, and three broad, produces all ſorts of Corn, and pays a thouſand Crowns per Ann. Rent. The Canal on the South of it is navigable by Ships; but that on the North only by ſmall Boats.

3. Trois Rivieres, a ſmall City, thirty Leagues South-weſt from Quebec, on the ſame River, where three others fall into it. The Inhabitants are rich, and have ſtately Houſes; and 'tis the Reſidence of a Governor, who is maintain'd by trading with the Natives for Bevers. This Place is much infeſted with Fleas. The River here is full of Shelves, and abounds with large Eels, of which the Inhabitants make great Profit.

4. St. Peter's Lake lies three Leagues higher, is ninety ſix Leagues long, almoſt as broad, and receives three or four Rivers that abound with Fiſh; at the Mouths of which there are fine Houſes.

5. Sorel, two Leagues higher on the other ſide the River, is a Canton four Leagues in front. All along from Quebec hither, which is ſixty Leagues, the Banks on both ſides the River are ſo populous, that they look continued Villages.

6. Montreal, on an Iſland of the ſame Name, 120 Miles South-weſt from Quebec, is the Seat of a Governor, who has a thouſand Crowns per Ann. and makes great Advantage by trading with the Natives, who come hither from the great Lakes of Canada with Furs, which they exchange for Arms, Cattle, Axes, Knives, &c. by which the Merchants commoly clear two hundred per Cent. The Merchants here are generally Factors to thoſe of Quebec. Every one is allow'd to trade in this Place, which is the beſt for getting an Eſtate. The Governor-General comes hither once a Year from Quebec to ſhare the Profits, and receive Preſents from the Natives. Here are Pedlars nam'd Coureurs de Bois, who export Goods in Canoes, and make Voyages ſometimes of a Year and half among the Savages for Furs; make great profit, but generally ſpend it at their Return in rioting and whoring. The Merchants here have two licenſed Canoes, on which they load a thouſand Crowns worth of Goods apiece. They are manag'd by theſe Pedlars, and commonly bring in ſeven hundred per Cent. clear Profit. The River of St. Lawrence is navigable no further than this Place, becauſe of Cataracts. There are three or four of 'em betwixt Montreal and Frontenac, where the Savages and Pedlars carry their Goods over Land above the Cataracts, and drag their Boats againſt the Stream.

7. Chambli is a French Fort five or ſix Leagues from Montreal, where the Lake of Champlain, after a Cataract a League and a half long, falls into a Baſin which empties it ſelf into the River of St. Lawrence. Champlain Lake, above that Water-fall, is eighty Leagues round, and has another Lake at the South-end, by which one may eaſily go to New York, there being only two Leagues of Land Carriage from hence to Hudſon's River. The Savages hereabouts are for the moſt part retir'd to the Engliſh Colonies, where they have an hundred and ſixty per Cent. more for their Goods than the French give.

8. Fort Frontenac lies at the North-eaſt End of the Lake Ontario, about an hundred and fifty Miles South-weſt from Montreal. It lies well for Traffick, becauſe they tranſport their Furs to the French Colonies by Water, with more Eaſe than by Land, to New York: But it cannot be defended in time of War, becauſe of the Cataracts and Currents, where fifty Iroqueſe are able with Stones to beat five hundred arm'd Men, and are better affected to the Engliſh than the French. They inhabit the South-ſide of the Lake, are divided into five Cantons within 30 Leagues of one another, and each Canton conſiſts of 14000 People, of whom there are 1500 Men who bear Arms. They have had an antient Alliance with the Engliſh, who take their Furs at New York in exchange for Neceſſaries, cheaper than the French can afford to do. Their Villages are paliſado'd, and their Houſes three Stories high: From the lower they diſcharge Arrows thro Loop-Holes; from the upper they throw Stones; and the Women and Children retire to the middle Story, in caſe of an Attack. Father Hennepin ſays, they have cut off above two Millions of other Savages, and extended their Conqueſts ſix hundred Leagues. He was ſent on an Embaſſay to them from the French Governor of Canada, to propoſe furniſhing them with Commodities cheaper than they have from the Engliſh and Dutch, and to drive the two latter out of America. They accepted his Propoſals of Trade and Peace, but would not join againſt the Engliſh and Dutch. Their Country is fruitful and pleaſant. They are ſupply'd with Fiſh by the Lake, and ſubſiſt chiefly by hunting Bevers.

We can't inſiſt on the ſeveral Nations of Savages which La Honton mentions in this Country; but can't omit taking notice that the French by the above mention'd Lakes and Rivers encompaſs all our Plantations on the Continent of America, from Cape Breton to the River of Miſſiſippi: that he propos'd to Lewis XIV. a Scheme for building Forts on the great Lakes of Canada, by which the Iroqueſe would be forc'd to abandon the Country, or ſubmit to the French; and with the other Savages in Alliance with France, would be able to drive us out of all our Plantations on the Continent. But on the other hand he owns, that the Engliſh by building Forts on the ſame Lakes, might, with the Aſſiſtance of the Iroqueſe, drive the French and their Allies out of Canada.

II. Louiſiana, or what the French call Weſt Canada, was by the Spaniſh Diſcoverers call'd by the general Name of Florida. How far their Diſcoveries reach'd appears by our Map, where the Courſes of the Diſcoverers are ſet down. The French do now call it Louiſiana, or Weſt Canada; and the Account they give of their modern Diſcoveries, by which they claim the Title, is thus: They ſay, that M. Jolivet, a Frenchman, firſt diſcover'd the River of Miſſiſippi in 1673, into which he deſcended by the River of the Ouiſconſing; but having enter'd no farther into the Country, the Diſcovery was aſcrib'd to M. Robert Cavalier de la Salle, a Native of Roan, and Governor of Fort Frontenac, who diſcover'd the greateſt Part of this Country, from 1678 to 1687. To that end he ſet out from Fort Frontenac, November 18. 1678, in a Veſſel of forty Tun, and in ſix Weeks time arriv'd at Niagara, a Village of the Iroquois, on Lake Erie, where he built a Fort, and ſtaid till Auguſt next Year, when he continued his Journey, enter'd the Lake of Hurons, and October 8. landed at the Bay of Puants, which lies between Lat. 43 & 45. and Long. 89 & 90. He afterwards came to the River of the Miamis, November 1. where he built another Fort. In December following he travell'd by Land to the River of the Illinois, where he embark'd, and entring the Country of thoſe People, built a Fort call'd Crevecœur on that River, Lat. 40. After which he divided his ſmall Company into two, and gave the Conduct of one to M. Dacan, who, accompany'd by Father Hennepin, four French, and two Savages, in February, 1680, ſail'd down the River Illinois to that of Miſſiſippi, which he ſail'd up four hundred and fifty Leagues towards the North to the Country of the Iſſatis. They ſtaid there ſome time, engrav'd the Arms of France upon a large Tree, from whence they went to the Lake of the Aſſinibouls, and from thence to the Chonſgas-Kabes, beyond Lat. 60. While M. Dacan diſcover'd the North of the River, M. Cavalier, alias De la Salle, made Settlements among the Nations who inhabit the great Lakes which ſeparate the Eaſt Part of Canada from Louiſiana, and made ſeveral Journeys afterwards to Frontenac and other Places. In January, 1683, he embark'd again on the River Illinois, and arriv'd in that of Miſſiſippi; and as he came down it, he obſerv'd that he had on his Left the River Oubache, now St. Jerom's. He viſited ſeveral Nations; and on the Left of Miſſiſippi built a Fort, which he call'd Prudhome from one of his Adventurers, in Lat. 36. Long. 96. From thence he came down to the Taenkas, with whom he made an Alliance. From thence he paſs'd by the Mouth of the River Sabloniere, and arriv'd at that of Miſſiſippi, in the Gulph of Mexico, the 7th of April, when he planted a Croſs, and engrav'd the Arms of France upon a Tree. The 11th he ſail'd up the River in a Canoe, in order to acquaint the Governor of Quebec with his Diſcoveries; but falling ſick by the way, he did not arrive there till the end of 1683; from whence he ſet out for France, and was well receiv'd by the King, who gave him four Ships to proſecute his Diſcoveries. He ſet out from Rochel in 1684. Three of his Veſſels miſſing the Mouth of Miſſiſippi, were caſt away; but the greateſt part of the Men and Goods ſav'd. He himſelf was taken ill; but after his Recovery view'd the Country, and call'd the fatal Bay, where he loſt his three Ships, St. Louis, and a River which falls into it, he call'd the River of Cows. He built a Fort, and then went in queſt of the Mouth of Miſſiſippi, which he diſcover'd by the Marks he had left in his firſt Voyage. Then he went upon diſcovering the Nations betwixt that River and the Mouth of the Illinois, with a deſign to return that Way to Canada. To which end he ſet out from the Bay of St. Louis in April, 1685, with twenty Men, and croſſed ſeveral Rivers and fine Countries, where he found People on horſeback with Accoutrements, which ſhew'd they had Commerce with Europeans. Then marching two Days more over vaſt Meadows, he found great Herds of wild Black Cattel. After ſeveral Days March thro a delicious Country, he came to a Settlement of the People call'd Cenis, which extended twenty Leagues; and the Hamlets ſo cloſe, that they look'd like a continued Village. Here he found ſeveral European Goods, and a Bull of the Pope, exempting the People of New Mexico from faſting in Summer; and the Inhabitants told them they were ſix Days Journey from the Spaniſh Settlements. He continu'd his March thro the Country of the Naſſonis; where being reduc'd to great Diſtreſs, he agreed to return to his Fort at the Mouth of the River Miſſiſippi. From thence, in 1687, he ſet out again toward the Country of the Illinois; and having croſs'd the River Sabloniere and others, came to a fine Country, where his Men prov'd mutinous, and murder'd both him and his Nephew. But Father Hennepin and ſome others obtaining Guides from the Cenis, march'd North-eaſt thro a very fine Country, and on the 5th of September arriv'd at the Mouth of the Illineſe River; from whence they came to Quebec in 1688.

Upon theſe Diſcoveries, the French King gave a Grant of this Country to Monſieur Crozat, dated September 14. 1712. N. S. The River Miſſiſippi was call'd St. Louis, and the Country Louiſiana. This Country is now given to the United French Eaſt and Weſt India Companies, the Shares of whoſe Stock, by the Management of Mr. Laws, a Scotch Gentleman, roſe in 1719, to 1200 per Cent. by which many People in France and elſewhere got vaſt Eſtates. The United Companies have ſent People to make Settlements in the Colony, and have begun a handſome Town call'd Orleance; the Iſſue of which muſt be left to Time.

Authors are not agreed about the Extent of Louiſiana. Some bound it the ſame as Canada on the North, with unknown Countries, with Canada on the Eaſt, the Gulph of Mexico on the South, and New Mexico on the Weſt. Our Map extends it to Lat. 46. and betwixt Weſt Long. 82 & 102. The Air is ſaid to be very temperate, and the Soil very fruitful, and would produce all Neceſſaries if cultivated. Here are the ſame Beaſts and Birds as are uſual in North America; and 'tis thought here are Mines of Silver, as well as Iron and Lead. Monſieur La Salle's Account makes the River Miſſiſippi eight hundred Leagues long, including Windings and Turnings. It falls into the Bay of Mexico by ſeveral Mouths, in Lat. 28 ½. Long. 93 ½. where it forms ſeveral Iſlands. The Mouth of it is ſo deep and free from Sands, that 'tis ſaid great Ships may go up to the Illinois River, which is two hundred and fifteen Leagues. It is much infeſted by Crocodiles, eſpecially towards the Mouth. The Maiz on the Banks of this River ripens in ſixty Days after 'tis ſown. They have three Crops in a Year, and no other Winter but ſome Rain. Here are all ſorts of European Trees, and many others unknown to us; with the fineſt Cedars and Cotton-Trees ſo tall, that the Savages make Pirago's of a hundred Foot long out of one Piece of their Trunks. Many of the Savages were naked, and fierce; but ſoon appeas'd by Preſents of Hatchets, Tobacco, and Knives; and they treated the French with Bevers Fleſh. This River receives ſeveral other navigable ones on both ſides; and Hennepin and Dacan ſail'd four hundred and fifty Leagues up the Miſſiſippi to the Country of the Iſſatis. When the Spaniards diſcover'd this Country, they found it govern'd by ſeveral Princes, ſome of whom made them Preſents of Silver, Gold, and rich Furs; and thoſe Princes and their Queens were adorn'd with Chains of Pearl. They found likewiſe Turquoiſes, Emeralds, Coral, &c. here; but what further Commodities it affords, muſt be left to new Diſcoveries.

The French Settlements here are,

1. A Fort erected by Monſieur De la Salle in 1685, near St. Louis's Bay, Lat. 28. Long. 101 ½.

2. Fort Louis, Lat. 31. 6. Long. 92.

3. Penſacola, Lat. 29. Long. 91. the beſt Harbour in the Bay, taken from the Spaniards in 1719.

The other French Dominions in America are Iſlands, among thoſe call'd the Barlovento and Sotovento, or the Leeward and Windward Iſlands.

1. The Weſt Part of the Iſland of Hiſpaniola, or St. Domingo. This Iſland is about a hundred and fifty Miles long, and a hundred and twenty where broadeſt. It lies in Lat. 19 & 20, and betwixt Long. 65 & 75. The Air is temperate; and the Soil abounds with Maiz, Fruits of all ſorts, Sugar, Ginger, Tobacco, Oranges, ſmall Lemons, Citrons, Toronia's, Lima's, Dates, Palm-Trees of ſeveral ſorts, Apricocks, Caramite, Jenipah-Trees, Cedars, &c. In the Mountains there are Mines of Gold and Silver; but neglected for want of Hands. Their Fields abound with Cattel and wild Horſes. Here are all the Birds common to the Weſt Indies; and there are many particular ſorts of Fiſh on their Coaſts, ſome of which are excellent Meat. The Soil is one of the richeſt in the World, and the Trees and Herbage continually green; ſo that they have excellent Fruit all the Year. Gold Duſt is found in the Sands of their Rivers. Here are ſo many Harbours, that Sailors can ſcarce miſs one, where they may have freſh Water and Proviſions. Here are many Sugar and Salt-Works, and ſeveral Rivers, of which that call'd Ocoa is the chief. The Inſects are Muskettoes of three ſorts, and one call'd Cucujo, which has four Eyes, two on its Side, and two on its Wings, which ſhine ſo by Night, that the Inhabitants uſe them inſtead of Candles. This is the greateſt Iſland of all the Antilles, next to Cuba. The chief French Settlements here are Great and Petit Guavus, near the Weſt-ſide of the Iſland, on a Bay, where they us'd to have ſome Men of War. The French Part of the Iſland is chiefly inhabited by Buccaniers and Free-Booters of ſeveral Nations, moſt of 'em French, under a General of their own Country. The Eaſtern Part, poſſeſs'd by the Spaniards, is the largeſt, and has moſt Towns: The chief is St. Domingo, from whence the Iſland had its Name. It lies on the South-ſide of the Iſland, Lat. 20. Long. 70. at the Mouth of the River Hayna. It is well fortified, has a ſtrong Caſtle and ſeveral other Works to defend the Harbour, which is ſafe and large. 'Tis not ſo conſiderable as formerly, ſince the Havana was made the chief Place for the Spaniſh Trade. They have ſtill ſome Commerce in Hides, Tallow, Sugar, Caſſia, Horſes, and Hogs. Its chief Splendor now conſiſts in its Royal Audience, or Court of Judicature, the oldeſt in America. Here is a Mint, and a College with 4000 Ducats Revenue. Here are reckon'd 2000 Families, of which, according to the Sanſons, only 600 are Spaniards, and the reſt Meſtizo's, Mulatto's, Negroes, and Canarins. The City is in a delightful Situation, with the Sea on the South, the River on the Eaſt, and pleaſant Fields on the North and Weſt. 'Tis almoſt ſquare, with long ſtreight Streets, and fair Houſes, moſt of Stone. 'There's a ſquare Market-Place in the Middle, with a handſome Church. The King's Collectors dwell in ſtately Palaces, and the Dominicans, Franciſcans, and Monks de la Merced have brave Cloiſters; beſides which there are two Nunneries. Here is a Latin School, and an Hoſpital endowed with 20000 Ducats a Year. The Archbiſhop of St. Domingo has Juriſdiction over the Biſhops of Conception, La Vega, Cuba, Venezula, Honduras, and Porto Rico. Here is alſo an Univerſity. The Governor's Authority extends over all the Spaniſh Iſlands. The Spaniards have ſeveral other Towns here, which we can't inſiſt upon.

2. Tortuga, over againſt the North-weſt End of Hiſpaniola, belongs to the French. 'Tis about ſixty Leagues round, full of tall Trees, and produces yellow Saunders, Guaiacum, Gum, Elemi, China-Roots, Aloes, and moſt of the Fruits and Roots that grow in the neighbouring Iſlands. Here are great Numbers of tall Palm-Trees, many wild Boars, and great Flocks of wild Pigeons. It produces alſo ſome Tobacco. It has but one Harbour, capable of large Ships, with a little Town, and a Fort.

3. St. Croix, or St. Cruz, lies South-eaſt from Porto Rico, Lat. 18 ½. Long. 64. 'Tis about ten Leagues long, and two broad. The Product is much the ſame with the other Iſlands. It has good Timber for Building, and Dyers Wood; and a peculiar ſort of Tree call'd Mamoa, which bears excellent Fruit once a Month, ſhap'd like a Woman's Breaſt. It has a good Harbour on the North-ſide, with a little Town, and a handſome Houſe for the French Governor.

4. St. Bartholomew lies South-eaſt from St. Croix and St. Martin Iſlands, Lat. 18 ½. Long. 62 ¼. 'Tis five Leagues round, encompaſs'd with Rocks, and cover'd with Trees. It produces Tobacco and Caſſova, and a particular Tree call'd the Canopia, which yields a pleaſant Fruit, and ſtore of pleaſant Gum that is us'd as an opening Medicine in Phyſick. Here are many wild Hogs. It has a good Harbour, well fortified.

5. St. Martin lies North-weſt of St. Bartholomew, ſeven Leagues long, and five broad; and has famous Salt Mines. It has a Town with a good Fort, a ſtrong Caſtle, and ſeveral Bulwarks. The Governor has a good Palace; and here are ſeveral Churches and Monaſteries. This Iſland is divided betwixt the French and Dutch.

6. Guadaloupa lies South from Antego, and South-eaſt from Monſerrat, Lat. 18. Long. 61. 'Tis about ſixty Leagues round, divided into two Parts by a narrow Channel. It produces ſtore of Rice, Maiz, Mandioca, Potatoes, Pine-Apples, Sugar-Canes, Plantanes. Here the French make excellent Sugar, Indico, and Tobacco. Here's a ſort of yellow Plums, which fatten their Hogs. Here are ſeveral Towns and Forts. The chief Town lies in the Low Country, is a pretty handſome Town, has many Storehouſes, and a Caſtle with four Bulwarks, beſides a Fort and a Gariſon on a neighbouring Mountain. Here's a Bath ſo hot, as to boil Meat.

7. La Deſſeada, fifteen Miles Eaſt from Guadaloupa. 'Tis ſmall, but fruitful, well cultivated, and abounds with Fowls.

8. Marigalante, a little South of Guadaloupa, produces abundance of Tobacco, and Cinnamon-Trees that are always green. 'Tis about five Leagues and a half long, and four broad. It has many large and deep Grotto's, ſome of which have Springs, and in one of them is a little River. The Rocks abound with Tropick Birds.

9. Martineco, Lat. 17. Long. 61. is forty five Leagues round, and at a diſtance looks like three Mountains. 'Tis the moſt conſiderable of the French Iſlands, and the Seat of their chief Governor. The Air is hot; but the Hurricanes not ſo violent as in the other Barlovento's. It abounds with Sugar, Tobacco, Mandioca, Caſſia, Indian Figs, Banana's, Potatoes, wild Pigeons, and other Birds. The French here are reckon'd 15000, beſides the Natives and Negroes. Here's a handſome Town, with an Hoſpital, and a large ſtrong Fort, and Caſtle.

10. St. Lucia lies South from Martineco. It conſiſts of two high Mountains, with pleaſant Valleys cover'd by large Trees, and well water'd. The Air is healthful, and the Soil fruitful.

11. Granada is Lat. 12. Long. 62. 'Tis about ſix Miles long, and twenty four Leagues round, produces excellent Tobacco, and is capable of producing all Neceſſaries for Life. The Eaſt Coaſt is ſafe, and navigable cloſe by the Shore. The Harbour lies in the middle of a great Bay, defended by a ſtrong Fort.

III. The Dutch Dominions in AMERICA.

1. ST. VINCENT's Iſland, about ſixty Miles Weſt from Barbadoes, is divided betwixt the Dutch and Engliſh. 'Tis eight Leagues long, and ſix broad; and has ſeveral Mountains, ſeen at a great diſtance. It abounds with wild Sugar-Canes, and a pleaſant Fruit which reſembles a green Cucumber. It has convenient Bays for Anchorage on the Weſt and South Sides; and produces Sugar, &c. Moſt of it is poſſeſs'd by the Dutch.

2. Bonair Iſland, in Lat. 12. Long. 68. is ſeventeen Leagues round, and has a good Harbour in a deep Bay, about the middle of the Iſland, on the South-ſide. It abounds with Cotton-Trees, Guaiacum, Maiz, and Guinea Corn; Sheep and Black Cattel. The Dutch have a Gariſon here; and there are ſome Villages inhabited by Natives, who live peaceably. Here's alſo a good Salt-Pond.

3. Curaſſaw about forty Miles Weſt from Bonair, is about thirteen Leagues round, and the chief Plantation the Dutch have in America. The Soil is even, and feeds a good Number of Cattel, which yield good Cheeſe for Conſumption and Export. It has many Plantations of Sugar, and a Town with a good Harbour, a ſtrong Citadel, and wealthy Merchants. It lies on the North-ſide of the Iſland. The Town is neatly built, and fortified. 'Tis the Reſidence of the Dutch Governor: and Liberty of Conſcience being allow'd here, 'tis inhabited by Dutch, Jews, and divers other Nations, who drive a vaſt Trade in European Goods all over the Weſt Indies, and particularly with the Spaniards of Terra Firma in Negroes and Dutch Manufactures, for Pearl, Precious Stones, Indico, Cocoa, Cochineal, and Tobacco.

4. Oruba, or Aruba, about twenty two Miles W. from Curaſſaw; but not quite ſo big. The chief Product is Goats, Sheep, and ſome Sugar, with which they ſupply Curaſſaw.

5. Saba, Lat. 18 ½. Long. 62 ½. It is a ſmall Iſland, about thirty Miles South-weſt of St. Bartholomew's, and fifteen North-weſt of Euſtache. It was formerly ſubject to the Danes, tho the Dutch, its preſent Poſſeſſors, firſt planted it. 'Tis pleaſant and fruitful. The Sea about it is ſo clear, that Stones are ſeen at the bottom; and it abounds with thoſe Fiſh call'd Boneta's.

6. St. Euſtache, or Euſtace. Tho ſmall, it has a Dutch Colony of 1600 People. 'Tis ſo ſtrong by Nature, that a few Men are able to keep off a great Number. Beſides, it has a ſtrong Fort, which commands the Harbour. The Inhabitants make great profit of their Tobacco, Fowls, Hogs, and Goats, with which they ſupply their Neighbours. There's a Mountain in the middle of the Iſland, which is over-grown with Trees, and riſes like a Pyramid. It has a pleaſant Plain round it, but no freſh Water; ſo that they are forc'd to preſerve Rain in Ciſterns. The Air is wholeſome, and the Soil fruitful; but they have terrible Thunderclaps, Earthquakes, and Hurricanes, the latter eſpecially in Auguſt and September. At their Approach the Birds fall flat to the Ground, and the Rain that precedes them is always bitter and ſalt. It was ſeveral times taken by the Engliſh and French; but reſtored to the Dutch by the Treaty of Reſwick.

The Danes are poſſeſs'd of St. Thomas, one of thoſe call'd the Virgin Iſlands, Lat. 19. Long. 63. 'Tis a free Port, a Sanctuary for Privateers; produces Oranges, Lemons, Citrons, &c. as the reſt; and the neighbouring Sea abounds with Fiſh. It has a Bay capable of a hundred Ships; and Trees, whoſe Bark taſtes like Cinnamon.

IV. The Spaniſh Dominions in AMERICA.

THEY conſiſt of two general Parts, North and South America, ſeparated from one another by the Iſthmus of Darien: The North goes under the general Name of Mexico, and the South under that of Peru; but each of them has many Subdiviſions. And tho the Spaniards have the Sovereignty of the greateſt part, there are many Nations over whom they have no Dominion; and the large Country of Braſil in South America is ſubject to the Portugueſe.

We begin at the Northern Parts, where we have,

I. CALIFORNIA.

IT lies betwixt Lat 23 ½ & 49 ½. about 1380 Miles long, and 300 where broadeſt in the North, but narrow on the South. 'Tis not yet certain whether it be an Iſland, or part of the Continent: But the latter is more probable, becauſe Captain Woodes Rogers, who was here in 1709, ſays, the Spaniards told him that ſeveral of their Countrymen had ſail'd up the Straits betwixt it and the Main, as far as Lat. 42. where they durſt venture no farther, becauſe of the ſhallow Water and many Iſlands; which is a general Sign of being near ſome main Land. And Dampier ſays, the Spaniards, in ſome of their late Draughts, join it to the Continent. Sir Francis Drake was here in 1579, and was very kindly receiv'd by the Natives in that part of the Country, in Lat. 38. where the King, a comely Majeſtick Perſon, with warlike Attendants clad in Skins, met Sir Francis, inveſted him with the Sovereignty of the Country, which Sir Francis accepted in Queen Elizabeth's Name, and call'd it New Albion. The King preſented him with his own Crown of beautiful Feathers, curiouſly wrought; and the People were ſo charm'd with the Engliſh, that they look'd upon 'em as Angels, and began to ſacrifice to them; but were reſtrain'd. They made 'em Preſents of Feathers and Tobacco.

Captain Rogers, who lay a conſiderable time at Cape St. Lucas, in the South-weſt Part of the Iſland, ſays, that Part was mountainous, barren, and ſandy, and had nothing but a few Shrubs and Buſhes, with ſeveral ſorts of Fruit and Berries. His Men, who view'd the Country fifteen Leagues further North, found it cover'd with tall Trees. The People about the Cape had large Limbs, were ſtreight, tall, and of a blacker Complexion than any he had ſeen in the South Sea. The Men were naked, and the Women cover'd their ſecret Parts with Leaves or Pieces of Skins, and look'd very coarſe and wrinkled; and ſome had Pearls about their Arms and Necks. They liv'd in Huts of Branches of Trees or Reeds, not capable of keeping out Rain, and made Fires in the middle of them. They liv'd chiefly on Fiſh, which they ſtruck very dextrouſly with woodden Inſtruments; but he ſaw no other Tackle. They were excellent Divers, had abundance of Deer-Skins, and paid extraordinary Reſpect to one Perſon, who had a Cap of Feathers on his Head. For Bread, they ground a black Seed, which taſted like Coffee; and they had others which taſted like Peaſe, Currants, and Gooſeberries, and made very good Sauce. They did not value Toys, as Glaſs-Beads, &c. but were very covetous of Knives, and other cutting Inſtruments, for which they gave Fiſh; and when they had what they wanted, would give no more Fiſh; and were ſo lazy, that they would not help his Men to cut Wood, or fill Water, for any Reward. They had long Bows with Strings of Silk-Graſs, Arrows of Cane four Foot and a half long, pointed with Fiſh-Bones, and ſhot Birds flying. All their cutting Inſtruments were made of Sharks Teeth. The Air was clear and pleaſant; and while he was here, there fell no Rain, but great Dews by Night, when 'twas very cool. This Bay had good freſh Water, and Anchorage from ten to twenty five Fathom, abundance of Fiſh and Samphire. Some of the neighbouring Iſlands had tall Cedars, with ſtore of Fowl, Hares, and a wholeſome Fruit call'd Penquin, as large as a Pullet's Egg.

II. New Mexico, or New Granada.

IT is ſo called becauſe diſcover'd ſince that nam'd Old Mexico. Authors differ much as to the Extent and Qualities of this Country. The firſt Spaniſh Diſcoverers, who were chiefly Monks, told mighty Things about the Number of large Towns, Inhabitants and rich Mines, they ſaw here; but later Authors contradict them. Gamelli, a Popiſh Miſſionary, ſays, that in 1698, he was at Old Mexico, where he diſcours'd the Governor of the New, who told him, that this Country had been but newly conquer'd; that there remain'd ſtill much more to be ſubdu'd; that the Natives are ſuch dextrous Archers, that they can hit a Rial toſs'd up into the Air, are great Lovers of Mules Fleſh, and frequently take them from Travellers, without meddling with the Plate, or other Goods they carry; that the King of Spain maintains 600 Horſe Horſe in ſeveral Gariſons, beſides Foot, to keep them in awe; that they have conquer'd about a hundred and fifty Leagues to the Weſt, but being at a great diſtance from Old Mexico, the Savages often revolt, becauſe they know the Spaniards cannot ſpeedily be ſupply'd with freſh Troops. Our Maps place this Country betwixt Lat. 28 & 38. ſeven hundred and ten Miles South and North, and ſeven hundred and ſeventy Eaſt and Weſt, where longeſt, from the Straits of California, to the Frontiers of Florida, now call'd Louiſiana. Some divide it into eighteen Provinces, inhabited by People of different Languages and Cuſtoms. Many Places of it are fertile, and produce all our Fruits, beſides others: and here are likewiſe Mines of Gold and Silver. But there are ſuch wide Deſarts, that the Soldiers and Travellers encamp every Night, and keep ſtrong Guards, to prevent a Surprize by the Savages. Travellers carry on horſeback Mattraſſes and Pillows of Leather, which at Night they blow full of Wind; and lie upon them, and let it out in the Morning when they pack them up; for they travel in ſome Places ſeveral Days without ſeeing a Cottage; ſo that upon the whole, it ſeems to be one of the worſt Countries in that part of North America.

The only Places of Note here are,

1, Santa Fe de Granada, by others call'd New Mexico, the Capital. It lies in Lat. 36. Long. 106. is a handſome Town, built of Stone, the Seat of the Governor, and the See of a Biſhop, Suffragan of Mexico.

2. Acoma, or St. Stephen de Acoma, Lat. 36. Long. 107. a hundred and ten Miles South-weſt of Santta Fe. 'Tis Capital of its Province, is pretty large, and built upon a high Rock, to which there's an Aſcent by fifty Steps cut out of it.

III. Old Mexico, or New Spain.

IT has New Mexico on the North, part of the Straits of California and the Pacifick Sea on the Weſt, the Gulph of Mexico and part of the Atlantick on the Eaſt, part of the Pacifick Sea on the South, and the Iſthmus of Panama, or Darien, on the South-eaſt. This Country is of a vaſt Extent, it being 2750 Miles South-eaſt and North-weſt from the Gulph of Darien to the Borders of New Mexico, but the Breadth very unequal, it being much indented by the Gulphs of Darien, Honduras, and Mexico, on the Eaſt. The greateſt Breadth, from the Straits of California, to the Gulp of Mexico, in Lat. 25. is about eight hundred and eighty Miles; but the reſt not proportionable. This is reckon'd the beſt, as it is the moſt famous Part of North America. 'Tis nam'd from its Capital. The Air is in moſt Places temperate and healthful, tho moſt of it lies in the Torrid Zone. The Soil abounds with Maiz and excellent Fruit. And here's ſtore of Cattel, particularly fine Horſes, whoſe Breed came from Spain; and great Flocks of Sheep, whoſe Yews bring forth twice a Year. Here are alſo Mines of Silver, not ſo many as in Peru; but work much cheaper. 'Tis alſo ſaid they have ſome Mines of Gold, great Quantities of Indico, Cochineal, Balm, Cocoa, which, with Silver and Skins much valued, are tranſported from hence to Europe. The Spaniards engroſs the Trade of this Country, forbid Strangers to enter it under very great Penalties, and even none of their own Subjects, but thoſe of Caſtile and Leon, are allow'd a Trade here. The native Mexicans are a little tawny, but well ſhap'd, dextrous, ingenious, and quickly learn the Arts and Manufactures introduc'd by the Spaniards; ſo that where they are not oppreſs'd, they live in Affluence. But the chief Riches are in the hands of the Natives of Spain, or thoſe of Spaniſh Extraction on both ſides; for they don't allow the Creols or Meſtizes, one of whoſe Parents only is a Spaniard, any Poſt, Civil or Military; ſo that they muſt have recourſe to Trade, to which they apply themſelves ſucceſsfully, notwithſtanding the Oppoſition they meet with.

This Country is divided into three Audiences, or Governments, and each of theſe ſubdivided into Provinces. We begin at the North:

I. The Audience of Guadalajara. 'Tis ſeven hundred and ten Miles long, and in ſome Places five hundred broad. The Air is for the moſt part temperate, ſo that People live commonly a hundred Years; but are infeſted with Gnats, Bugs, and other Vermin. Wheat yields a hundred fold, and Maiz two hundred; but is frequently deſtroyed by Locuſts, and Multitudes of Pyes no bigger than Sparrows; as their Olives are by Ants. Here are all ſorts of Fruit, Herbs, and Roots, better than ours; plenty of Sugar-Canes and Cochineal; and Bees without Stings. The Paſtures abound with Cattel of all ſorts, and the Woods with Veniſon, Pines, and Oaks, but infeſted by Wolves, Scorpions, and Muskettoes. Here are Pepper, and Medicinal Herbs that cure all Sores; green Stones ſpecifick againſt the Gravel; excellent ſcented Flowers; Hedgehogs that live both by Water and Land; and Mines of Silver, Copper, and Lead; and Marcaſites. The Natives are ſubtle, treacherous, and lazy; arm'd with Bows and Arrows; and frequently attack the Spaniards from the Woods, except where Spaniſh Officers are join'd in the Government with their Caciques.

This Country is divided into the ſeven following Provinces.

1. Cinaloa, in the North-weſt Part of the Country. It has ſtore of Cotton and Cattel, is inhabited chiefly by Savages, and the Spaniards have only ſome ſmall Towns.

2. New Biſcay, Eaſt of Cinaloa, has rich Mines of Silver and Lead; and warlike Natives not reduc'd, who inhabit four Towns encompaſs'd with Moraſſes. The Spaniards have three little Towns, St. Barbara, St. John's, and Ende, which they built for defence of the Mines againſt the Natives.

3. Culiacan, South from Cinaloa, has the Straits of California on the Weſt, abounds with Woods, Paſtures, and Cotton; has Silver Mines and Salt Ponds, with ſome Spaniſh Towns and Farms for defence of 'em; and there's plenty of good Fiſh on the Coaſt.

4. Zacatecas, or the Kingdom of New Gallicia, Eaſt of Culiacan, and South of New Biſcay, has the richeſt Silver Mines in the Country, and plenty of Corn, Fruit, Woods, and Deer. The Capital Zacatecas, ſo call'd from the Natives, is in Lat. 24. Long. 104. has rich Mines in the Neighbourhood, a ſtrong Gariſon, and five hundred Families of Spaniards and Slaves. In this Province lie alſo Durango, a Biſhop's See, St. Martin's, Nombre de Dios; and Xeres De la Frontera, inhabited by Spaniards for defence of the Mines.

5. Chamotlan, on the South Sea, Weſt of Gallicia, a ſmall Province poſſeſs'd chiefly by Savages, who conceal their Mines as much as they can from the Spaniards; who have two little Towns here, one of 'em call'd St. Sebaſtian, where they purify the Silver Ore.

6. Xaliſco, South of Culiacan, on the South Sea, abounds with Cattel, Maiz, and Silver Mines. Here are, (1.) Xaliſco the Capital, in Lat. 22. Long. 106. an antient City. (2.) Compoſtella, thirty Miles South, a rich Town, with Silver Mines in the Neighbourhood. 'Twas built by the Spaniards, and made a Biſhoprick; but the See was remov'd to Guadalaxara, becauſe of the bad Air.

7. Guadalajara, or Guadalaxara Proper, is South of Gallicia, and Eaſt of Xaliſco. 'Tis the capital Province of the Audience, healthful and fruitful, has ſome Mines of Silver in the Mountains, and good Timber. The chief Town of the ſame Name lies on a River, is large, beautiful, the See of a Biſhop Suffragan of Mexico, the Seat of the Courts of Juſtice, and has ſeveral Monaſteries.

II. The Audience of Mexico Proper lies South-eaſt of that of Guadalaxara. The Length South-eaſt and Weſt is reckon'd 1350 Miles, the greateſt Breadth 540; but 'tis narrow in the South-eaſt. 'Tis populous, rich, drives a great Trade, and is divided into the ſeven following Provinces:

1. Panuco lies Eaſt of Gallicia, to the Gulph of Mexico, under the Tropick of Cancer. 'Tis fruitful in the South, has ſome Veins of Gold and Mines of Salt; but yields little for want of Hands. Spaniſh Towns here are, (1.) Tampice, or Panuco, at the Mouth of a River that falls into the Gulph of Mexico, Lat. 23. It has a large Harbour, but ſuch a Bar that no great Ships can enter; yet is navigable upwards by Veſſels of five hundred Ton, which might reach the Mines of Zacatecas with little oppoſition. (2.) St. Jagos de las Valles, eighty Miles Weſt of Tampice, is fortified, enjoys great Privileges, and has a Trade in Salt.

2. Mexico Proper lies South of Panuco, abounds with Corn, Cattel, Fruit, and Fiſh: But Mr. Gage ſays, they are not ſo nouriſhing as ours; which is aſcrib'd to their Soil's not being ſo regularly water'd as ours, ſo that the Graſs is ſhort, and ſoon withers. The Climate is unequal all the Year, being hot in the Sun, and cool in the Shade, but neither of 'em to Exceſs, ſo that it agrees well enough with Europeans. The Natives complain of the cold Mornings, of the Heat at Noon from March to July, and of the cold Nights from November till February; but Europeans think them pleaſant. Here are three Harveſts in a Year, occaſion'd by their great Rains at certain Seaſons; and their Cattel bring forth twice per Ann.

Places of Note are,

(1.) Mexico, the Capital of the Province and Empire, Lat. 20. Long. 100. about two hundred Miles Weſt of the Gulph of Mexico, and two hundred and forty North from Acapulco, its Port on the South Sea. The Curious may conſult Mr. Gage for the State of the antient City, that was burnt by the Spaniards, by which it appears to have been one of the largeſt and moſt magnificent in the World. We refer alſo to him for the Deſcription of its Lakes, which together are a hundred Miles round. The great Lake is divided into two Parts: The Water of the Upper is ſweet, wholeſome, and has many Fiſh. It runs into the other, which is bitter and brackiſh, ebbs and flows, has no Fiſh, ſends forth peſtilential Vapours; but boil'd up with Salt-Petre, yields good Salt, which is a great Branch of their Trade. Theſe Lakes have ſeveral times endanger'd the City by Inundations, being ſwell'd by the many Rivers that fall into them. There are five Ways into the City by Cauſeys and Banks thro the Lakes. The Town is ſquare, and the Streets croſs one another ſo regularly, that the Plan of it looks like a Cheſs-Board. They are long, wide, and well pav'd. The Compaſs of the City is two Leagues, and the Diameter half a League. We can't inſiſt on the Deſcription of their magnificent and rich Cathedral, the other Churches, Monaſteries, Palaces, Hoſpitals, &c. but according to Gemelli and Gage, they exceed any thing we have in Europe for Ornaments, Plate, and rich Veſtments. The Archbiſhop has fourteen Suffragans, whoſe Tenths amount to 516000 Pieces of Eight, and their whole Revenue to 5160000. The Cathedral had coſt 1052000 Crowns in 1667, tho not near finiſh'd. The Archbiſhop has 60000 Crowns per Ann. the Dean 11000, five dignified Prieſts 8000 each, ten Canons 6000, ſix Demi-Canons 5000, ſix Half Demi-Canons 3000, four Curates 4000, twenty Chaplains 300, and the other Prieſts and Attendants, who are three hundred, have leſſer Salaries in proportion. The Revenues of the Cathedral are above 300000 Crowns per Ann. The King gives an annual Allowance out of his Revenue towards carrying on the Structure, and every Perſon in the Dioceſe pays half a Rial per Head annually towards it. The High Altar and its Ornaments is valued at 50000 Crowns, and the Chalice ſet with Emeralds at 11000, and the Image of the Virgin 30000. Tabernacles for common Saints uſually coſt 20000 Ducats. There's a Coach and four Mules for carrying the Hoſt to the Sick in rich Tabernacles of Gold or Chryſtal. There's a Branch in the Dominicans Cloiſter for Candles and Lamps, valued at 400000 Ducats. Here are two and twenty Nunneries, and nine and twenty Monaſteries of the ſeveral Orders, all very rich; beſides many Colleges and Pariſh Churches. But Mr. Gage ſays, nothing can be more ſcandalous than the Lives of the Clergy and Nuns. Here are reckon'd ſeven hundred Palaces; and thoſe of the Archbiſhop and Viceroy may vie with any of thoſe cry'd up by the Antients. The Town-Houſe conſiſts of nine Courts, has a large Garden, and a ſpacious Place for their Bull-Feaſts, with Places for the Mint, the Royal Priſon, and Foundery for Bells and Cannon. The chief Market is very ſpacious, has a Piazza, where the People walk in time of Rain, with rich Shops of Silks and Stuffs. The Gold Smiths Street, next to the Market, is very beautiful, where a Man, as he paſſes by, may ſee many Millions in Gold, Silver, and Jewels.

The chief Place for the Recreation of the Citizens is a pleaſant ſhady Field, call'd Alamedo, full of Trees and Walks. 'Tis common in an Afternoon to ſee 2000 Coaches here, with Gallants of both Sexes.

Thoſe

Thoſe of Quality are uſually attended by ſix or twelve Blacks, with Swords, in rich Liveries lac'd with Gold and Silver; and the Ladies attended by Female Blacks, who walk by their Coaches richly dreſs'd. Quarrels and Murders happen here frequently on the account of Amours; and if Murderers eſcape to a Church or Monaſtery, they are ſafe. Moſt of the Inhabitants are extravagant in their Apparel; and even the Black Female Slaves go as rich and gay as Ladies, and are often preferr'd by their leud Maſters before their Wives.

The Viceroy here is uſually a Spaniſh Grandee: He has the power of placing and diſplacing the Governors of the neighbouring Countries, who pay him well. The King allows him 100000 Ducats per Annum; but by engroſſing Trade, and other Methods, he commonly makes it worth a Million; and tho his Commiſſion be but for five Years, he eaſily gets it prolong'd by bribing the Courtiers at Madrid.

There are many fine Palaces, Country-Seats, and Monaſteries in the Neighbourhood, one particularly, call'd the Deſart, tho the pleaſanteſt Place in the Province, where the bare-footed Carmelites have a Cloiſter upon a Hill ſurrounded with Rocks, in which they have dug Caves for Oratories and Places of Penance, to make the People admire their Mortification. The Friars of the Order in the City come hither by turns every Week, and they live in the greateſt Luxury by the Preſents of Proviſions, Money, Plate, and Jewels, made to their Churches. Here's a Cloiſter for fifty two Monks, where the Provincial Chapter is held. They have Gardens with the beſt European Fruit in the Country, which, beſides their other Fruits, and what they eat, yields them 13000 Crowns per Annum. The Incloſure belonging to this Monaſtery is ſeven Leagues round, encompaſs'd by a high Stone Wall, with a River running thro it, and has many Mountains and Woods that abound with Deer and Beaſts of Prey, kept for Pleaſure.

(2.) Acapulco, on a Bay of the South Sea. 'Tis the chief Mart on that Coaſt, about two hundred and forty Miles South from Mexico. The Houſes are ſorry Huts of Mud, Timber, and Straw, and the Place very unhealthful from the end of November till May, during which Time they have no Rain; and 'tis as warm here in January, when the Fair begins, as in the Dog-Days with us; ſo that the Merchants muſt do their Buſineſs in the Morning. And when the Fair is over, every body leaves the Place, but a few Blacks and Mulattoes. Here's nothing good but a ſafe winding Harbour, defended by a high ſtrong Caſtle, and a Platform well mounted with large Braſs Guns, and ſmall Gariſons to protect the Ships. The Harbour is capable of ſome Hundreds of Ships; and the Mouth of it cover'd by an Iſland, on both ſides of which Veſſels come in and go out ſafely by Sea and Land Winds, which ſucceed one another alternately in their proper Seaſons. A League further Eaſt, there's a good Harbour call'd Port Marquis, where Ships from Peru land Contraband Goods, and ſell 'em privately. The ſettled Trade at Acapulco is carried on by three Ships, two of which go once a Year betwixt this Place and Manila, one of the Philippine Iſlands, and another to and from Lima in Peru, of twenty Guns, which commonly arrives before Chriſtmas with Quickſilver, Cocoa, and Pieces of Eight, ſtays till the Manila Ships arrive, and then returns with Eaſt-India Commodities. The Ships that trade to Manila are commonly of a thouſand Ton, well mann'd, and mounted with many Guns. They make the Voyage alternately; ſet out from Acapulco the beginning of April, and arrive at Manila in June; and when the one arrives, the other ſets out. They commonly carry ten Millions of Dollars from Acapulco, and make great Returns.

(3.) Pachuca. Gemelli places it ſixty Miles North of Mexico; and ſays, that within ſix Leagues of it there are a thouſand Silver Mines, one of them call'd the Trinity, where a thouſand Men are employ'd every Day, from whence, in ten Years-time, they dug forty Millions of Silver; but ſome of theſe Mines were wore out, and others dangerous to work.

The third Province is Mechoacan, betwixt Mexico and the South Sea. The Climate is hot on the Coaſt, and cold in the Mountains. It produces Cocoa, Caſſia, Cotton, Silk, Ambergreaſe, Mines of Gold, Silver, and Copper, Mulberry-Trees, Honey, and Wax. Here are black ſhining Stones which ſerve for Looking-Glaſſes, and abundance of Medicinal Plants, of which one, call'd Olcacazan, is reckon'd a Specifick againſt all Poiſons, and a Reſtorative in Weakneſs. The Soil yields a hundred-fold. The Mountains are cover'd with Woods, from whence Lions and Tygers infeſt the Country. This Province is populous, and has a hundred and fifty Boroughs, beſides Villages. The Capital, Mechoacan, in Lat. 20. Long. 103. is the See of a Biſhop, and lies on the Weſt-ſide of a Lake almoſt as large as that of Mexico, which abounds with Fiſh, and brings the Inhabitants great Profit.

Here are ſeveral Towns for defence of the Mines, and Roads and Harbours on the South Sea. The chief are, (1.) Acatlan, or Zacatula, which has a good Trade. (2.) Natividad, whence Ships go to the Philippine Iſlands. (3.) Colima, a large rich Town, to which this ſerves as a Port, lies in a Valley that is the moſt pleaſant and fruitful in Mexico, where there is a Vulcano with two ſharp Peaks, which conſtantly ſend out Flame and Smoke.

The fourth Province of Tlaſcala lies Eaſt and South-eaſt from that of Mexico, and reaches from the North to the South Sea. 'Tis very populous; and the Indians, ſays Acoſta, are free from Tribute, becauſe they aſſiſted the Spaniards to conquer Mexico. It abounds ſo with Paſtures and Corn, that 'tis reckon'd the Granary of America. Here's plenty of Wine, Sugar, Cattel, Veniſon, Fowl, ſeveral Mines of Silver, Copperas, and Allum. Here's alſo Manna, Liquid Amber, and a fragrant Gum that drops from Trees, and great Quantities of Cochineal.

Places of Note are,

(1.) Vera Cruz, or St. John de Ulva, on the Bay of Mexico, Lat. 19. Long. 97. 'Tis the moſt noted Harbour in the Province, defended by two Forts and a Caſtle; but the Entry is dangerous without a Pilot, becauſe of Rocks and Quickſands. The Air is unwholeſome; ſo that as ſoon as the Flota is gone, the richer ſort retire to the Country with their Effects, and leave only Blacks and Mulattoes. Here's but one Pariſh Church, and ſeveral Convents for Men and Women. The Spaniſh Flota comes hither once in three Years with Goods from Acapulco, being firſt brought to Mexico, and from thence hither by Land. The Barlovento Fleet, which is a ſmall Squadron employ'd to clear the Coaſt of Pirates and Interlopers, comes hither conſtantly in October. Here are great Rains from April to November; but from thence to the end of March, they have none at all: And the North Winds make the Air as wholeſome as any where elſe in New Spain. Ships load and unload here from April to Auguſt. There's good Hunting and Fowling in the Neighbourhood; but the Woods are infeſted with Gnats, and a Vermin like Crab-Lice. Old Vera Cruz lies ſix Leagues Weſt from the new one, and there's a great River with a Ferry betwixt them; but it was abandon'd becauſe of the bad Air, and is now only a Fiſhing Village.

(2.) Xalappa de la Vera Cruz is about fifty ſix Miles North-weſt, and the See of a Biſhop, who has a thouſand Ducats per Annum. The Franciſcans have a Cloiſter here, where they live ſumptuouſly, and make a Jeſt of their Vows of Poverty and Chaſtity. The Neighbourhood abounds with Maiz and Spaniſh Wheat, and rich Farms of Sugar and Cochineal, and breed abundance of Mules and other Cattle. There are ſeveral good Towns betwixt this Place and Mexico; but we can't inſiſt upon them.

(3.) Puebla de los Angelos, a hundred and ſeventy Miles North-weſt from Vera Cruz, and ſeventy ſix North-eaſt from Mexico, is a large Town of 1500 Families, and the See of a Biſhop, who has 20000 Ducats per Annum. Here are four Monaſteries, four Nunneries, and a College for 1500 Indian Children. Here's a Manufacture of Cloth, as good as any in Spain, and of the beſt Felts in the Country. The Cathedral is ſumptuous and rich, the Revenue being 300000 Pieces of Eight per Annum. The Jeſuits have alſo a rich College here; and all their Churches and Monaſteries are richly endow'd.

(4.) Tlaſcala, Capital of the Province, twenty ſix Miles North from Los Angelos. 'Tis the See of a Biſhop, was large, well built, had a ſpacious Market-Place much frequented, and a noble Town-Houſe. The Town is govern'd by an Alcaldi Major, ſent once in three Years from Spain; and has Juriſdiction for twenty Leagues round the Town. Theſe Governors, by their Tyranny, have reduc'd the Town to a Village, and in a manner laid waſte the neighbouring Country.

The fifth Province is Guaxaca. It lies Eaſt and South-eaſt from Tlaſcala, and reaches from the Bay of Campeachy to the South Sea. The Air is good, and the Soil fruitful, eſpecially in Mulberry-Trees; ſo that it produces more Silk than any Province in America. It abounds with Corn, Cattel, Sugar, Cotton, Honey, Cocoa, Plantanes, and other Fruits. Here are rich Mines of Gold and Silver; and all their Rivers have Gold in their Sands. But the Natives conceal their Mines all they can, becauſe the Spaniards uſe them as Slaves to work them. Caſſia, Cochineal, Chryſtal, and Copperas, do likewiſe abound here; ſo that were the People induſtrious, they might be the richeſt in the Weſt Indies: But they are eat up by their own Slothfulneſs, and by the Clergy, who have a hundred and twenty Monaſteries here, beſides ſeveral Hoſpitals, Schools, and other Places of publick Charity; ſo that the Indians ſubſiſt chiefly by Gold which the Women gather in the Rivers, with which they purchaſe Proviſions.

Curioſities of Nature in this Country are, 1. A poiſonous Herb, which is ſaid to kill thoſe who pluck it according to the time of its own Age, i. e. if it be a Day old, he dies the ſame Day, and ſo in proportion. 2. A high Mountain that has a ſtrange Cave, with a narrow Entrance; within which there's a large Square, with Steps down to Pits on one Side, and near them a crooked Way for a League long; and at the end of it a ſpacious Place, with a good Fountain and a Brook. 3. Another call'd St. Antonio, on the top of which there's a Rock, and Caves inhabited by Indians. 4. Six Rocks call'd Denoles, formerly gariſon'd by the Kings of Mexico. They have Mines of Gold and Lead, and a Root that waſhes like Soap.

Places of Note are,

(1.) Spirito Sancto, at the Mouth of a River that falls into the Bay of Campeachy, Lat. 18. Long. 93. It has fifty Indian Towns under it, and was built by the Spaniards to curb the Natives.

(2.) Guaxaca, Capital of the Province, about three hundred and forty Miles South-weſt of Spirito Sancto. 'Tis the See of a Biſhop, the Seat of a Governor, has four Convents of Monks, and two of Nuns, all very rich; the Treaſure of the Dominicans Church being valued at three Millions of Crowns. This City has a great Trade both with the North and South Sea. The River here is not fortified; ſo that ſmall Veſſels might eaſily ſail up and ſubdue the Country. The beſt Chocolate and Atolle in America is made here by the Nuns, and exported to Spain. In a neighbouring Valley there are many rich Towns, Cloiſters, and Churches, an excellent Breed of Horſes, and great Herds of Black Cattel and Sheep, which afford Wool to the Clothiers of Los Angelos, and Hides for Spain. The beſt Preſerves in America are alſo made here; for there are many Sugar-Farms, and ſtore of Fruit. The Creolian Clergy here are as great Enemies to the Spaniſh Clergy as the original Americans.

(3.) Antiquera, a great Town, ninety Miles South-eaſt from Guaxaca. 'Tis the See of a Biſhop, and has a ſtately Cathedral.

(4.) Aquatulco, at the bottom of a Bay that comes up from the South Sea, ninety Miles South-eaſt from Antiquera, is one of the beſt Ports in Mexico, frequented by Ships that trade to Peru. 'Twas formerly a great Town, was taken and plunder'd by Sir Francis Drake, and afterwards by Sir Thomas Cavendiſh, but is now decay'd.

(5.) Tecoantepeque, on the ſame Coaſt, at the bottom of the Bay, a hundred Miles South-eaſt from Aquatulco. 'Tis a large well built Town, with many ſtately Churches. 'Tis the chief Fiſhing Town in the Country, and is divided by a great rapid River. 'Twas attack'd and plunder'd by the Freebooters in 1687, who drove the Spaniards from their Intrenchments, and from an Abbey which is like a Fort, and commands the Town.

The ſixth Province, Tabaſco, lies Eaſt from Guaxaca, upon the Bay of Campeachy. The Air is moiſt for nine Months, when they have great Rains; and during the hot Seaſon, which laſts three Months without Rain, People are infeſted with Gnats, and other troubleſome Inſects. Here are three or four Harveſts of Maiz in a Year, plenty of Rice, Barley, Vines, Figs, Lemons, and Oranges, all ſorts of Garden Herbs, and European Fowl, beſides others unknown. The Coaſts abound with Fiſh; and here are great Woods of Cedar, Braſil, &c.

full of Lions, Tygers, wild Hogs, Deer, Rabbits, Apes, Polecats, and Squirrels. The only Town of Note is Tabaſco, or Victoria, ſo called becauſe the Spaniards obtain'd a great Victory here over the Natives. It lies in an Iſland at the Mouth of a River, on the Bay of Campeachy, ninety Miles Eaſt from Spirito Sancto. Gage ſays, that by this River the Country might be eaſily ſubdued, as far as the South Sea, which is very fruitful; and the Valleys on both ſides the River abound with Black Cattel, and thoſe call'd Mountain Cows, or Dantes.

The ſeventh Province is Chiapa, which lies South from Tabaſco, and South-eaſt from Guaxaca. It abounds with Oaks, Pines, Cedar, Myrrh, Cypreſs, and other Trees that yield good Roſin, precious Gums, and Balſams of ſeveral ſorts, Trees whoſe Fruit taſtes like Pepper and Cloves, Cabbage-Trees, and one, whoſe Leaves cure all Ulcers. Here's plenty of European Birds, and others unknown to us, good Horſes, Goats, Sheep, Rabbits, wild Hogs, and a Beaſt call'd Taquarin, with a Bag under its Belly, in which it carries ſeven or more of its young. Here are many poiſonous Serpents, and Beaſts of Prey. Some of their Serpents are eaten by the Natives, who like them as well as Veniſon.

Gage ſays, 'tis a very large Province, has many fine Cities, is of great importance to the Spaniards, and ought to be well fortified, becauſe it might be eaſily ſubdu'd by Ships on the Rivers Tabaſco and Puerto Real. It has a great Trade with the neighbouring Provinces, chiefly in Cochineal.

Places of chief Note are,

1. Chiapa de los Indos, Lat. 17. Long. 93. It lies in a Valley near the River Tabaſco, is the See of a Biſhop, and was that of the famous Bartholomew de las Caſas, who wrote an Account of the Cruelties of the Spaniards in the Weſt Indies, complain'd of it to the Court of Madrid, and get the People of this Country great Privileges, and Exemption from Slavery. It is very large and rich, and has many fine Cloiſters and Churches. The River abounds with Fiſh; and no Town has ſo many Dons of Indian Blood as this.

2. Ciudad Real, or Spaniſh Chiapa, lies about forty Miles South-eaſt of the other, is the Seat of a Court of Juſtice, the See of a Biſhop, who has 8000 Ducats per Annum, and has ſeveral Monaſteries. Their chief Trade is in Cocoa, Cotton-Wool, Sugar, Cochineal, and ſmall Pedlars Ware. The Friers are the chief Merchants for European Goods, and the richeſt Men in City and Country. The Spaniſh Gentry here are a Proverb for their fantaſtick Pride, Ignorance, and Poverty. They all pretend to be deſcended of Spaniſh Dukes that conquer'd the Country. One of the chief ask'd Mr. Gage very ſeriouſly, whether the Sun and Moon were of the ſame Colour in England as there; and if the Engliſh were Cannibals, or had ſuch a dainty Diſh as Frixoles, which is no better than Grey-Peaſe.

The eighth Province is Soconuſco, which lies South from Chiapa, to the South Sea. The Air is extreme hot, ſubject to Thunder and Lightning, and the Country produces nothing but ſome Indico, Cochineal, Cocoa, and other Materials for Chocolate. Soconuſco, the chief Town, lies near the South Sea, a hundred and ten Miles South from Chiapa, and is the Seat of a Spaniſh Governor.

The ninth Province is Yucatan, which lies in form of a Peninſula betwixt the Gulph of Honduras and the Bay of Campeachy, Eaſt from Tabaſco, and North from Chiapa. The Air is ſomewhat hot. The Soil produces ſtore of Corn, and different ſorts of Fruits. It abounds alſo with Beaſts, Fowls, Honey, and Wax; and on the Coaſt there are found great Pieces of Amber. Here are many excellent Ports, near which the Indians build their Houſes.

Places of Note are,

(1.) Merida, Lat. 20. Long. 87. about the middle of the Peninſula, and is the See of a Biſhop.

(2.) Valladolid, a hundred and five Miles South-eaſt from Merida, near the Gulph of Honduras. Some make it alſo the See of a Biſhop.

(3.) Campeachy, or St. Franciſco, lies near the Mouth of a River which falls into the Bay of that Name, almoſt two hundred Miles South-weſt of Merida. 'Twas a large Town of three thouſand Houſes when taken by the Spaniards; and had ſuch Monuments of Art and Induſtry, as prov'd the People to have been polite. It was ſurpriz'd by Captain Parker, an Engliſhman, in 1596, when he carried off the Governor with ſome others of Quality, and a large Ship with Gold and Silver. It was alſo taken by the Engliſh in 1659, and 1678. The Port is large and ſhallow, and is noted for a Trade in Campeachy Wood. 'Tis the See of a Biſhop, and the Seat of a Governor; has a Rampart with great Guns, and a Dock, and a Fort at one end, which commands the Town and Harbour. 'Tis ſtill a handſome Town, and ſtore of Logwood grows in the Neighbourhood. There are abundance of Beeves in their Savannahs, and Fiſh and Fowl of all ſorts on the Coaſt. There are ſeveral Iſlands in the Bay; and among others, one called Beef-Iſle, becauſe the Spaniſh Farmers there us'd to furniſh the Privateers with Beeves.

III. The Audience of Guatimala lies Eaſt from Soconuſco, upon the South Sea, as far as the Iſthmus of Darien. 'Tis in general a fruitful Country, abounds with good Paſtures and Cattel, and is divided into the following Provinces:

1. Suchutepeques, which is of the ſame Nature with Soconuſco. 'Tis ſmall, and has only one Town of its own Name, near the Mouth of a River that falls into the South Sea, Lat. 14. Long. 92.

2. Guatimala Proper. This Country is colder than one might expect from the Situation. 'Tis ſubject to Earthquakes; but produces excellent Balm, Bezoar, Liquid Amber, Salt, Corn, Cotton, Brimſtone, and abundance of Cocoa, with other Indian Fruits; and thoſe from Europe grow well. Here are many hot Springs of ſeveral Qualities, and alſo choice Gums. Great Numbers of Cattel are ſent hence annually to Spain. They run wild in the Mountains, where they are hunted by Blacks. Some Graſiers here are ſo rich, that they have Herds of 40000 Black Cattel, and as many Sheep. The Rivers abound with good Fiſh of all ſorts, and ſome unknown to us. Gage ſays, there are more good Indian Towns here than any where in America; that the Natives exceed the Spaniards a thouſand to one; but are kept under by cruel Oppreſſion, and depriv'd of Arms. We refer to him for the Manners and Cuſtoms of the Inhabitants, and their barbarous Treatment by the Spaniards, in which he is very particular.

Places of Note are,

(1.) St. John de Guatimala, the Capital, Lat. 14. Long. 19. It ſtands near the Ruins of the old City of the ſame Name, which the Spaniards ſay was ruin'd by a Flood of Waters that iſſued from a neighbouring Vulcano, upon the Blaſphemy of a Spaniſh Gentlewoman, who loſt her Husband in a Battel, and all her Children by natural Deaths, in one Year. Gage ſays, on one ſide of the Town there's a Vulcano nine Miles high, which abounds with pleaſant Springs, Gardens, Fruits, and Flowers; and on the other ſide, another as dreadful, which vomits out Fire and Smoke with the Noiſe of Thunder and terrible Roarings, by which the old City was deſtroy'd; and the new one is frequently fill'd with fiery Aſhes, tho it be three Miles diſtant.

The Town is mean; has but one Pariſh-Church, but ſeveral Cloiſters belonging to divers Orders. 'Tis the See of a Biſhop, and the Seat of the Spaniſh Government, which conſiſts of a Preſident, ſix Judges, and other Officers. He has as much Power as the Viceroys of Mexico and Peru; and tho he has but 12000 Ducats per Ann. from the King, he may raiſe it to what Sum he pleaſes by Bribes and Traffick. One of them, he ſays, in fourteen Years time raiſed an Eſtate of ſeveral Millions of Ducats. The Judges grow likewiſe very rich by letting Murderers and other Criminals eſcape for Bribes. The Dominican Cloiſter here is ſo rich, that their Treaſury is worth 100000 Ducats, and their annual Revenue 30000. The Nunnery of the Conception conſiſts of 1000 Women, including Servants and Scholars; and they receive none but what bring from 500 to 1000 Ducats into the Stock. Mr. Gage ſays, the Wealth of the Place has made the Inhabitants as vicious as thoſe of Mexico; ſo that Adultery, Fornication, &c. are ſcarce reckon'd Crimes. The Town conſiſted in Gage's time of 7000 Families; and had ſo great a Trade both by Land and Sea with Europe, that there were five Merchants worth 500000 Ducats apiece, and many others from 20000 to 100000.

(2.) Petapla, fifty Miles South-eaſt from Guatimala, on the ſame River, a large rich Town, the Seat of a Governor, and a Place of great Trade. The Governor is always choſe out of a Family call'd Guzman, deſcended from the antient Kings of the Country; and tho he lives in great State, is not allow'd to wear a Sword, nor to act any thing without the Conſent of the chief Spaniſh Frier, upon whom he is oblig'd to attend. There's a great Lake in the Neighbourhood, which ſupplies them with Fiſh; and on the Sides of it Salt appears every Morning like a Froſt, of which they make great Profit, as they do of rich Sugar-Farms; and hot Baths about five Miles diſtant; and by grazing of Mules upon the ſalt Soil about the Lake.

The only Port of Note here is Trinidad, or La Sonſonate, on the South Sea, fifty five Miles South-eaſt of Petapla. 'Tis the chief Place of Trade betwixt New Spain and Peru, and the neareſt Landing-place to Guatimala from Panama and Mexico; ſo that 'tis much frequented. There are three Vulcano's in the Neighbourhood, and good Anchorage on the Coaſt.

The third Province is Vera Paz, North-eaſt from Guatimala Proper. 'Tis mountainous and woody, ſubject to Earthquakes and Thunder. It rains here nine Months in a Year, and the unconquer'd Indians inhabit the greateſt part of it, and have a Town of 12000 Inhabitants. Their chief Commodities are Achiotte, Liquid Amber that drops from Trees, and is much eſteem'd, Maſtick, Dragons-Blood, Cocoa, Cotton-Wool, Honey, Caſſia-Fiſtula, Sarſaparilla, Gum Animæ, China Wood, with other Drugs; Maiz, Wax, and Feathers, of which the Indians make curious Works. Here are Trees and Canes of a wonderful height, and Iron-Wood. Here are abundance of Dantes, Tygers, and Roſs-Lions, which ſleep by Day on high Trees, Bears, Leopards, Armadillo's, Hogs, wild Goats, and Apes. 'Tis govern'd by a High-Juſtice ſent from Spain, but ſubordinate to the Court of Guatimala. The Capital is Coban, or Vera Paz, Lat. 16. Long. 89. noted only for being the Seat of the Government.

The only Sea-Port is Golfodulce, or St. Thomas de Caſtilia, on the bottom of a Gulph which comes from that of Honduras, almoſt a hundred Miles Eaſt of Vera Paz. The Entrance is betwixt two Rocks, and might eaſily be defended. 'Tis large enough within for a thouſand Ships. Two or three Veſſels come hither in July or Auguſt with Goods from Spain and embark thoſe from Guatimala, of which great Quantities are lodg'd here in July, Auguſt, and September. The Air is unwholeſome, ſo that 'tis little frequented; and 'tis defended only by an old Caſtle.

The fourth Province is Honduras, or Comiagua, Eaſt from Vera Paz, and North from Guatimala and Nicaragua, along the Gulph of Honduras. The Air is generally good, and the Soil rich in Corn and Paſturage, occaſion'd by the over-flowing of the Rivers about Michaelmas, which the Natives carry by Canals into their Fields. In many Places they have three Crops of Maiz in a Year. They have alſo ſtore of Wheat, Honey, and large Calabaſhes. The Natives live chiefly on Roots, Fleſh, Vermin, Cocoa, and a Drink made of Honey. Here are alſo ſome Mines of Silver and Gold.

Places of Note are,

(1.) Comiagua, Lat. 14. Long. 87. which the Spaniards call Valladolid. 'Tis the See of a Biſhop, the Seat of a Governor, is well built, and has Silver Mines in the Neighbourhood, which keep a Melting-Houſe always employ'd.

(2.) Porto de Cavallos, on a Bay that comes up from the Gulph of Honduras, about ſeventy ſix Miles Eaſt from St. Thomas de Caſtilia, is the moſt noted Harbour in the Gulph, but the Situation unwholeſome; and being frequently taken by Buccaniers, its Trade is much decay'd.

(3.) Truxillo, on another Bay that comes from the Gulph of Honduras, a hundred and fifty five Miles Eaſt from Port Cavallo. 'Tis a good Harbour, two Leagues broad, ſecure from Storms; and there are Rivers on both ſides the Town, full of Fiſh. The Town is wall'd, and defended by a Caſtle, and the Harbour by a Battery. It was the See of a Biſhop, till it was transferr'd to Valladolid. Here's a Cathedral and ſome other Churches. The Town has been ſeveral times taken by the Engliſh and Dutch. The adjacent Country abounds with Proviſions; and they have two Vintages and Harveſts in a Year. Here's alſo plenty of Oranges and Lemons. There are ſeveral Iſlands in the Gulph of Honduras, inhabited by Savages.

The fifth Province is Nicaragua, or the New Kingdom of Leon, South from Honduras, and East from Guatimala. The Air is healthful, tho hot; the Soil fruitful and pleasant, and bears store of Fruit and Balm, but little Wheat. It abounds with Black Cattel and Hogs; but has few Sheep. Here's plenty of Cotton, Sugar, Honey and Wax, Liquid Amber and Turpentine, with which and Silver Work the Inhabitants drive a considerable Trade to Panama and Nombre de Dios. Here are great Numbers of Turkeys, and so many Parrots, that they are an Annoyance. Whales and other Sea Monsters are frequent on the Coast. The Spaniards, when they first arriv'd here, were so pleas'd with the Fruitfulness and Agreeableness of the Country, that they call'd it Mahomet's Paradise. The most remarkable Animals here, not common to us, are, 1. A black Beast nam'd Cascu, somewhat like a Hog, which makes a frightful Noise. 2. The Fox-Ape, which has a Bag under its Belly, where it carries its Young till they are able to shift for Food. It has the Body of a Fox, Ears like a Bat, and Feet like Mens Hands.

Places of Note are,

(1.) Leon de Nicaragua, near the South Sea, Lat. 13. Long. 85. 'Tis Capital of the Country, the See of a Bishop; and besides the Cathedral, has five Cloisters, stately Houses for the Governor and others of the King's Officers, and 120000 Families of Tributary Indians in the City and adjacent Country. 'Tis well built. The Inhabitants have fine Gardens, are rich, well supply'd at easy rates with Fish and Flesh, which makes them vain and idle. They have a Trade both with the North and South Sea. It has been several times plunder'd and burnt by the Buccaniers. The Lake adjoining to the Town is reckon'd a hundred and seventeen Leagues round, and sends forth a River East to the Gulph of Darien; but is not navigable because of Cataracts. The Banks of it are well inhabited. The Spaniards design'd to have cut a Canal betwixt it and the South Sea, from which it is about fifty Miles distant; but dropp'd it. The Lake ebbs and flows like the Sea, has plenty of good Fish; but is infested by Crocodiles. About three Leagues from this City there's a Vulcano, which formerly did much Damage to the Country; but now only smokes.

(2.) Realejo, on a River which falls into the South Sea, forty six Miles North-west from Leon. It serves that City as a Harbour, is capable of two hundred Vessels, and the King of Spain's Ships for the South Sea were formerly built here. The Spaniards have Intrenchments for defence of the Harbour, and very fine Docks; but it suffer'd much by the Buccaniers. The Town is pretty large, has three Churches, and an Hospital with a fine Garden, of which they stand in much need, because the Place is unhealthful. Their chief Trade is in Pitch, Tar, and Cordage.

(3.) Granada, fifty six Miles South-east of Leon, near the Lake. 'Tis defended by a Castle, is more populous, and better built than Leon, and the Inhabitants trade both to the North and South Seas at the time of sending away the Frigats. 'Tis the most frequented of any Town in North America; for the Merchants of Guatimala dispatch their Goods from hence by the way of Carthagena, because they think it safer than by the Gulph of Honduras, where they are frequently intercepted by the English and Dutch. This Town was taken by French and English Freebooters in 1686, who set fire to it.

(4.) Jaen, a Town on the North-side of the River that runs from the Lake of Nicaragua. Here Goods are usually lodg'd that come to or from the North Sea by the River, where they unload at the Cataracts, and embark them in other Vessels.

The sixth Province is Costa Rica, South-east from Nicaragua, which reaches from the North to the South Sea. The Country is for the most part barren and mountainous; yet it deserves the Name of the Rich Coast, because of its rich Gold Mines.

Places of Note are,

(1.) Carthago, Lat. 10. Long. 80. 'Tis Capital of the Country, the See of a Bishop, and has rich Merchants, who trade to the other Parts of the West Indies, and also to Europe.

(2.) Nicoya, on the South Sea, Lat. 11. Long. 82. is a pretty Town, and Head of a Spanish District, near the Mines. The neighbouring Gulph abounds with Shell-Fish, by whose Purple Juice they dye Wool and Yarn to mix with their Segovia Cloth. They trade from hence to Panama in Salt, Honey, Maiz, Wheat, Fowls, and this Purple Dye. The Town was taken by the Freebooters in 1687, when they carried off some Prisoners, and a great deal of Plunder. The Bay is large, receives six Rivers, has many Islands, good Anchorage, and Magazines for Merchants Goods; and the Banks of the Rivers are full of Villages, Farms, and Sugar Plantations.

The seventh Province is Veragua, East from Costa Rica, and extends from the North to the South Sea. The Country is for the most part mountainous, woody, and barren; and abounds with inexhaustible Mines of Silver and Gold: and Gold Dust is found in their Rivers.

Places of Note are,

(1.) Santa Fe, Lat. 10. Long. 78. Here the Spaniards melt their Gold into Bars.

(2.) Conception, near a Bay on the North Sea, fifty Miles North-west of Santa Fe, is Capital of the Province, and the Seat of the Governor.

(3.) Pueblo Nuevo, on a Bay of the South Sea, seventy five Miles South-west from Santa Fe. The Town is two Leagues long, but unhealthful, because of the neighbouring Marshes. It has been several times taken by the Buccaniers. Here are several other Towns; but none of 'em were able to resist the Buccaniers.

The ISLANDS belonging to the Spaniards in North America.

I. CUBA, the largest they possess, lies betwixt Lat. 21 & 23. and betwixt Long. 72 & 83. The greatest Length, South-east and North-west, is seven hundred Miles, but the Breadth is not proportionable, the greatest being but a hundred and ten, and 'tis much indented on all Sides. 'Tis separated from Hispaniola, or St. Domingo, by a Strait of four eight Miles, and lies North-east from Yucatan about a hundred and fifteen, and South from the Cape of Florida about a hundred and eighteen.

Here are Mines of Gold, Iron, and excellent Copper; and Gold Dust is found in their Rivers. Tame and wild Cattel abound here, and are larger than in any other Part of America. 'Tis well supplied with Salt and Fish; has store of Sugar-Canes, large Sugar-Works, the best sort of Tobacco, abundance of Ginger, Cinnamon, Long Pepper, and other sorts of Spices; Cassia-Fistula, Mastick, Aloes, large and numerous Cocoa-Walks; and in short, all the Commodities that are in any of the American Islands. Here are Cedars so large, that Boats for sixty Men are made out of one of their Trunks; many odoriferous Trees, that yield Gum as valuable as Storax; plenty of large Vines, that produce excellent Grapes; and fine Cotton-Trees. The peculiar Fruits are Guanavana's, shap'd like a Heart, and their Taste is a Mixture of Sweet and Sour; and Camito's, resembling Oranges, the Pulp white and red, and of a sweet Taste. Here's abundance of tame and wild Fowl; large Tortoises, whose Feet are reckon'd specifick for the Leprosy, and all the other Fish usual in those Seas. A Ridge of Mountains runs thro the Island, from whence flow Rivers on both sides, which are infested with Crocodiles and Serpents. Major Smith, Governor of the Isle of Providence, who was Prisoner here in 1665, says, 'tis the best Land for so large Country that ever he saw in America, and propos'd the Conquest of it; which he thought might be easily effected by a few good Regiments from Jamaica, which would make the English Masters of the American Trade, and capable of intercepting their Fleets, which can hardly be kept together but by Help of the Havana, where they rendezvous. He says, 'tis impossible for their great Ships to turn up to Windward from the Bay of Mexico, or Porto Bello, without being separated; nor can they pass the Gulph of Florida but at certain Seasons. He adds, that they are so sensible of their Weakness, and jealous of their Riches, that they blindfold Strangers when they pass by their Towns and Castles; and have a particular Dread of the English, because of an old Prophecy that they shall be Masters of it.

Places of Note are,

(1.) St. Christophal de Havana, on the North-side of the Island, near the West-end. It has a safe Harbour, large enough for a thousand Ships, and the shalloweſt part is six Fathom. The Entrance is so narrow, that two Ships can't sail in together; and on each side there's a Fort, the one on plain Ground, and the other at the Foot of two Hills, on the top of which are Batteries that command the Town and Harbour. Betwixt the two Forts there's a Tower, and a Lanthorn on the top, where a Watchman puts forth as many Flags as he sees Ships approaching. Gemelli, who was here in 1698, says, the Castle Mor is built on a Rock at the Left of the Entry, has four Bastions, and a Platform of twelve Guns that lie even with the Water, and in all is fifty five Guns strong. North Winds make the Waves beat over this Castle. 'Tis encompass'd by a Ditch cut out of the Rock, and fill'd by the Sea. There's another Castle towards the Mouth of the Harbour, well mounted with Brass Guns; and 'tis reckon'd the strongest Place belonging to the Spaniards. Yet it was taken by the English Buccaniers under Captain Morgan in 1669, who would have kept it, could they have had the King of England's Protection. Gemelli says, 'tis half a League round, lies along the Harbour in a Plain, and is encompass'd with poor low Walls on the Land-side. Some reckon the Families here 10000. They send vast Quantities of Tobacco to Europe and the Continent of America. 'Tis the See of a Bishop, and the Seat of the Spanish Governor, who has the Title of Captain-General of the Islands, and with an Assessor administers Justice. The People are poor and lazy; so that their Tobacco and Sugar are cur'd by Negroes. It has several Churches besides the Cathedral, and divers Monasteries, with an Hospital for Soldiers with 12000 Pieces of Eight per Annum.

(2.) St. Jago, on a Bay in the South-side of the Island. It has Jurisdiction over one half, as Havana has over the other. It is one of the best Harbours in America, which made it soon increase. The Bay is cover'd by several Islands, behind which Ships may ride safe in the greatest Storms. 'Tis the See of a Bishop, has Copper Mines in the Neighbourhood, and had a good Trade, but now much decay'd.

(3.) Baracoa, 510 Miles S. E. of Havana, at the Mouth of a River, is a good Harbour for small Ships, and has Forests of Ebony and Brasil in the neighbouring Mountains.

(4.) St. Salvador, 60 Miles N. W. of St. Jago, has a good Air, which, with the pleasant and fruitful Plain in the Neighbourhood, occasions a Trade, and makes it one of the best Places in the Island. In a Valley betwixt this Town and St. Jago, there are Multitudes of round Flints of all sizes, which serve for Bullets to Cannon and Musquets.

(5.) Puerto del Principe, 350 Miles S. E. of Havana on the North-side of the Island, formerly a rich Town, and was taken by Captain Morgan and his Buccaniers. Near it are Fountains of Bitumen, which serves instead of Pitch, and the Natives use it in Medicines.

(6.) Santa Cruz, at the bottom of Matanca's Bay, 100 Miles E. of Havana, where the Dutch Adm. Heyn took the Spanish Plate-Fleet in 1618.

II. Hispaniola, or St. Domingo, which is already describ'd, Page 249.

III. Porto Rico, alias Monico and Boriquen, sixty Miles East from Hispaniola, Lat. 19. Long. 65. is about thirty Leagues long, and twenty broad. The Climate is hot, but refresh'd with Breezes some part of the Day; after which falls a Dew that proves fatal to Strangers. It produces Gold, Silver, Quicksilver, Tin, Lead, and Azure. There is a Ridge of Mountains in the middle, from whence Rivers flow on both sides. It rains here generally betwixt May and August. There are dreadful Hurricanes about the beginning of August; and the North Winds damage their Plants. Here are Trees that yield excellent Gums which are good against Lameness, fresh Wounds, and Bruises, and preserve the Keels of Ships from Worms. Here's also speckled Wood; and Cassia-Fistula, Pines, Mammies which bear a good Fruit; Guiavo's, Papays, and black and white Plums, all four good against Fluxes. Here are also wild Grapes, Plantanes, Cocoa's, Palmettoes, Figs, Pomegranates, Pome-citrons, Lemons, Oranges, Musk-Melons, Ginger, Pepper, Sugar, Cassavi, Maiz, and Rice.

Portobel

Here's plenty of large Beeves, whoſe Hides are their chief Commodity, Hogs, Horſes, wild and tame Fowl, and Veniſon.

The chief Town is Porto Rico; which has a good Harbour; and tho very ſtrong, was taken by the Earl of Cumberland in 1596, who would have kept it as a Key to the Treaſures of the Weſt Indies; but half his Men were carried off by Fluxes. The Dutch took it in 1615. Since which the Spaniards have added to the Fortifications, and the Harbour is defended by two Caſtles. This Town is the See of a Biſhop, and the Seat of a Spaniſh Governor. Here's no Water but Rain, kept in Ciſterns.

Aquada is another Town here, with a good Harbour; where the Galleons, &c. that come from Spain, ſtop, and take in freſh Water and Proviſions.

SOUTH AMERICA,

JOINS to the North by the Iſthmus of Panama, or Darien, and reaches to the Straits of Magellan on the South. 'Twas diſcover'd by Columbus in his third Voyage. Anno 1591, Peter Alanſa made further Diſcoveries. Vincent Pinſon went afterwards as far the Equinoctial. And at laſt Americus Veſpucius made four Voyages thither, by Orders of Ferdinand of Caſtile, and Emanuel of Portugal; ſo that America had its Name from him. Francis Pizzaro diſcover'd and conquer'd Peru, and took their King Atabalipa. Goncales Pizzaro diſcover'd the River of Amazons. Magellan and Le Maire diſcover'd the Straits which bear their Names, and ſailed round the Coaſts of this great Peninſula.

South America lies betwixt South Lat. 56 ½. and North Lat. 9. So that the Length, South and North, is about 3940 Miles. The Longitude is Weſt from London, betwixt 35 & 85. The Breadth is unequal, being contracted both on the North and South; the greateſt, betwixt the South Sea to Cape St. Auguſtin in Braſil, being about 1920.

'Tis divided into ſeven Great Parts, or Countries, viz. Terra Firma, Peru, Chili, Terra Magellanica, the Province of La Plata, that of the Amazons, and Braſil, which belongs to the the Portugueſe.

I. TERRA FIRMA.

WHICH is the moſt Northerly Country of South America, and one of the moſt conſiderable Parts. 'Twas called ſo by Columbus in his third Voyage, becauſe he then firſt diſcover'd the Continent. It extends from North Lat. 13. to South Lat. 2.

The Air is hot, but healthful, except where the Country is marſhy. 'Tis very rich, and fruitful in many Places, but obnoxious to Pirates. It has ſome Mountains, which are a Branch of the Cordillera's. 'Tis divided into the following Audiences, or Governments:

I. That of Panama, or Terra Firma, properly ſo called. It takes up the Iſthmus betwixt North and South America. The Air is hot, and unhealthful becauſe of the numerous Marſhes. 'Tis full of Mountains and Woods; for the moſt part barren, and ill inhabited: Yet the People are rich, becauſe the Gold and Silver, &c. of Peru are landed here at Panama, and tranſported from thence to Spain by Porto Bello, where Goods from Europe are unloaded, and from thence tranſported to Panama by Land-Carriage for the River of Chagre, and from thence to Peru by Sea.

Places of Note are,

1. New Panama the Capital, ſo call'd to diſtinguiſh it from the Old Town, which lies in the Neighbourhood, and was a conſiderable Place, but deſtroy'd by Sir Henry Morgan and his Buccaniers in 1670, and when rebuilt, having afterwards ſuffer'd by accidental Fires, nothing of it now remains but the Cathedral, and ſome Houſes for the meaner ſort: upon which the Inhabitants remov'd, and built the preſent Town. It lies in North Lat. 10. Weſt Long. 84. is well built, about a Mile and a half long, and one broad; is well fortified after the Spaniſh Way, has a good Gariſon; is the Seat of a Royal Audience, and is the See of a Biſhop Suffragan of Lima. The Harbour is commodious at high Tides; but the Ships at other times lie dry, and in Winter are oblig'd to retire to Porto Perico, two Leagues further Eaſt. The Town flouriſhes by its great Trade, and has a conſiderable Number of Churches and Convents.

2. Porto Bello, on the North Sea, North Lat. 11. Long. 76. was rais'd from the Ruins of Nombre de Dios, which lies near it to the Eaſt. The Harbour is large, defended by two ſtrong Caſtles, and is much frequented, becauſe the Spaniſh Fleets for Peru and Chili land here with European Goods. The Town is not very large; but is populous and rich, becauſe of the ſaid Trade, and the great Fairs which are kept here.

3. Darien is a ſmall Town on the Weſt-ſide of the Gulph, and twenty Miles South from the Mouth of it, and gives Name to the Iſthmus and Gulph; at the Mouth of which the Scots built a Fort, and made a Settlement in 1698, by which they deſign'd to have open'd a Communication and Trade with the South Sea, for which it lies very commodious: But for the Reaſons why that Deſign miſcarried, we refer to the Hiſtory of the Times. There are ſeveral Iſlands on both ſides this Iſthmus. Thoſe on the North are call'd the Samballoes, and very convenient for Anchorage, Wood, and Water; on which account they are much frequented by Privateers. Thoſe on the South-ſide, in the Bay of Panama, are the Iſlands of Pearls, ſo call'd from a Pearl-Fiſhing; and ſome others, that we have not room to inſiſt upon.

II. The Audience of Santta Fe, lies Eaſt from the Iſthmus, and contains the three following Governments:

1. The New Kingdom of Granada, which the Natives call Bogotta, was nam'd Golden Caſtile by Ferdinand of Spain, becauſe it abounds with Mines of Gold and Silver, and alſo produces Emeralds. It has plenty of Maiz and Fruit, and ſtore of Cattle.

The chief Towns are,

(1.) Santta Fe de Bogotta, the Capital, North Lat. 4. Weſt Long. 69. It lies near the River Pati, is populous, the Seat of a Royal Audience, and of an Archbiſhop, whoſe Suffragans are the Biſhops of St. Martha, Carthagena, and Popayan.

(2.) Tunia, a ſtrong Town, of good Trade, eighty Miles North-eaſt of Santta Fe.

(3.) St. Agatha, noted for its Silver Mines.

(4.) La Vittoria de los Remedios, a hundred and ſeventy five Miles North-weſt of Santta Fe, noted for its Gold Mines, which conſtantly employ twelve or fifteen thouſand Negroes.

(5.) La Trinidad, ſixty Miles North-weſt of Santta Fe, famous for a rich Mine of Emeralds; from whence an Indian brought one of ſo great a Value to Philip II. of Spain, that his Goldſmiths knew not what Price to ſet upon it. It was put into the Treaſury of the Eſcurial, and the Indian had his Liberty and a large Reward. This Country was diſcover'd and conquer'd by Gonſale Ximenes of Granada in Spain, who found here, as it is ſaid, 250000 Peſo's of pure Gold, and 1800 Emeralds of different ſizes; and Ferdinand Cortez found here ſome Years after five Emeralds of ſo great Value, that one of 'em was ſold to a Genoeſe Lapidary for 40000 Ducats.

2. The Province of New Carthagena lies North from Santta Fe. 'Tis in general a moiſt and unhealthful Country; but rich, becauſe of its Gold, Emeralds and excellent Balm. 'Tis nam'd from its Capital on the Gulph of Mexico, Lat. 11. Long. 75. and is call'd Carthagena la Inda, to diſtinguiſh it from others. It lies in a Peninſula, join'd to the Continent by a Cauſey of two hundred and fifty Paces. 'Tis not large, but well built and fortify'd, and has a commodious well-frequented Harbour, cover'd by an Iſland at the Entry, which is alſo fortified. 'Tis reckon'd one of the beſt Spaniſh Towns in America, is the See of a Biſhop Suffragan of Santta Fe de Bogotta, and the Place where the Spaniſh Galleons land part of their Goods before they go to Porto Bello. It was taken by Sir Francis Drake about 1585, and by the French, under Monſieur Pointi in 1697, who found a Booty here of eight or ten Millions. Other Towns in this Province are St. Jago de Tolu, fifty two Miles South from Carthagena, famous for its excellent Balm; St. Maria; St. Cruz de Maupez; St. Jago de los Cavalleros; La Conception; and St. Sebaſtian de Buenaviſta, upon the Gulph of Darien.

3. The Province of St. Martha is much like that of Carthagena, from which it lies North, upon the Coaſt, but has more Braſil Wood; in which, with its Gold and Emeralds, it drives a conſiderable Trade.

The

The chief Towns are,

(1.) St. Martha, at the Mouth of the River on the Coaſt, a hundred and ſixty Miles North-eaſt of Carthagena. 'Tis a handſome Town, the See of a Biſhop Suffragan of Santa Fe, and has a commodious Harbour, with a Pearl-Fiſhing in the Neighbourhood.

(2.) Baranca, near the Mouth of St. Magdalen River, ſixty Miles South-weſt of St. Martha, is ſmall, has a good Trade and a commodious Harbour.

III. The Audience of St. Domingo lies Eaſt from that of Santa Fe, and is divided into the ſix following Governments:

1. That of Rio de la Hacha, which lies Eaſt from St. Martha. 'Tis ſmall, but fruitful; and very rich in Gold, Precious Stones, and Salt.

The chief Towns are,

(1.) La Hacha, the Capital, at the Mouth of the River, a hundred and five Miles Eaſt of St. Martha. 'Tis a pretty Town on a Hill, has a very good Harbour, and was taken by Sir Francis Drake in 1585.

(2.) Raucheria, fifteen Miles North-eaſt of La Hacha, has a ſmall Harbour, and a good Pearl-Fiſhing.

2. The Government of Venezuela lies Eaſt of La Hacha. 'Tis a very pleaſant Country, and fruitful in Wheat and Maiz; and abounds with Cattel, Tobacco, and the beſt Cocoa in the World. 'Tis divided from Rio de la Hacha by a Bay.

The chief Towns are,

(1.) Venezuela, alias Cora, the Capital, Lat. 11. Long. 66. The Name ſignifies Little Venice, becauſe 'tis ſituate upon ſeveral little Iſlands like that City. It has been often pillag'd by Freebooters; but is a pretty Town, the See of a Biſhop Suffragan of St. Domingo.

(2.) Curraccas, on the Gulph of Cubagua, is a large rich Town, and Capital of its Diſtrict, which produces the beſt Cocoa.

(3.) Guiare, is a ſmall open Town; but defended by a good Fort, and has a rich Pearl-Fiſhery.

3. The Government of New Andaluſia lies Eaſt of Venezuela. Some confound it with Paria. 'Tis not much peopled by the Spaniards, and little of it known but the Coaſt. The River Oronoko, which forms ſeveral Iſlands at its Mouth, where it falls into the North Sea, is the only River of Note here. The Spaniards have ſtore of Tobacco, Salt, and Pearls from this Country. Its chief Town is Comana, or New Cordova, on the Gulph of Cubagua. 'Tis very ſtrong; and has always made a good Defence againſt the Buccaniers.

4. The Government of Paria lies South from New Andaluſia, and has its Name from the River which croſſes it. 'Tis little known, and inhabited only by Savages, who live in Woods and Huts.

5. Guiana Government lies South from the Province of the Amazons, and North from Caribana. 'Tis as little known as Paria. What ſome Authors have ſaid of its pretended Capital Manoa el Dorado, and of its Lake Parima under the Equator, is by modern Travellers rejected as a Fable.

6. The Government of Caribana lies North of Guiana on the Sea, and has its Name from the Caribbees, who retir'd thither after being drove from the Barlovento Iſlands by the Spaniards. This Country is little known, except ſome Places on the Coaſt, where the Engliſh, Dutch, and French made ſome Settlements. The Engliſh and French have abandon'd theirs for want of being ſupported; tho Mr. Harcourt, in his Voyage, ſays, it might have been ſo manag'd, as to bring the Engliſh as much Profit as the Spaniards have from their richeſt Mines. The Dutch have a Settlement here at Surinam, near a River of the ſame Name, Lat. 4. Long. 56. which falls into the North Sea. The Town is ſmall, and built on a Height almoſt encompaſs'd with Moraſſes, which makes the Air unwholeſome. 'Tis however very populous. The Dutch Weſt-India Company employ abundance of Negroes in curing Sugar and Tobacco here, and drive a conſiderable Trade with Curaſſaw, &c. It was firſt taken by the French in 1640, and afterwards by the Engliſh, who in 1667 yielded it to the Dutch by the Treaty of Breda; ſince which they have made it very ſtrong, and rais'd two good Forts at the Mouths of two neighbouring Rivers.

The French have a Settlement on the Iſle of Cayenne on this Coaſt, Lat. 5. Long. 52. from whence they were ſeveral times expell'd by the Dutch: But in 1676 it was retaken by the French, and continues in their Hands. It has a pretty Town of about three hundred Houſes, moſt of which have Gardens. 'Tis defended by a Fort that commands the Town and Harbour, which has good Anchorage, and is protected by a Battery.

Iſlands belonging to the Spaniards on this Coaſt, and reckon'd part of the Sotovento's, or Leeward Iſlands, are,

1. Cubagua, Lat. 11. It had once ſuch a Pearl-Fiſhing, that the King of Spain had 15000 Ducats per Annum for his Fifth. Captain Parker landed upon it in 1601, and had five hundred Pound weight of Pearl for the Ranſom of ſome Priſoners that he took here and at Margarita. The Spaniards had then a good Town upon it, call'd New Cadiz; but abandon'd it on the Failure of the Pearl-Fiſhing.

2. Margarita, North of Cubagua, ſixteen Leagues long, and eight broad, had its Name from the Pearls found here: But the Spaniards ruin'd the Fiſhery by their greedineſs in catching young ones, and their Cruelty to the Negroes whom they employ'd in it. The Soil produces Maiz, and ſtore of Salt; but has no Trees, nor freſh Water but what they bring from the Continent, or ſave by Rain. The Spaniards have a Town and ſome Forts; but the Natives are moſt numerous.

3. Trinidad, the moſt Eaſterly of the Sotovento Iſlands, lies off of the Mouth of the River Oronoko. 'Tis about twenty five Leagues long, and eighteen broad. The Air is very unwholeſome. It produces Sugar, Cotton, the beſt ſort of Tobacco, ſtore of Fruit and Cattel, plenty of Pitch, and has ſeveral Veins of Gold and other Metals. St. Joſeph, upon a Bay in the Weſt-ſide of the Iſland, is the only Town here.

II. PERU,

IS bounded on the North with Terra Firma, on the Eaſt with the Country of the Amazons and Rio de la Plata, on the South with Terra Magellanica, or Chili, and on the Weſt with the South Sea. It extends almoſt from the Equator to the Tropick of Capricorn.

'Tis reckon'd the richeſt Country in the Univerſe, becauſe of its many Gold and Silver Mines; and South America is ſometimes from hence call'd Peruviana. The Air is commonly hot and unhealthful, except in the Mountains, where 'tis extreme cold, becauſe of the great Snows and Rains that commonly fall there. The Soil is very dry and ſandy in the Plains; but the Valleys are water'd with ſeveral little Rivers, which render them very fertile, eſpecially in Fruits and Cattel. They have abundance of Game, Fowl, Parrots, and ſome Lions. Their Sheep are extremely large, and often ſerve to carry their Burdens. Their Fleſh is very tender, and their Wool fine. The Valleys produce a great deal of Corn and Maiz, Sugar-Canes, Cotton, and a Plant call'd Coca, whoſe Leaf, held in the Mouth, allays Hunger and Thirſt. 'Tis alſo ſaid, that the Vine produces excellent Grapes here, when 'tis planted on the ſides of hot Valleys; but the Climate is ſo bad for Horſes, that it kills all that are brought hither from Europe in two Months. 'Tis very liable to Earthquakes. 'Tis not populous in proportion to its Extent. It was ſubject for about four hundred Years to Kings call'd Incas, till 1533, when it was ſubdu'd by Pizaro the Spaniard, who diſcover'd it in 1525. 'Tis ſaid, that at his Arrival he found Gold ſo plenty, that all their Kitchen Utenſils, and even their Houſes were cover'd with that Metal; that one of their Incas, whom Pizaro took Priſoner, offer'd for his Ranſom as much Gold as he cou'd ſtore up in a Hall twenty two Foot long, ſeventeen broad, and high in proportion. The Incas had all the Animals and Plants that could be imagin'd, in Gold; and when they built Temples, adorn'd them with a great many Statues of pure Gold, and an infinite Number of precious Stones; but they were demoliſh'd and plunder'd by the Spaniards.

The Inhabitants, eſpecially near the Line, are of very little Stature, and ſwarthy. They have a ſimple Aſpect, but are no Fools, eſpecially thoſe that live on the Mountains, who are great Diſſemblers, treacherous, inconſtant, and ſluggiſh. The Women are handſome, ſomewhat fairer than the Men, are great Pains-takers, and the honeſteſt Women in America. Thoſe who are more immediately under the Dominion of the Spaniards, profeſs Chriſtianity; but thoſe on the Mountains, &c. are Idolaters. There's no noted River in Peru, but a great many Mountains; the chief of which are the Andes, Cordillera's, or Sierra Nevada's, which run thro the whole Country, and are reckon'd the higheſt in the World.

The Spaniards have a Viceroy here, three Royal Audiences, and two Archbiſhopricks, viz. Lima and Plata. Under the former are the Biſhopricks of Cuſco, Quito, Arequipa, Truxillo, Guamanga, Panama in Terra Firma, St. Jago, and Conception in Chili. Under La Plata are Paz, or Chuquiaca, St. Michael d'Elſtero in Tucaman, part of the Audience of La Plata, St. Cruz de la Sierra, La Nueva, or Barranca, Trinidad, Buenos, Ayres, Aſſumption on La Plata River, and Aſſumption on the Uraguay.

I. The firſt Audience is Lima, or Los Reyes, which has the Audience of Quito on the North, and La Plata on the South. The Soil is in general pretty fruitful, and contains Mines of Gold, Silver, and Quickſilver, rich Salt-Pits, and ſeveral Juriſdictions, or particular Governments.

1. The chief Town is Lima, or Los Reyes, Long. 75. Lat. 13. Capital of all Peru. The Town is very large, handſome, populous, rich, the Seat of the Viceroy of Peru, of an Archbiſhop, of an Univerſity, and of the Royal Audience. It lies at the Mouth of the little River Lima in the South Sea, about two Leagues from Callao, which is its Harbour, and contains ſix hundred Spaniſh Families, ſays Du Pleſſis, beſides Indian Negroes. The Harbour is pretty well fortify'd, and defended by two Caſtles which command it. 'Tis large and ſafe; and every February, that call'd the Armadilla Fleet ſails from hence to Arica in the Province of Los Charcas, and returns about the end of March with Gold and Silver from Potoſi, and other Mines in that Country. All this Treaſure is put aſhore at the Port of Lima, carried up to the Town, and tranſported from thence in the beginning of May to Panama. Lima is very ſubject to Earthquakes; and in October, 1619, there was one, by which five hundred Houſes were over-turn'd, and moſt of the reſt damag'd.

2. Cuſco, four hundred Miles South-eaſt from Lima, Lat. 14. Long. 69. It was formerly the Capital of Peru, and the Reſidence of its Inca's, or Kings. Tis encompaſs'd with Mountains, water'd by two ſmall Rivers, and divided into two great Parts, call'd Havan Cuſco and Ozen Cuſco. 'Tis the See of a Biſhop Suffragan to Lima, and has the fineſt Square of all the Towns in America. Its Houſes are alſo well built, and it has eight Pariſhes, with four Convents, a Nunnery, and a fair College of Jeſuits.

II. The

II. The ſecond Audience is Quito. It comprehends Popayan, Quito Proper, the Country of Quixos, and that of Pacamores. Popayan lies to the South and South-weſt of Terra Firma; but 'tis a barren Country, and of little Note. Its Capital, North Lat. 3. Long. 73. is of the ſame Name, and a Biſhoprick Suffragan to St. Fe de Bogota. Quito Proper is a fruitful Province, and has ſome Mines of Gold, Silver, Quickſilver, and Iron, eſpecially about Cuenca. The chief Town is of the ſame Name, South Lat. 1. Long. 76. 'Twas formerly one of the chief Towns of Peru; but at preſent 'tis very much decay'd, and is only conſiderable for its Royal Audience, and Biſhoprick Suffragan to Lima. Puerto Vejo, on the Coaſt, South Lat. 1. Long. 79. two hundred and twenty Miles South-weſt from Quito, is noted for a Mine of Emeralds in its Neighbourhood. Guiaquil, South Lat. 3. Long. 76. lies on a River which falls into a Bay of its own Name, which is navigable ſeveral Leagues up the Country. 'Tis the Sea-Port of Quito; and the Merchants of Lima ſometimes ſend their Money hither in Barks, to be tranſported from hence to Panama. The Spaniards build their great Ships for the South Sea here. 'Tis defended by ſeveral Forts, with a Communication betwixt them by a Cover'd Way. 'Tis the Metropolis of its Province, about a Mile and a half long, and divided by the River, over which there's a wooden Bridge of half a Mile long. The chief Trade of Export is in Cocoa's, Hides, Tallow, Sarſaparilla, Drugs, Woollen Cloth, Rice, Cotton, dried Beef, and Timber, Salt, and Salt-Fiſh. It has five Churches, and ſeveral Monaſteries, and a ſubordinate Court of Inquiſition. The River is navigable a great way up in the Country. It was taken and plunder'd by the French Buccaniers in 1686, and by Captain Rogers in 1709. The Country of Quixos has Baeza for its Capital, South Lat. 2. Long. 74. ſixty Miles South-eaſt of Quito, near which is the Fountain of the Amazons River. The Province of Pacamores has ſome Mines of Gold, but no Town of great Note.

III. The third Audience is La Plata, or Los Charcas, in the South Parts of Peru. It contains the Provinces of Los Charcas and Tucuman. The former abounds with Gold and Silver.

The chief Towns here are,

1. Its Capital La Plata, in South Lat. 21. Long. 64. 'Tis a fine Town, the See of an Archbiſhop, and the Seat of a Royal Audience.

2. Potoſi, ſeventy eight Miles South-weſt from La Plata. 'Tis a pretty little Town, at the Foot of a Mountain, where is the moſt famous Silver Mine in the World, which has produc'd incredible Treaſures, inſomuch that 'tis ſaid the King of Spain had for his own fifth Share, in leſs than fifty Years, above a hundred and eleven Millions of Pieces of Eight, thirteen Reals, and a quarter of a Piece of Eight. The Mountain in which this rich Mine lies, ſtands in the middle of a Plain, and reſembles a Sugar-Loaf. 'Tis above a quarter of a League high, and half a League in Circuit. The neighbouring Soil is barren for three or four Leagues, and only produces an Herb which the Natives call Icho. Here are Wind-Mills to refine the Mettal of thoſe Mines, in which 20000 Negroes are commonly employ'd. The Mountain has been ſo dug, that 'tis in a manner but a Shell; and they ſcarce get an Ounce and a half of Silver out of a Quintal of Earth, which formerly yielded above as much again. The Town of Potoſi lies at the bottom of this Mountain.

3. Arica, South Lat. 19. Long. 70. three hundred and forty Miles North-weſt from Potoſi, ſtands on the Sea-Coaſt, is well fortified, and has a good Harbour, whither they bring the Silver from the Mines of Potoſi, and tranſport it to Lima by Sea.

4. La Paz, two hundred and eighty Miles North from Potoſi, and three hundred and fifty five North-eaſt from Arica, is the See of a Biſhop Suffragan of La Plata, and has Mines of very good Gold in the Neighbourhood.

5. Porco, to the South-weſt, and thirty nine Miles Weſt from Potoſi, has a rich Mine of excellent Gold.

The Province of Tucuman, with which we muſt conclude Peru, was formerly a part of that of Rio de la Plata. It abounds in Cattel and very fine Cotton. The Inhabitants are for the moſt part Savages; but more for Peace than War. The Spaniards have but eight Towns here, and thoſe of no great Note.

'Tis proper to take notice of two great Roads in this Country, which ſeem to exceed any ever made by the Romans, or even the great Wall betwixt Tartary and China. They reach from North Lat. 2. to South Lat. 20. which is 1320 Miles. They were call'd the Great Roads of the Inca's, becauſe made by their Orders. One of them was carried thro Mountains and Rocks, and the other thro the plain Country. The Glory and Grandeur of this Work was augmented by the ſtupendous Piles of Rocks and Stones laid together, which is ſurprizing how it could be done; for they had no Beaſt for Carriages or Draughts till brought from Europe. The Road thro the plain Country is defended by Walls twenty five Foot broad; and within thoſe Walls there are Streams, with Trees planted on both ſides. The other Road, cut thro the Rocks and Mountains, is of the ſame Breadth; and in the Valleys and Marſhy Grounds there are good Cauſeys. At certain Diſtances on thoſe Roads were large and pleaſant Inns for Travellers, ſeveral of them capable of entertaining Kings and their Retinues. Theſe Roads were repair'd by one of the Inca's not long before the Invaſion of the Spaniards, who have ſuffer'd them to decay. This ſtupendous Work is us'd as an Argument to prove that this Country muſt have been inhabited for many Ages. This is farther confirm'd by their ſtately Palaces, Temples, and other Structures; which prove that they muſt have been a polite People, and under a well regulated Government.

III. The Country of the AMAZONS,

LIES South from Terra Firma, Eaſt from Peru, Weſt from Braſil, and North from Paraguay; is 1340 Miles South and North, and 1350 Eaſt and Weſt; and has its Name from the famous River of the Amazons, which runs thro it, and falls into the Atlantick near the Line. It lies betwixt South Lat. 20. and the Equinoctial; or according to ſome, North Lat. 2. and Weſt Long. 50 & 71. Little of it is known, but what lies upon the River; nor is that yet fully diſcover'd. 'Twas call'd the River of the Amazons, becauſe the Women appear'd in Arms as well as the Men. The firſt European Diſcoverer was Francis Orellana in 1540, who ſail'd down it from Peru till he came to the Atlantick. Authors differ as to the Head of this River: Some place it at the foot of the Cordillera's in Quito; but Fritz the Jeſuit, who has given us a geographical Deſcription of it, makes Lauricocha Lake in the Audience of Lima, South Lat. 12. the Head of it. And, according to him, it runs 2040 Miles, beſides Turnings and Windings, before it falls into the Sea. It receives many other Rivers on both ſides, and very large ones from the South; has many fine Countries on its Banks, with great Towns, and abundance of fruitful Iſlands in its Stream. Travellers ſay, there are a hundred and fifty Savage Nations in this Country, which enjoys almoſt a continual Spring, and has ſeveral rich Mines of Gold, &c. But we have no room for Particulars.

IV. CHILI.

THIS Country, which in the Language of the Natives ſignifies Cold, was diſcover'd in 1535 by Almagra, a Spaniard, who march'd from Peru with a good Number of Soldiers, many of whom were froze to death on the Cordillera's, or Mountains of the Andes, together with their Horſes. Naturaliſts aſcribe this great Cold to a Wind which is not boiſterous, but by degrees extinguiſhes the natural Heat, and ſo freezes the Bodies, that when dead they appear in their natural Poſture. Authors differs as to the Extent of this Country. Some comprehend under this Name all that Part of South America which lies betwixt Peru and the Straits of Magellan, including Paraguay, and what others call Terra Magellanica; ſo that, according to them, it reaches almoſt from the Tropick of Capricorn, or at leaſt from South Lat. 25. to the Straits of Magellan in South Lat. 54. which makes it 1740 Miles long; but the Breadth is not equal, it being much contracted towards the South. The greateſt Breadth is at Lat. 25. or rather under the Tropick of Capricorn, and amounts to 1650 Miles. The Andes, or Cordillera Mountains, run the whole Length of this Country. They are reckoned the higheſt Mountains in the World; are full of Vulcano's, yet many of them always cover'd with Snow, and extreme cold; but in the Plains 'tis hot, and towards the Coaſt 'tis healthful and temperate. The Soil produces abundance of Maiz and Fruit. The Meadows are full of Cattel, and particularly of a ſort of Sheep, ſo high that they uſe them for Carriages. In the Mountains there are ſeveral Mines of Copper, and the pureſt Gold in America, which yield great Profit to the Spaniards, who are Maſters of moſt of the Country, and have a Governor here, who depends on the Viceroy of Peru. This Country would be as pleaſant as it is rich and fruitful, were it not for great Storms of Thunder and Lightning, which frequently do great Miſchief. Much of the Country, eſpecially the mountainous Parts, is inhabited by brave warlike Savages, whom the Spaniards have never been able to ſubdue.

Chili is divided into three Provinces, and each of theſe have their Subdiviſions.

The firſt Province is that of Chili Proper, which is the moſt Northerly, bounds on Peru, and contains the following Juriſdictions:

1. Serena, which is furtheſt North, and has its Name from its Capital La Serena, alias, Coquimbo, on the Coaſt, Lat. 30. Long. 72. It has a good Harbour, which is reckon'd the beſt in Chili, next to Baldivia, and the adjacent Country produces Gold and Copper, excellent Water, Corn, Wine, Cattel, Fruit, and Pot-herbs. This Town was taken by Sir Francis Drake, and afterwards burnt by the Buccaniers in 1680. Other Ports here are Guaſco, a hundred and twenty five Miles further North, which lies in a pleaſant, populous, and fruitful Country, and has a good Harbour; and Copiapo, about a hundred and forty eight Miles North from Guaſco, which is alſo a good Harbour, in a fruitful Country, that abounds with Turquoiſes.

2. The Juriſdiction of Quillata lies South from Coquimbo, is nam'd from its Capital, two hundred and twenty five Miles South from La Serena. Valparaiſo lies near Quillata, and ſerves as a Harbour to St. Jago. This Place was taken by Sir Francis Drake, who found a Ship in the Harbour, with a great deal of Gold on board.

3. The Juriſdiction of St. Jago de Chili, ſo call'd from its Capital, Lat. 34. Long. 73. 'Tis the Capital of all Chili, the Reſidence of the Spaniſh Governor, the Seat of a Royal Audience, and the See of a Biſhop Suffragan of Lima. It lies about ſeventy Miles Eaſt from the Sea; is rich and has a good Trade by the River Topocalma. The City is regular, well built, the Streets large, the Cathedral ſumptuous; and here are ſeveral rich Monaſteries.

Weſt from this Coaſt, in Lat. 34. about three hundred and fifty Miles, lie the two deſart Iſlands of Juan Fernandes, ſo call'd from the Diſcoverer, who planted, but afterwards left them. Here are ſeveral Bays, where Ships put in to refreſh, good Water, Wood, and ſuch plenty of Fiſh of all ſorts, that in a few Hours one may take enough for ſome Hundreds of Men; ſo that the Fiſhery here is equal to that of Newfoundland. The Spaniards come often hither to fiſh, and ſell them to Peru. There are Multitudes of Seals in the Bays, whoſe Fur exceeds that of our Otters, abundance of Sea-Lions, and Fowl of ſeveral ſorts, with ſtore of wild Goats, and beautiful wild Cats, the Breed of thoſe that were left by the Planter. The Climate is ſo good, that the Trees and Fields are verdant all the Year. The Product is chiefly Cotton, large Piemento, or Jamaica Pepper-Trees, Cabbage-Trees, plenty of excellent Kitchen Herbs, ſow'd by Ships that had put in to repair, ſome black Pepper, and Plums. Alexander Selkirk, a Scotch Mariner, liv'd alone here four Years and four Months. He had been Maſter of the Cinque-Ports. He was in Company here with Captain Dampier; but having a Difference with his own Captain Stadling about repairing the Ship, which was very leaky, Selkirk choſe rather to ſtay here alone than go aboard her; and when he was willing to go at laſt, the Captain refus'd; which happen'd well for Selkirk, becauſe the Ship was forc'd to put in to the Coaſt, where the Men were all taken by the Spaniards, and made Slaves; but the Captain ranſom'd himſelf. Selkirk carried on Shore his Clothes and Bedding, a Firelock, a Pound of Powder, Bullets, Tobacco, a Hatchet, Knife, Kettle, Bible, and ſome practical Pieces, with his Mathematical Inſtruments and Books. He built himſelf two Huts in a Valley with Piemento-Trees, cover'd them with long Graſs, and lin'd them with the Skins of Goats, which he kill'd with his Gun. He had much ado to bear up againſt Melancholy the firſt eight Months; but applying himſelf to Devotion, he grew more eaſy. And when his Powder was ſpent, he ſubſiſted by catching young Kids and Fiſh, of which he had plenty; but wanting Bread and Salt, they prov'd laxative, ſo that he was forc'd to hunt Goats; in which he became ſo dextrous, and ſo nimble, by this way of living which purg'd him of all groſs Humours, that he took them at pleaſure by Swiftneſs of Foot, eſpecially as they clamber'd the Hills and Rocks. Captain Rogers, who brought him off in 1702, ſaw a Proof of it; for he ſent out a Bull-Dog and ſome of the beſt Runners he had on board, to help him catch Goats; but Selkirk diſtanc'd both Dog and Men, and ſoon caught a Goat. He had wore out all his Shoes and Clothes, and cover'd himſelf with Goat-Skins; and his Feet were grown ſo hard, that he ran thro the Woods and Rocks without any harm; and it was ſome time before he could wear Shoes again, or drink any thing but Water. His Knife being wore out, he made others, as well as he could, of ſome old Iron Hoops, that had been left aſhore, where Ships had mended their Casks; and having no Needle, he made uſe of a Nail, and the Worſted of old Stockins, to ſtitch ſome Linen Cloth he had by him into Shirts. The Piemento-Wood was his Firing, which he kindled by rubbing two Sticks together on his Knee; and he ſeaſon'd his Diet with the Pepper. He was at firſt peſter'd with multitudes of Rats, which gnaw'd his Clothes and Feet when aſleep; but he fed the wild Cats with Goats-Fleſh, by which many of 'em became tame, and ſoon clear'd him of the Rats. He likewiſe tam'd ſome Kids; and now and then diverted himſelf by running about and dancing with them and his tame Cats. So that by the Help of Providence and his Youth, being not then above twenty ſix Years old he conquer'd all the Inconveniencies of his Solitude, and became ſo eaſy, that when he heard Captain Dampier, whom he did not like, was in Company, he choſe rather to ſtay aſhore than go on board where he was. But Captain Rogers, who had the Command, finding Selkirk to be an able Sailor and a ſtout Man, made him his Mate, and he was very ſerviceable to him afterwards at the the taking of Guayaquil. Two Spaniſh Ships put into the Iſland while Selkirk was here: Not knowing what they were till he came near, he fled back to the Woods as ſoon as he perceiv'd them to be Spaniards; for he knew they would murder him, or make him a Slave. They ſhot at, and purſu'd him; but he eſcap'd. When he ſaw Captain Rogers's Ship approach, he knew 'em to be Engliſh by their working, and kindled a large Fire on the Iſland in the Evening. This allarm'd the Captain, who being inform'd by his Pilot Dampier that the Iſland was deſart, apprehended that the Spaniards had either fix'd a Gariſon there, or that ſome French Men of War might be in the Harbour. But being in want of Water, he reſolv'd to land, and ſent his Pinnace with arm'd Men to know how Matters were. Selkirk, clad in Goat-Skins, came to the Shore; and they were as agreeably ſurpriz'd to ſee him come with a Rag on a Stick as a Flag of Truce, and to hear him ſpeak Engliſh, and tell them they might have good Water and Proviſions, as he was with the Proſpect of being deliver'd from his Solitude. He had prepared boil'd Goats-Fleſh and Broth mix'd with Herbs for 'em, which was very refreſhing, and they carry'd him on board the Captain with abundance of good Craw-Fiſh. So that he put in to the Bay, where he repair'd his Ship, took in Wood, Water, &c. and his Men, troubled with the Scurvy, recover'd apace by the uſe of freſh Meat and Greens.

The ſecond Province, call'd Imperiale, from Imperial, its Capital, lies South of Chili Proper, and contains the following Juriſdictions:

1. That of Conception, ſo nam'd from its Capital, Lat. 37. Long. 73. a fortified Town, defended by a good Caſtle, and the See of a Biſhop Suffragan of Lima. 'Twas formerly the Capital of Chili, and has a Harbour call'd St. Vincent, cover'd by the Iſlands Quiriquina. The neighbouring Country abounds ſo with Gold, that the Spaniards, ſays Ovalle, employ'd ſome Thouſands of Indian Families to gather it. This Town has a large Territory, which is one of the moſt populous Parts of Chili. Arauco, about fifty Miles South of Conception, is Capital of its Diſtrict, inhabited by the Araucans, the moſt warlike People of Chili, who gave the Spaniards a great deal of trouble before they ſubmitted.

2. The Juriſdiction of Imperiale lies South from that of Conception, and is ſo nam'd from the Town Imperial, Lat. 42. Which is nobly ſituated in a fruitful Country, that has rich Gold Mines; and is the See of a Biſhop Suffragan of Lima. It was deſtroy'd by the Natives; but ſince rebuilt.

3. The Juriſdiction of Baldivia lies South of Imperiale, and is ſo nam'd from its Capital, on the bottom of a Bay, Lat. 41. In this Juriſdiction are Mines of the pureſt Gold in all America. Sir John Narborough places the Mouth of the Harbour in Lat. 39. 56. and Long. Weſt from the Lizard, 70. 19. Sir John being ſent by our King, Charles II. to make Diſcoveries, touch'd here for Refreſhments: But was trick'd by the Spaniards, who traiterouſly ſeiz'd his Lieutenant and three Men, and deſign'd to have ſeiz'd his Ship. The Officers and Soldiers were richly apparell'd; the Sword-Hilts and Handles of the Officers Canes were all of Gold of great Value, and the Hilts of the Soldiers Swords were all of Silver; and they boaſted they had ſo much Silver and Gold, that they did not value it. He talk'd with ſome of the Natives, who inform'd him that the Spaniards were very cruel to them; that they often attack'd the Spaniards by way of Repriſal, ſo that they durſt not ſtir out of the Bounds of their Fort; adding, that the Natives were Maſters of the Gold Mines, were a very warlike People, and would readily join with any Power to drive out the Spaniards. He ſays, there are three fair Rivers that fall into the Harbour with great Streams; that the Town lies on the Point of a Peninſula, and the Harbour is defended by ſome Forts; but is ſo broad, that the Guns can't command it; ſo that it might eaſily be taken. They have no European Goods but by way of Panama and the River La Plata. And Sir John was of opinion, that a very good Trade might be carried on in theſe Parts, either by Leave from the King of Spain, or by four or five Ships of Force, from twenty to thirty Guns; and that a rich Trade in Gold might be had in the South Parts of Chili by any that would uſe the Natives well, and preſent them with Knives, Sciſſars, Glaſſes, Beads, Combs, and ſuch like Commodities; for he found 'em very tractable, and over-joy'd, when he put them in hopes of returning to that Country with a Commiſſion from his Maſter the King of England.

4. The Juriſdiction of Oſorno lies South from Baldivia, and is nam'd from its Capital, Lat. 39. 'Tis a ſmall Town on a River, in a cold Country; but has ſome Mines of Gold. And Sir John Narborough mentions it as a Place where they might have a good Trade for that Commodity,

5. The Juriſdiction of Chiloe lies South from Oſorno, and conſiſts of a Knot of Iſlands; the chief of which is Chiloe about a hundred and fifty Miles long, and thirty five where broadeſt. Theſe Parts were formerly viſited by the Engliſh and Dutch in Queen Elizabeth's Time, when they talk'd with the Natives, who inform'd them that there was plenty of Gold in the Country; but that the Mines were not wrought, moſt of the People having been deſtroy'd by the Spaniards, and thoſe in the Mountains were Enemies to them. The Spaniards had ſeveral Forts upon the Iſland of Chiloe, and a Town nam'd Caſtro. At the Weſt-end of the Iſland there's a Harbour call'd the Engliſh Port, or Bronwer's Haven, where both Engliſh and Dutch put in; but found the Natives very treacherous, and loth to part with their Gold. Here are ſeveral other Juriſdictions, but not worth inſiſting on.

The third Province is that of Chicuito, or Cuyo, which lies South from Chili, and is ſeparated from it by the Andes. Some make it a part of Chili. 'Tis about ſeven hundred Miles long from South to North, and three hundred and twelve where broadeſt. Ovalle ſays, 'tis ſo fruitful, that in many things it exceeds Chili. The Crops are better, the Fruits larger, and of a finer Taſte, becauſe of the great Heats which ripen them more. They have ſtore of Corn, Wine, Cattel, Olive-Yards, great Plantations of Almond-Trees, and all European Roots, Fruits, and Herbs: But 'tis ſubject to Thunder, Lightning, and exceſſive Heats in Summer, which ſo fill the Houſes with poiſonous Reptiles and Inſects, that the People during that Seaſon are forc'd to ſleep abroad in their Gardens or Court-Yards. Here are rich Silver and Gold Mines; which being view'd by the Miners of Potoſi, they ſaid they were the richeſt in the Indies. The Spaniards began to work them; but he doubted of their Succeſs, becauſe of their great Diſtance from the Sea and navigable Rivers, and their want of Hands, and ſtrong Guards; for the neighbouring Indians are their Enemies. The Spaniards have three little Towns here, but of no great Note.

V. TERRA MAGELLANICA.

THE Spaniards comprehend it under the general Name of Chili; and ſome call it the Country of the Patagons. 'Tis of vaſt Extent. Part of it lies South of Chili and Cuyo, and reaches to the North Sea. The South Part of it reaches to both Seas, and lies as far South as the Straits of Magellan. It has Tucuman and the Province of La Plata on the North. Its Extent from South-weſt to North-eaſt is above ſixteen hundred Miles; and the greateſt Breadth betwixt the two Seas is above five hundred: But there's little of it known, except a few Places on the Coaſt, as Port Deſire, Port St. Julian, &c. where Sir John Narborough and other Sailors have touch'd, and furniſh'd themſelves with freſh Water, Fiſh, and Fowl; and 'tis ſo ill inhabited by a few ſhy and ſtraggling Natives, that it juſtly deſerves the Name of the Deſart Coaſt. Off of the South-eaſt Part, Lat. 49. Long. 60. lie thoſe Iſlands, call'd Sibbald de Weerts, from a Dutch Sailor who diſcover'd them in 1599. They are of little Note, but only that Ships paſs by them as they ſail round Cape Horn into the South Sea.

The Straits of Magellan, ſo famous for being the firſt Paſſage that was diſcover'd by Magellan, a Spaniard, from the North to the South Sea, have been ſo often deſcrib'd, and are now of ſo little uſe ſince the Way to the South Sea has been diſcover'd by Cape Horn, that we need ſay but little of them. Magellan gave an Account of a monſtrous gigantick People that he ſaw in and about thoſe Straits, and particularly at Port St. Julian; which modern Authors and Sailors are apt to think a Romance: Yet Sibbald de Weert and Admiral Van Noort, who were here in 1598, ſay, they ſaw ſeveral Savages that were ten or eleven Foot high. They were very fierce, kill'd ſeveral of the Dutch who landed; and by their Accounts appear to have been the moſt brutiſh Savages that ever were heard of. Sir Francis Drake, Sir Thomas Cavendiſh, and ſeveral others, paſs'd theſe Straits; but the laſt Engliſhman who did it was Captain Narborough, afterwards Sir John, who was ſent out upon Diſcoveries by Charles II. in 1669. His Deſcription is the beſt; and we refer to it. Theſe Straits are generally dangerous, unleſs a proper Seaſon be watch'd for paſſing and repaſſing them; and then it may be done with Eaſe. The laſt European who paſs'd them, was Monſieur De Beaucheſne Gouin, a Frenchman, in 1699. He obſerved that both the Climate and Navigation of theſe Straits are very unequal, and that 'tis dangerous to paſs them in the Winter. The Spaniards had formerly ſome Gariſons to hinder other Nations from paſſing thoſe Straits, but to little purpoſe. Theſe Straits lie about Lat. 53. at both Ends; but towards the middle they bend further South, to Lat. 43 ½. The Length of them, in a direct Line, is near four hundred Miles; but the Turnings and Windings make them a great deal more.

Terra del Fuego lies on the South-ſide of 'em, and was ſo call'd becauſe of the many Fires which Magellan ſaw upon it when he paſſed the Straits. Some make it one continued Land; but modern Diſcoveries ſhew that 'tis divided into ſeveral Iſlands: One at the Mouth of the Straits on the Eaſt-ſide, is call'd Foreland, and divided from Terra del Fuego by a narrow Channel call'd St. Sebaſtian's Inlet; and there are two more on the Weſt-ſide of Terra del Fuego, one call'd the Straits of Jelouchete, and another call'd St. Iſidore's Inlet. The Country is inhabited by Savages, and is about 540 Miles from South-eaſt to North-weſt, and from Cape Horn to the Mouth of the Straits on the Eaſt-ſide about 250. On the Eaſt-ſide are the Straits of Le Maire, ſo call'd from a Dutch Sailor, who diſcover'd them. They lie betwixt the States Iſland and Terra del Fuego; and Eaſt from that lies Bronwer's Paſſage. Eaſt from thence, Lat. 55. betwixt Long. 50 & 55. lie La Roche's Iſland, not fully diſcover'd, and another call'd Unknown Land; betwixt which lie La Roche's Straits, ſo call'd from a Frenchman, who diſcovered them in 1675; and Eaſt of them lies the Courſe which Capt. Sharp took in his Return from the South Sea in 1681. Cape Horn, which is now ſo famous, is the moſt South Part of Terra del Fuego, in Lat. 55. 40. and Long. 66. But the Coaſt Weſt of it, is not well known. Solomon's Iſlands lie in the Pacifick, or South Sea. Authors differ much about them. Ovalle, one of the lateſt Travellers, places them 800 Leagues Weſt of Peru, between the ſeventh and twelfth Degrees of South Latitude. Monſieur Du Fer places them betwixt the eighth and ninth: And ſome place them in eleven. Luyts ſays, ſome reckon them twenty. Le Maire thinks that the Iſlands of Horn and Good Hope, which he diſcover'd in his Voyage to Guinea, are two of them, becauſe he found them to agree with the Deſcription given by Ferdinand de Quir. They lie conveniently for Refreſhment in the Way betwixt Chili, or Peru, and the Molucca's. They are ſaid to abound with Proviſions; and the Natives exchange Gold for other Commodities. They are very ſtout, and continually at War with the Spaniards. Some of them are black, others tawny, and all naked. But Authors are not agreed whether this Country be really Iſlands, or part of the South unknown Continent; ſo that we muſt leave it at an Uncertainty till further Diſcovery. We return to the Continent of America.

VI. The Province of Rio de la Plata,

LIES Eaſt from Tucuman, North from Terra Magellanica, and South of the Country of Amazons and Braſil, which alſo runs along the Eaſt-ſide of it as far as the Mouth of La Plata River. 'Tis ſo call'd from the great River La Plata, which runs thro it. This Country reaches from South Lat. 22. to 33 ½. The greateſt Extent South and North is above 1270 Miles, and the greateſt Extent Eaſt and Weſt in the North Parts, under the Tropick of Capricorn, is above 1200; but 'tis contracted at both Ends. 'Tis alſo call'd by the Name of Paraguay. The River is likewiſe call'd Paraguay till near its Mouth, where the Name was chang'd, becauſe of the Silver Mines, and the great Quantity of Plate found in the Country. It receives many great Rivers on both ſides; and according to moſt Authors, riſes from the Lake Xarays in the Amazons Country, South Lat. 18. and falls into the Ethiopick Ocean, Lat. 35. where 'tis above a hundred and five Miles broad, from Cape St. Mary to Cape St. Anthony. And Ovalle ſays, it runs with ſuch a mighty Stream, as makes the Sea freſh for a great way. But Father Sepp, who was here in 1691, ſays, the Water at the Mouth of it is ſalt, and of a whitiſh Colour. It abounds with excellent Fiſh of many ſorts unknown to us; they are generally larger than ours, of a dark yellow Colour, and excellent Taſte. This he aſcribes to the Nature of the Water, which is very ſweet, much helps Digeſtion, even after eating raw Fruit, and never does any hurt, tho drank in great Quantities. Ovalle ſays, 'tis good to clear the Voice and Lungs; yet it petrifies the Branches of Trees and other Things which fall into it; and that Veſſels are naturally form'd in its Sand of various Figures, which look as if they were poliſh'd by Art, and keep Water very cool. The Courſe of it, in a direct Line, is near fourteen hundred Miles; but much more, including Turnings and Windings. This Country in general has a temperate Climate. The Soil is naturally fruitful, but little cultivated. Here are many Mines of Gold and Silver, which the Spaniſh Jeſuits, who have the chief Government, know better than any others, and reap more Profit from them than all Spain together. The Savages are well enough ſhap'd, not ſo cruel as thoſe in other Parts of America, but extreme idle, dull, and ſenſual. The Miſſionaries pretend to have made many Converts; but even by their own Accounts they are but indifferent Chriſtians; nor do their Inſtructors take much care to make them better. They govern the Natives, who ſubmit to them, juſt as they pleaſe, aſſign every Family their Portion of Ground and Number of Cows and Oxen for Labour and Food; and when they prove lazy, make them cudgel one another, which they take very patiently. And they teach 'em to dance, as well as to ſing in their Churches. This Country is divided into the ſix following Provinces.

1. Chaco, in the North-weſt Part, is very fruitful; but chiefly inhabited by Savages of different Nations; and many of them at continual War with the Spaniards. The Miſſionaries ſay, ſome of 'em are of a gigantick Stature. The Spaniards built ſome Forts here to curb the Natives, and particularly a Town call'd Conception, which is now deſtroy'd.

2. Guayra lies Eaſt from Chaco, and borders on Braſil. The Country is fruitful, but not cultivated. The Spaniards have ſeveral Towns here: The chief of which are, (1.) Guayra, alias, Civdad Real, under the Tropick of Capricorn, Lat. 24. Long. 49. 'Tis not populous, becauſe the Air is bad; and 'tis ſubject to the Invaſions of the Natives. (2.) The Town of Seven Archangels, ſo call'd by the Jeſuits, who built it. 'Tis pretty populous. They had ſeveral other Towns, which the Natives deſtroy'd.

3. The Province of Parana lies South-weſt from Guayra. The Air is good, and the Soil fruitful; but not cultivated, nor clear'd of the Woods with which it abounds. A River of the ſame Name runs thro it, and falls into La Plata. It petrifies Wood, breeds Fiſh of a vaſt Bulk, and particularly abundance of Sea-Wolves. This River has ſeveral Iſlands, ſome of 'em very large. The Natives are warlike ſtubborn, and very wicked. The Spaniards have five Settlements here; the chief of which is Acarai, on the Weſt-ſide of the River Parana. It was built by the Jeſuits; but is much infeſted with Gnats. The reſt are of no Note.

4. The Province of Paraguay Proper lies betwixt Chaco and Guayra, reaches furtheſt North of any of the Provinces, is full of Moraſſes in the North Parts, but fruitful in the South, where the Inhabitants apply themſelves to Agriculture. The Spaniards have ſome Settlements here; but none of them worth deſcribing. The Country produces abundance of Cotton, which the Women ſpin, and make into Clothes.

5. The Province of Urvaig, or Uraguay, lies South from Parana and Guayra, and Weſt from Braſil, and reaches as far as the River La Plata. This Country is fruitful, produces abundance of Sugar, has a large River of its own Name, and ſeveral others which fall into it, and make it very large before it joins with that of La Plata. The Spaniards have ſeveral Towns here; the chief of which is Aſſumption, Lat. 29. Long. 52. at the Influx of another River into the Urvaig. 'Tis Capital of the Country, and the See of a Biſhop. St. Salvador, in this Country, near the Mouth of the River Negro, where it falls into the Urvaig, Lat. 34. is a handſome little Town. The reſt of the Country is inhabited by Savages.

6. The Province of La Plata Proper lies South of Chaco, Parana, and Paraguay, and Weſt from Urvaig, or Uraguay; Eaſt from Tucuman, and North from Terra Magellanica. The whole Country being frequently call'd by this Name, 'tis hard to diſtinguiſh what Authors ſay of it in particular. The great River La Plata runs thro the middle of it. Acoſta and other Spaniſh Authors ſay, 'tis very fruitful, produces all ſorts of European Fruit and Corn, beſides what is proper to the Climate; and has as good and large Sugar-Canes as any in America. Here's excellent Paſturage, great Herds of Horſes and Black Cattel, which run wild, but are very ſerviceable when tam'd; as alſo abundance of Sheep, Hogs, Deer, ſome Lions and Tygars, Mines of Gold and Silver, and many of Braſs and Iron. Father Sepp, who was here in 1691, ſays, the Inhabitants in general are Papiſts; that the native Indians live in thatch'd Huts of Clay, one Story high; but the Spaniards Houſes are of Brick and Lime, and cover'd with Tiles, all which they make in the Country. Here are large Woods of Peach, Almond, and Fig-Trees, all which bear well. They have black and white Figs, very large and delicious. He ſays, they have Herds of Kine from thirteen to fifteen thouſand. They are large, and generally white, and valued here only for their Hides. The Spaniards ſcarce take any thing but the Tongues, and leave the reſt to the Natives, or for a Prey to wild Beaſts. The Jeſuits and other Miſſionaries make vaſt Profit of them, and ſend the Hides, which coſt them nothing, to Spain by many Thouſands at a time, where they yield ſix Crowns a-piece. Sepp ſays, that when he was here they ſent 300000 Ox-Hides to Spain at once. The Natives live moſtly upon Beef, that they eat half-raw without Bread or Salt; which breeds Worms in their Bowels, ſo that they ſeldom live to fifty Years of Age. He tells us, that there are ſeventy ſix Cantons of Converts in this Country, from 6000 to 8000 People apiece; that they plant their Huts upon Aſcents near the Rivers, which have no Windows nor Chimneys, and are intolerable ſmoky. They lie all together in one Room; the better ſort in Hammocks, and the poorer upon the Hides of Oxen or Tygers. He ſays, there are two Miſſionaries in each Canton, who are their Cooks and Caterers, as well as Prieſts, and allot each Family their Share, otherwiſe they would devour all at once. He ſays, here are eighty Colleges of Monks, from a hundred to ſix hundred Leagues from one another, and but a hundred and ſixty Perſons in them all. He makes the Country call'd La Plata in general bigger than Germany, Italy, France, and the Netherlands together. The Miſſionaries have fine Churches in every Colony, richly adorn'd with abundance of Plate, and live in ſuch Splendor and Luxury, that they ſuffer no Strangers or Merchants to ſettle among them, leſt they ſhould become the Objects of their Envy. The chief Places here are, (1.) Buenos Ayres, on the South-ſide of the River La Plata, Lat. 35. Long. 59. about two hundred and twenty five Miles up the River. 'Tis the Reſidence of a Spaniſh Governor, defended by a ſtone Fort with forty Guns, and gariſon'd by five hundred Men. It has a pretty good Harbour; but not very ſafe in a North or North-eaſt Wind. The River here is ſeven Leagues broad, and navigable by Ships ſix Leagues higher; but no further, becauſe of a Cataract. The Trade from hence to Spain is in Hides and Tallow, Silver from Peru, and Gold and Silver from Chili. All European Goods yield a good Price here. Captain Rogers, who was here in 1708, ſays, here was a Cathedral and five other Churches. Sepp mentions four Convents; and ſays, that in 1691, Silver was cheaper here than Iron. The French, during the late Wars, had begun to engroſs the Trade, and drove a conſiderable Commerce in Negroes from Guinea, which they ſent from hence over Land to Chili and Peru. (2.) Santa Fe, upon the Conflux of two Rivers into La Plata, two hundred and fifty Miles North-weſt from Buenos Ayres. The Country betwixt them is fruitful, well inhabited by Spaniards and Indians, and there are Mines of Gold and Silver in the Neighbourhood; but the Spaniards don't care to open them, leſt it ſhould tempt their Enemies to invade them.

VII. BRASIL,

IS the moſt Eaſterly Part of South America, and lies upon the Mouth of the Amazons, at the Line to South Lat. 35. So that the Length is about 2100 Miles, and the greateſt Breadth Eaſt and Weſt is near 1100. But in the South Parts, from the Tropick of Capricorn to the River La Plata, 'tis very much contracted, the greateſt Breadth not exceeding 150. The Inland Parts are inhabited by barbarous Nations, very little known; and the Coaſts are poſſeſs'd by the Portugueſe. It was formerly call'd the Province of the Holy Croſs, becauſe diſcover'd on that Day in 1501 by Alvares Cabro, a Portugueſe, in name of his Maſter. The French made ſeveral Settlements here afterwards, but were drove out by the Portugueſe; as they were again out of moſt of it by the Dutch, who loſt it again in 1655, the Dutch being then at War with England, and not able to ſupport their Colonies: Beſides, the Portugueſe, who had ſubmitted to them, were very treacherous. The Air is a little hot, but healthful, and the People live long. Their Water is excellent, and the Country produces Tobacco, Cotton, Maiz, Millet, Citrons, Oranges, and other Fruit; but the chief Product is Sugar, in making of which the Portugueſe employ vaſt Numbers of Negroes. Here's plenty of Cattel, and many Foreſts of Braſil Wood. The Natives are of an Olive Complexion, and a middling Stature, have big Heads, large Shoulders, and great flat Noſes; and are ſo cruel and barbarous, that many of them eat their Priſoners. Moſt of them go naked; and others wear the Skins of wild Beaſts. They are much inclin'd to War, love Hunting, Dancing, and Feaſting; live almoſt without Law or Government, and couple promiſcuouſly, except Parents and Children. They live for the moſt part in Woods, and lie in a ſort of Hammocks faſten'd to Trees, to avoid Serpents and other venomous Beaſts, with which the Country abounds. Barlæus, a Dutch Author, and Nieuhoff, another, give the beſt Deſcription of it; and to them we muſt refer for Particulars. The Portugueſe have divided it into fifteen Captainſhips along the Coaſt, as follows:

1. The Captainſhip of Para is the moſt Northerly, and lies Eaſt from the Mouth of the Amazons River. It produces Tobacco, Cotton, and Sugar. The Portugueſe have two Towns here: (1.) Para, or Belem, on a Branch of the Amazons River, South Lat. 2. Long. 49. (2.) Comma, on the ſame River, fifty Miles further South. There are about ſix hundred Portugueſe in this Captainſhip. The reſt is inhabited by Savages of ſeveral Nations.

2. The Captainſhip of Maragnan, Eaſt from Para, has its Name from its chief River. The Air is healthful, the Soil fruitful, abounds with Braſil Wood, Saffron, Cotton, Lacque, Balm, Tobacco, and Sugar; and Ambergreaſe is ſometimes found on the Coaſt. The chief Places are, (1.) Tabicora, or Igarupee, a little Iſland at the Mouth of the River Maragnan, South Lat. 3. Long. 45. 'Tis forty five Leagues round, and has a Town call'd St. Philip. 'Tis well fortified, has a good Trade, and is the See of a Biſhop Suffragan of St. Salvador. Here are alſo twenty five Villages well peopled. The reſt of the Captainſhip is for the moſt part inhabited by Savages.

3. The Captainſhip of Siara lies Eaſt from Maragnan; and part of it is inhabited by independent Savages. It furniſhes Cotton, Chryſtal, Precious Stones, Sugar, Salt, and ſeveral ſorts of Wood. The chief Place is Siara, a ſmall Town with a Fort, at the Mouth of a River of the ſame Name, Lat. 4. Long. 40. They have other Settlements at St. Sebaſtian and Coutpan; but the reſt is inhabited by Savages: And the moſt Southern part of it, call'd Petaguei, is ſaid to have rich Silver Mines.

4. The Captainſhip of Rio Grande, ſo call'd from a River which runs thro it, and falls into the Atlantick, Lat. 6. Long. 36. The Portugueſe have a little Town here call'd Natal, on the Coaſt; and another nam'd Conhao where they make great Quanties of Sugar.

5. The Captainſhip of Paraiba lies South from Rio Grande, has its Name from the River which croſſes it, and tho not large, is very populous. Here are Mountains cover'd with Woods. The Valleys produce Tobacco and Fruits; and the plain Country yields ſtore of Sugar; wild Fowl, and Parrots. The Portugueſe here are more numerous than the Savages. Their chief Settlements are at Paraiba, a pretty ſtrong Town, on a River of the ſame Name, South Lat. 7. Long. 36. The Dutch formerly call'd it Frederickſtadt, and the Portugueſe commonly call it S. Maria de las Nives. It has a good Harbour, defended by four Forts.

6. Tamaraca lies South of Paraiba, and has its Name from a little Iſland on the Coaſt. Tho 'tis the leaſt of all the Captainſhips, being but two and twenty Leagues in Compaſs, yet 'tis the antienteſt, and extraordinary fruitful. The Portugueſe have a little Town here call'd St. Mary de la Conception, South Lat. 8. Long. 36. It lies in the Iſland of Tamaraca, and is defended by a ſmall Fort, to which the Dutch gave the Name of Orange.

7. Pernambuco lies South of Tamaraca, is one of the beſt Captainſhips in Braſil, abounds with Sugar, and has thirteen Portugueſe Colonies, the chief of which is Olinda, Lat. 9. Long. 36. It ſtands upon a Hill, drives a great Trade, and contains above 2000 Portugueſe Families, beſides the Clergy and Slaves, who are very numerous. 'Tis the See of a Biſhop Suffragan to St. Salvador, has many Religious Houſes, and a fine College of Jeſuits. The Town of Recif, which is its Harbour, lies South from it. 'Tis very populous, and drives a great Trade.

8. Seregippe, or Cirigi, lies South of Pernambuco. This Captainſhip is made an Iſland by the River of St. Francis, whoſe South Branch is called Real. The chief Place here is the little Town of Seregippe del Rey, or St. Chriſtopher, on the River of Vazarbaries, with the Fort or Settlement of St. Antonio, South Lat. 11. Long. 39. The reſt of the Country is inhabited by Savages.

9. Bahia todos los Santos, or the Captainſhip of All Saints Bay, is without Diſpute the moſt populous, and the richeſt of all Braſil. It lies South from Seregippe. Its chief Town is St. Salvador, Lat. 14. Long. 39. with a Harbour on the Bay, two hundred Toiſes from the Town, which ſtands on the top of a Hill, ſo rugged towards the Sea, that on that ſide 'tis inacceſſible, and they are forc'd to crane up Mer-

Merchandize from the Ships, or elſe carry them far about. The Churches here are fine, eſpecially the Metropolitan, and the College of Jeſuits. The Houſes are of Wood, except the Cuſtom-Houſe, which is of Stone. St. Salvador is the See of an Archbiſhop. The Dutch took it, and ſet fire to the Magazines in 1623, when they found ſo much Plunder, that 'tis ſaid the common Soldiers had 15000 Crowns a Man for their Share. But the Portugueſe took it again about a Year after; ſince which they have fortified it, together with the Caſtle of St. Antonio, the Seat of the Viceroy, and of the Royal Audience and Sovereign Council. The Harbour is defended by ſome Forts, and well frequented, which makes it a rich trading Town. The Savages live along the River of St. Francis.

10. The Captainſhip of Ilheos, South of Todos los Santos, has the Name from one of its Rivers. It abounds with Sugar. Its chief Town is St. George, Lat. 16. Long. 40. It lies near the Mouth of the River Ilheos. They have another Settlement at St. Cruiz, or St. Antonio. The reſt of the Country is moſtly inhabited by Savages.

11. The Captainſhip of Puerto Seguro, South of Ilheos, abounds in Rice, Maiz, Fruits, and Sugar. The Capital is of the ſame Name, Lat. 17. Long. 40.

12. The Captainſhip of Spirito Santo, South of the former, is one of the moſt fruitful in Braſil, is water'd by the Rivers of Paraiba and Spirito Santo, which ſoon after their Conjunction form an Iſland, in which there's a ſmall City of the ſame Name, Lat. 21. Long. 41. The Savages inhabit the reſt of Province.

13. Rio Janeiro, South of Spirito Santo. This Captainſhip abounds with Cotton and Braſil Wood, and has its Name from its principal River. The Portugueſe took it in 1558, and built the City of St. Sebaſtian near the Mouth of the River Janeiro, on a Bay, in Lat. 21. Long. 24. 'Tis a Place of good Trade, and the See of a Biſhop, Suffragan to St. Salvador. The next beſt Settlement which the Portugueſe have in this Captainſhip is Angra dos Reys; but the reſt of the Country is for the moſt part inhabited by Savages. There are ſome Iſlands near the Coaſt; in one of which the French built a Fort in 1555, but did not keep it.

14. The Captainſhip of St. Vincent, Weſt and South-weſt of Rio Janiero, lies under the Tropick of Capricorn. 'Tis a very pleaſant fruitful Country, and has many Mountains, in which there are ſaid to be Silver Mines. It has a Capital of its own Name, with a good Port in an Iſland, Lat. 25. Long. 45. The Portugueſe have other Settlements here at Sanctos, St. Amaro, Hitauchin, Philippovilla, and St. Paul; but the reſt of the Captainſhip is inhabited by Savages.

15. The Captainſhip of Del Rey lies South-weſt from St. Vincent, on the Coaſt, as far as the River La Plata. It abounds with Pepper, Ginger, rich Furs, Cotton, Wool, and Wax. But we have no Account of any Towns here, moſt of it being inhabited by Savages; only the Portugueſe have a Settlement on the North-ſide of the River La Plata, Lat. 35. Long. 56.

Europeans import into Braſil, in general, coarſe and fine Linen Cloth, Bays, Serges, Perpetuana's, Nuts, Silk and Thred Stockings, Biſcuit, Wheat Flower, Wine, Oil, Olives, Butter, Cheeſe, Salt, Salt Beef and Pork, Iron, and all ſorts of Tools, Veſſels of Pewter, Looking-Glaſſes, Beads, and Toys, which they exchange for Sugar, Tobacco, Snuff, Fuſtick, Braſil and other Dying Woods, raw Hides, Tallow, Train Oil of Whales, Monkeys, Parrots, and Parrokites. The Portugueſe have ſmall Veſſels that trade to Guinea with Rum, Sugar, Cotton Cloth, Beads, and bring good Returns in Gold, Ivory, and Slaves.
